Women, Never Old.
Germany Is Tired.
Mr. Firestone's Report.
Knowledge Is Inherited.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

A YOUNG MAN, 32, his grandfather perhaps the richest man in the world, marries a lady of 52, divorced wife of a well-known banker. The world is astonished because "the wife is 20 years older than the husband."

No need to be astonished. Helen of Troy must have been pretty well along "when they launched a thousand ships" on account of her face.

Ninon de L'Enclos had ardent admirers all through her life. One, very young, is said to have killed himself because she would not marry him, when she was 72. She could not, because she happened to be his mother, although he did not know it. When she told him, he killed himself.

IMPORTANT TO the whole world is yesterday's official statement by Germany that the Young Plan MUST be revised. The German government says: "We have done our utmost to meet obligations arising from a lost war. It is no longer possible. The limit of the privations we can impose on our people has been reached."

THIS NEED surprise nobody. Payments imposed on Germany at the peak of prosperity might have continued for some time, had prosperity continued. They could not continue in a world depression.

Those that "won the war" with financial and other help of this country, must make new financial arrangements. They will doubtless include diminished payments on monies borrowed from us.

HARVEY S. FIRESTONE makes automobile tires, and shows that his company for the first six months of 1931 made $2,908,553.20 as against $1,541,034 for the fiscal year ending October 1, 1930.

Manufacturers and businessmen interested in this cheerful news need not be puzzled by it. Mr. Firestone has been working harder than ever at his own business, and advertising more energetically than ever.

Produce the goods, then let the world know, through advertising, that you have them, and, like Napoleon, you can "make circumstances."

A TEACHER of biology at the British Imperial College of Science helps to kill off the silly theory that "acquired characteristics are not inherited."

The dullest scientist might know that acquired characteristics MUST be inherited. If they were not inherited, how explain the physical and mental changes in human beings and other races of animals. The mud wasp about to lay eggs finds a fat caterpillar, stings it skillfully, making it unconscious without killing it, buries it with her eggs, for the young to eat, when they hatch, months later.

Then the mother wasp dies. She never sees her young, they never see her.

WHEN THE young wasps, full grown, are ready to lay eggs, they, in turn, each find a caterpillar, sting it in the same scientific way, and bury it.

They inherit the knowledge of surgery.

Our human progress is built up of inherited characteristics and inherited knowledge. The world will last hundreds of millions of years longer. We are only 12,000 years from the late stone age.

In another two or three million years, we may be born knowing more than any man has ever known, fully equipped with knowledge as the mud wasp is born knowing how to stupify a caterpillar, or a baby salmon knowing how to find its way down to the ocean and back years later to the spot where it was hatched.

THE BRITISH "anti-slavery and aboriginal protection society" investigates so-called Russian slave lumber camps with results disappointing to those hostile to Russia. Life is not easy in the lumber camps, but as one American lumberman has testified, it is no harder in Russia than here.

The hardship is on white-collar men who suddenly find themselves working on a lumber pile, but that kind of hardship is not confined to Russia.

Those interested in slavery might consider a union carpenter with five children, able to earn $12 a day and recently getting 30 cents an hour for digging a ditch.

GEN. DAWES, back from Europe, to help his brother with the big Chicago fair, soon to open, is cheerful about conditions, and reminds you "the world does not realize that recovery from depression has begun, until it is well under way."

The reverse is true. Wall street didn't discover until October, 1929, that the bottom had dropped out, although it dropped in June that year and businessmen knew it.

'FIFI,' REWED, SAYS SHE STILL LIKES STILLMAN

Happy Bride of Son's Chum Calls Jim 'Great Fellow;' John D. Sanctioned Match.

Millions for Children

NEW YORK, June 6.—(INS.)—James A. Stillman's last gesture before sailing for Europe today was to establish a $3,000,000 trust fund for his four children. There is already a $10,000,000 trust fund in favor of the Stillman children, established by their paternal grandfather, James Stillman.

By JOSEPH A. COWAN
International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Anne Stillman McCormick, a radiant and happy bride, sat with her young husband, Fowler P. McCormick, in the porch swing of their honeymoon cottage at East Hampton, L. I., today and announced that she still loved Jim Stillman.

A reporter had asked her when the reconciliation between her and Mr. Stillman had come to an end. She replied:

"It never ended."

For a moment she was silent, her eyes following the flight of the seagulls soaring over the waves of the sun-kissed Atlantic, then continued:

"I'm very fond of Jim. I love him dearly. If I can do anything in the world for him I will do it."

Then she looked at Fowler, smiled at him tenderly and squeezed his hand.

MRS. McCORMICK HOSTILE

His mother, Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, a daughter of the senior Rockefeller, did not approve of the marriage, Anne admitted. Someone asked her why her husband's family had not attended the wedding yesterday, adding:

"Is it correct that Mrs. McCormick tried to break up the wedding?"

Anne, who has always been noted for her honest frankness, did not hesitate for a second to answer that one. With a trace of irony in her voice, she said:

"You don't think that anyone like myself would be very acceptable to the Rockefellers?"

Yet it was understood the venerable oil king, John D. Rockefeller, grandfather of young McCormick, sanctioned the marriage.

So did the bridegroom's father, Harold McCormick. He wanted to be at the wedding to bestow his blessing on the bride, but it was

Evangelist, 24, Sees Light First Time

PHILADELPHIA, June 6.—(INS.)—The Rev. Robert Fraser, 24-year-old evangelist, today saw light for the first time in his life. Mr. Fraser underwent an operation by Dr. G. H. Moore, two weeks ago. When Dr Moore removed the bandages today, the patient exclaimed he could see light.

Tomorrow Mr. Fraser and his wife will celebrate the fourth anniversary of their wedding. Dr. Moore is the man who successfully operated on Earl Musselman, Allentown youth, sightless from birth.

Ask Bids in July On Pymatuning Dam

SHARON, Pa., June 6.—Bids for the construction of the Pymatuning Dam will be advertised about July 1, according to Charles E. Ryder, chief engineer of the Department of Forests and Waters, who visited the Pymatuning Dam site with George S. Beal, chief of the bureau of dams, and R. J. Ferris, resident engineer.

Construction will take the remainder of next year, the chief engineer indicated.

Fire Threatens Reno Gambling District

RENO, Nev., June 6.—(INS.)—Reno's divorce colony and gambling world had another unprogrammed thrill today.

After a "Wild West" shooting in "Gambling Row," in which F. R. (Blackie) McCracken, veteran card dealer, was shot and killed earlier this week, fire in a grocery store today routed big crowds from the gambling houses nearby. An explosion injured five firemen.

Bethany Co-ed Plans Flight to Alaska

BETHANY, W. Va., June 6.—(AP.)—Miss Alberta Jeffreys, of Trinidad, Col., one of those to graduate from Bethany College next Tuesday, expects to pilot her own plane to Alaska to spend the summer vacation with her mother. She keeps the plane on the college campus and has been making frequent flights to Colorado to visit relatives.

WILKINS SUB SPEEDS ALONG

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS

ABOARD SUBMARINE NAUTILUS AT SEA, June 6.—(By radio from American Radio News Corp. and Radio Marine Corp. of America.)—With about 300 miles behind us, the Nautilus is rolling along in a moderate sea. She rolls very much like any other ship—slow and easy—far different from the snappy, nasty roll of the Quest, the late Sir Ernest Shackleton's boat, on which I spent 12 months at sea.

The starboard engine, under master hands, has now settled down to work. It was used today to charge batteries while the port engine propelled the boat.

Our steady run, making between eight and 10 knots, was interrupted for a few minutes about noon, while the engineers arranged the strainers for the special rich Texas lubricating oil that keeps our engines turning smothly.

ALL BUSY

All on board are still busy and will be until reaching port, but the men are now getting a little time to catch up on some sleep.

With Crilley, our master driver, I have arranged the apparatus in

Fechet and Eaker Escape Air Crash

MEXICO CITY, June 6.—(AP.)—Advices from the frontier town of Tapachula, Chiapas, today stated that Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet, chief of the American air corps, and Capt. Ira C. Eaker, Army flier, narrowly escaped death on landing there yesterday. They stopped to refuel while en route to Panama.

According to dispatches, their plane's retractable landing gear was not in readiness for the landing and when the plane came down the wheels folded up.

PLANE CRASHES ON GOLF LINKS; 1 DEAD, 1 HURT

Pilot Lands on Course After Engine Trouble, Takes Off Again and Is Wrecked.

H. P. Ludwig, of West View, a passenger, was killed, and Landis R. Byler, pilot, was seriously injured yesterday when a flivver plane from Bettis Airport crashed on the Thornburg golf course.

The plane was taking off after a successful forced landing on the golf links due to motor trouble.

It nosed over in a cross-wind and fell 150 feet.

Byler, sales manager for Curtiss Wright Flying Service of Pittsburgh, was flying to Alliance, O. to give a demonstration. Ludwig, a prospective purchaser, went along for the ride.

FORCED LANDING

Just over Crafton, at an altitude of 1,200 feet, motor trouble developed and Byler set the little ship down to a safe landing on the golf course. It was Ludwig's first forced landing. Pilot and passenger kidded each other over the incident while waiting for an emergency repair crew to come by auto from Bettis Field. The whiled away the time in conversation with the club professional, Jack Stewart, and several members.

Two emergency mechanics, David Regester and William Fea, arrived within an hour. The motor trouble was a minor fault and soon the ship was ready for the air.

Byler and his passenger climbed back into the plane and taxied across the field. The ship rose gracefully over the golf course.

Davis Will Seek Auto Death Curb

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP.)—In an effort to reduce the number of automobile fatalities, Senator James J. Davis (Rep.), Pennsylvania, said today he would introduce in the next Congress a bill calling for an educational campaign to promote safe driving.

Pointing to the loss of 230,000 lives in the last 10 years from automobile accidents, Davis said the average person does not realize the seriousness of the situation.

Flower Picker Finds Man's Body in Tree

Germany Pleads Bankruptcy And Balks on Reparations; Allies Shift Burdens to U. S.

Berlin Throws Up Hands, Declares Inability to Pay

CHAOS FEARED

Treaty With Soviet Linked in Appeal Citing Distress

By KARL H. VON WEIGAND
Universal Service Special Cable.

BERLIN, June 6.—With the dramatic declaration that "Germany is at the end of her resources" as the keynote, Finance Minister Dietrich today promulgated a far-reaching and drastic decree, an emergency measure stating that Germany has thrown up her hands in defeat as far as reparations are concerned.

What Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, former president of the Reichsbank, saw as a financial expert, and Adolf Hitler, who knows little of finance, also discerned, has finally come to pass.

So heavy are Germany's new taxes, and so ruthless the slashing of salaries in all government departments and reductions of unemployed support and war pensions, that if Chancellor Bruening had deliberately drafted the decree to give dramatic forcefulness to his mission at Chequers.

Washington to Insist Allies Pay War Debt Regardless of Germany

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—President Hoover and his cabinet advisers were gravely concerned today over the official declaration that Germany has reached the limit of her ability to pay her reparations and that the Young plan must be revised.

The United States will continue to insist that the World War debt to this government be paid regardless of Germany's ability to pay her reparations to the Allies, it was learned officially.

It was stated that the United States has no intention of changing its views that the war debts and reparations are separate and that what the Allies owe this government is in no way affected by what Germany owes the Allies.

INDORSES LOAN FOR PROSPERITY

NEW YORK, June 6.—(Universal.)—Enthusiastic indorsement of the proposal of William Randolph Hearst for a $5,000,000,000 loan by the government for the restoration of prosperity was given today by John Sullivan, president of the New York State Federation of Labor.

Sullivan said:

"Mr. Hearst offered a clean-cut, practical plan to lift the country out of its depression. The workmen know how vital the need. I intend to give the plan my heartiest indorsement at every opportunity."

Sullivan will speak at Utica on Tuesday, Syracuse on Wednesday and in Rochester on Thursday. As the head of his organization he represents more than 1,000,000 workers.

Special Session Urged To Speed Employment

TURLOCK, Cal., June 6.—(Universal.)—A move to induce President Hoover to immediately rush all national improvement projects as a step towards solving the unemployment problem, was taken by the Turlock Chamber of Commerce today.

A resolution was passed urging President Hoover to call a special session of Congress to enact legislation that would set all dormant improvement projects in motion.

Heat Relief Brought By Thunderstorm

Thundershowers brought slight relief to sweltering Pittsburgh last night after the mercury had hovered near the 80 mark for hours, but Forecaster William Brotzman said the weather would be warmer today again. He also declared there was no likelihood of rain.

A tree was struck by lightning at Center and Herron avenues and fell across light wires. No one was injured.

Guard Peggy Joyce Following Threats

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP.)—Peggy Hopkins Joyce appeared as usual at a Brooklyn Theater today, but not until Detective Cornelius Carmody, Jr., had been assigned to protect her.

Peggy called the theater manager this morning and said she had received three telephone messages threatening her during the past 24 hours.

Toscanini Family Passports Returned

MILAN, Italy, June 6.—(AP.)—Passports taken from members of Arturo Toscanini's family at the same time his own was suspended were returned today. The conductor said he would leave for Beyreuth, Germany, within a few days with his wife and their children.

King of Siam Happy Over New Spectacles

Kane Offers X-Ray Test To Prove Art Genuine

John Kane yesterday offered X-ray photographs of painting on canvas as evidence that the work is original.

Kane offered the picture "Old Saint Patrick's" for the test to prove to his fellow artists that his better work is entirely his own. The picture is one he hung in the Associated Artists' Exhibit in February.

Expressions of confidence came to the artist by mail, telephone and personal calls.

The X-ray of "Old St. Patrick's" shows that the elderly painter did the painting free hand. Places where he painted over locomotive wheels and lengthened the locomotive itself are shown under the searching light. No sign of a photograph on the canvas or of mechanical drawing can be seen.

X-rays of the picture followed disclosure Thursday by Milan Petrovits, a fellow artist, that some of Kane's pictures are painted photographs. Kane readily admitted the practice in instances when he was hurried in his work. He denied that any of his canvases were painted photographs.

DECISION NEAR

Britain, France, Italy Ready to Open Drive On American Debts

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE
Universal Service Special Cable.

PRINCES RISBOROUGH, England, June 6.—Behind the locked gates of Sixteenth Century Chequers in Buckinghamshire, residence of the British prime ministers, the Anglo-German conversations began today immediately after lunch.

Before tea time tomorrow, decisions involving European affairs and probably including American policies as well, will be reached.

The British foreign office, however, would greatly prefer use of the word "understandings" instead of decisions, because "understandings" would keep up the fiction that this meeting of Germany's chancellor and foreign minister with Britain's premier and foreign secretary is "merely a friendly talk, with no decisions possible."

GERMANY AVOIDS U. S.

From sources close to the German diplomats came today a broad outline of the attitude of Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius in approaching Premier MacDonald and Foreign Secretary Henderson and whatever other heretofore unnamed British conferees may be called in tomorrow:

1. Germany will hold aloof to any proposal that she act as agent to approach Washington with the suggestion of reopening the question of the Allied war debts; Germany does not want to be placed in the position of asking the United States to reconsider the debt question—one reason being that Germany was not of the Allies.

2. Germany would welcome the general leveling of European and American tariff barriers infinitely preferable to the desperate measure of having recourse to a moratorium under the Young plan, and will insist that there is no other alternative except the Austro-German

Urges Whipping Post For Wife Beaters

READING, Pa., June 6.—(AP.)—Hearing grievances of wives in Desertion Court here today, some of the women complaining of brutal beatings and other cruelties by their husbands, Judge H. Robert Mays declared himself in favor of re-establishing the whipping post in Pennsylvania. He said:

"We ought to have a Dempsey to go around and give you wife-beaters a good sock on the jaw every now and then. For every time you strike your wives, you ought to get a lash at the whipping post."

England Shaken By Earthquake

LONDON, June 7 (Sunday)—(AP.)—England was shaken from one end to the other at 1:30 this morning by an earthquake shock which sent thousands of persons rushing into the streets in alarm.

No damage was reported, but throughout the early hours of the morning, messages poured into London from the Midlands, from South Wales and from the northern counties telling of the quake.

Controller's Audit Shows City Paid Twice for Purchases of Supplies

IRREGULARITIES HINTED IN DATA GIVEN TO KERR

Waste Placed at $75,000: Prosecutors Will Use Administration's Figures.

Payment twice for purchases made by the Department of Supplies in 1930 is shown by the audit of Price, Waterhouse & Co. now in the hands of Controller James P. Kerr.

Other disclosures revealed by the audit made on authorization of City Council, it was reliably learned, are:

1—Unauthorized purchases of tens of thousands of dollars of supplies for libraries, playgrounds, Mayview and other branches of the city government.

2—Contracts let for city supplies where there was only one bid.

3—Contracts let for medical supplies, where bids were identical.

4—No inspectors' reports to show checkup on purchases made.

5—Thousands of dollars wasted annually because of improper storage facilities.

6—Buying more quantities than orders called for, and buying without advertising for bids as the law specifies.

7—Out of nearly $2,000,000 supplies bought in 1930, approximately $75,000 was spent for unauthorized purchases.

The report submitted to the controller is voluminous. The report itself does not go into the legality of purchases, but specifies how purchases were made where they were not in accordance with the law.

IRREGULARITIES HINTED

The report indicates irregularities, slipshod methods and carelessness.

Controller Kerr may present the report to Council tomorrow, although he would not commit himself.

The audit of Main & Co. made for the Citizens' Committee and whose findings have already resulted in a grand jury probe being started, are said to be the same on essential issues.

The audit of Main & Co., which was more of an investigation, covers 1929 as well as 1930.

Assistant District Attorney George P. F. Langfitt says that what Main & Co.'s auditors and the investigators employed by the Citizens' Committee found will form the groundwork for the grand jury investigation. These findings will assist in building up the commonwealth's case and in framing expected indictments.

FAVORITISM CHARGED

Main & Co. paid particular attention to the question of high and low bids. These discoveries, together with information obtained by investigators employed by the Citizens' Committee, are expected to show how favoritism figured in the city's purchases.

Additional subpenas will be served this week by the district attorney's office, although the actual hearing of witnesses is not expected to take place before the Grand Jury until June 15.

Some requests have been made on the part of Grand Jury witnesses to be excused. Attorney Earl F. Reed, counsel for the Citizens' Committee, who is to be one of the prosecutors, said yesterday that none will be excused except in case of mistaken identity. He said that if witnesses subpenaed desire to discuss the case in advance, so as to accommodate them as far as possible as the date of summons, he would be glad to talk to them.

decided that a quiet simple ceremony would be preferable.

'JIM' APPROVED

Jim Stillman also approved the match, the bride said. Just before he sailed for Europe last night he called her on the phone to give her his congratulations and wish her the best of luck and happiness.

Was there a financial settlement? Yes, but not on her. The children were taken care of by their father. Anne said:

"I got nothing. I wouldn't want anything. You see I love my children very much and I only wanted something for them. I don't need anything."

She was asked why she hadn't named the woman with whom Mr. Stillman had been found guilty of misconduct. She answered:

"Why should I? It wouldn't have been fair to her. She is probably a nice girl and I didn't want to smear her name."

Her former husband plans to return to Cuba after his trip to Europe and Anne may even visit him there. He asked her if she would, she said, adding:

"If I can possibly do so, I will. Stillman is a very nice fellow and we are the warmest of friends.

FRIENDSHIP INSUFFICIENT

"But it isn't enough to live with someone who is just a friend. In fact it's dumb. It is not enough if persons are real human beings.

"Jim has had some hard knocks. He has had some hard problems, but I don't believe it is up to wives to solve their husbands' problems. If that is the case, then I believe they should be just friends and not have their friendship complicated by marriage."

A bit of the breeze off the ocean disturbed her hat, a large-brim, red panama. As she adjusted it, a large, very large and brilliant solitaire flashed on the ring finger of her left hand and next to it, her new wedding ring of platinum, set with diamonds. She said:

"You see, Jim and I were not fond of the same things. I'm not fond of golf. I'm not fond of dancing. I don't like the things he likes. I like very few people.

"I love beautiful clothes and jewelry and hats and stockings."

Mrs. Stillman was gushing like a school girl.

"I have all those faults. And I love all the simple things of life."

She certainly was a picture as she sat there swinging a bit now and then.

LIVE IN CHICAGO

Under the big red hat was a gray and red beach ensemble with a jacket, a silver Navajo belt, gray stockings and sandals of red and white and blue. Fowler wore a tan sport suit with a green shirt and tie to match.

They will be out there for three weeks or so and then go to Chicago. That's where she'll make her home from now on, there and on pullman cars, she said.

For she's tremendously interested in her husband's work and she'll be with him constantly. He has the northwestern territory for the International Harvester and he has to travel a lot. She'll travel with him. She explained:

"You see, Mr. McCormick is a very busy man. He has 28 branches under him. He works very hard and I want to work with him. I love work. That is one of the reasons why I married him."

VATICAN READY TO PROTEST TO ENTIRE WORLD

Pope Pius May Use Radio In Plea as Two Notes to Italy Remain U swered.

By GUGLIELMO EMANUEL
International News Service

ROME, June 6.—A solemn protest to the world may soon be made by Pope Pius XI if the Italian government fails to answer the Vatican's series of notes regarding Fascist activity against Catholic Young Peoples' organizations, it was rumored here today.

Just what form the protest might take could not be learned. Of recent months, His Holiness has made wide use of the radio to address Catholics throughout the world.

TWO NOTES SENT

Two notes have been sent by the Vatican to the Fascist government, protesting against the dissolution of Catholic youth organizations and asking apologies and reparations for alleged attacks by Fascists against church property.

Neither of these notes has been answered. Yesterday the semi-official Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano published an inspired statement calling upon the Fascist government to furnish proof of its charge that the Azione Cattolica, nation-wide organization of Catholic youth, had participated in political affairs.

ALLUDES TO CONFLICT

His Holiness alluded to the conflict in speaking to 80 Catholics from Milan who were received in audience at the Vatican. He said:

"We are passing through a period of great sorrow, but we have the consolation of defending justice and waging a battle for liberty of conscience and the spiritual welfare of all."

Italians Broadcast Reply to Pope

ROME, June 6.—(AP.)—The Catholic Action Society was described tonight, in a radio broadcast purporting to give the Italian side of the government's controversy with Pope Pius XI, as "a strong organization taking orders from a foreign power."

The declaration was broadcast during the regular evening program of the Roman radio station. It did not purport to be official, but it was pointed out that it would undoubtedly not be broadcast unless it represented an official view.

Catholic priests were accused in the broadcast of "black ingratitude" to Fascism, which, it said, "guarantees religious liberty."

Smith and Harvard Chinese to Marry

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., June 6.—(AP.)—Ging Fan Chu, of Shanghai, China, a senior at Smith College, and Edgar Chai Tang, a Harvard University graduate student, today filed marriage intentions at the city hall. They will be married at Cambridge June 10 in the home of Prof. Arthur M. Holcombe, of the Harvard faculty.

The services will be occidental.

MELLON WILL VISIT ENGLAND

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(INS.)—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon will sail next week for England, where he will be present at the graduation of his son, Paul Mellon, from Clare College, at Cambridge, it was announced today.

Mr. and Mrs. David K. Este Bruce, the Secretary's son-in-law and daughter, who have a house on the Riviera for the summer, also will attend the graduation, after which the party will go to Southern France to remain several weeks. Mellon plans to be gone about six weeks.

Treasury officials said that the Secretary's trip will be purely a vacation for him and that he will not confer officially with representatives of foreign governments while abroad. However, it was regarded as inevitable that Mellon will be received by high European officials and that undoubtedly he will discuss world problems while away.

Paul Mellon, who graduated from Yale two years ago, has taken a post-graduate course in history and English at Cambridge. He will return to this country to start a business career in Pittsburgh. It is assumed he will take a position in his father's bank there, but definite plans have not been announced.

The exercises were directed by Mrs. Emma McDonald, Pittsburgh deputy and the entire program was devoted to the juniors.

Miss Lucille Briscoll, of Ingram was crowned queen and she was attended by Miss Loretta Snyder and Miss Anna Ullinger, pages; Miss Evelyn Vanarsdale, and Miss Gertrude Lewis, train bearers and Miss Dorothy Deer and Miss Thelma McAfee, maids of honor.

Swarm of Bees Jams Washington Traffic

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 6.—A swarm of bees caused a traffic jam in front of the Washington County Courthouse today, a big crowd gathering to watch the insects on a tree near the entrance at Main and Beau streets. None of the public officials appeared anxious to molest the bees, but a farmer came to the rescue with an offer to hive the bees.

$30,000 in Opium Found on Freighter

SAN FRANCISCO, June 6.—(INS.)—Federal authorities today were in possession of $30,000 worth of opium which they found in the cold storage room of the freighter Oregon, recent arrival from Shanghai. Three Chinese members of the crew were arrested as smugglers.

Lawyer Loses Case, Wife Wins Divorce

STEUBENVILLE, O., June 6.—Frank A. Wood lost out as a husband and lawyer when his wife, Georgia I. Wood won a divorce decree in court here today. Mrs. Wood charged her husband with extreme cruelty and drunkenness. Wood acted as his own attorney. He also was a witness.

Lithuania Ousts Envoy of Vatican

BERLIN, June 6.—(AP.)—A Telegraphen Union dispatch from Kaunas said today that Archbishop Bartholoni, Papal nuncio to Lithuania, had been expelled by an order of the foreign ministry requiring him to leave the country within 24 hours or be removed forcibly.

The archbishop left today by automobile for the German frontier, it was said.

Planes Overturned By Gale at Toledo

TOLEDO, O., June 6.—(AP.)—Half a dozen airplanes were damaged when a heavy wind and rain storm struck Toledo Airport at Lemoyne and Transcontinental Airport late today.

Six persons escaped injury when a cabin plane was overturned by wind after landing at Toledo Airport. Several light planes suffered slight damage.

An Army transport, piloted by Lieut. Reid, of Selfridge Field, and containing six enlisted men, overturned, but all escaped injury.

State Police Chiefs Meet Here July 21

Latest styles in crime prevention and apprehension of criminals will be shown at the annual convention of the Pennsylvania Chiefs of Police Association in Pittsburgh July 21, 22 and 23. Tear gas demonstrations and improved firearms will feature the exhibition, according to President L. J. O'Neill.

Tear Gas Routs Mine Strikers After Attacks in Three Districts

STATE TROOPER AMONG VICTIMS IN OUTBREAKS

Rival Unions Deadlocked as Violence Marks Walkout In District Coal Fields.

One state trooper was injured in sporadic fighting that developed in the mine strike. Tear gas was used by state troopers and Washington County deputies in three clashes.

A state policeman suffered a severe cut on the head, and a striker was injured slightly when stones were hurled in the demonstration at the Lincoln Hill mine of the Lincoln Gas Coal Company, near Washington.

1,000 IN MOB

The sheriff's office said approximately 1,000 persons had gathered near the mine, which has not been affected by the strike. State officers were summoned from nearby towns.

Deputies broke up demonstrations at the Francis mine, near Burgettstown, and the Soudan mine near Van Voorhis by using tear gas. Meanwhile organizers of the United Mine Workers and the National Miners Union were in a drive to build up their organizations.

While United States Mine Workers officials were endeavoring to have the trouble in this district adjusted through federal and state labor conciliators, members of the National Miners Union were insisting that the companies deal direct with the employes. Both labor organizations were busy holding meetings to augment their forces, the older organization, the United Mine Workers, reporting that many miners, expelled during the strike of a few years ago, having returned to the fold.

TRUCK WRECKED

One man was injured and several slightly hurt when a truck carrying nine non-union miners to the Kinloch mine, of the Valley Camp Coal Company, near New Kensington, was ditched. Paul Kaiser, 39, of the North Side, was taken to Citizens General Hospital, New Kensington. Frank Patterson, driver, said his truck had been forced off the road by strikers, but members of the State Police said he had lost control of the machine and it crashed into an embankment.

Mt. Lebanon Group To Feed Miners

Five hundred families of destitute coal miners are to be fed by the Mt. Lebanon Relief Association today at Weber Grove, Castle Shannon, when an "army dinner" of pork and beans will be served.

George Ross Fisher and E. Carl Long, township auditors, have been selected to cook the meal. Mrs. Agnes R. Joyce, Mrs. Charles Munhall and Mrs. Charles Stout are in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Joyce, commenting on the dinner, said:

"The association fed the miners and their families during the winter, and recently we have found cases that show dangerous health conditions among people because of lack of proper food.

Home Brew Beer Seized in Raids

Fourteen hundred and fifty bottles of home brew beer were reported seized yesterday by prohibition agents in two raids, one in Forbes street, near Moultrie street, and another in lower Federal street, North Side. Th.y also reported seizing a 125-gallon still, 100 gallons of whisky and two automobiles in a raid on a garage in Wylie avenue, Jeannette, and a 100-gallon still in Baldwin Township.

HOPES REVIVED FOR AMUNDSEN

By CHARMION VON WIEGAND
Universal Service.

MOSCOW, June 6. — Capt. Roald Amundsen, veteran polar explorer believed dead for three years, may be alive on Prince Rudolph I Island, north of Franz Josef Land and within 600 miles of the North Pole.

This hope was expressed today by Anthony Fiala, well known New York explorer, in a cabled message to directors of Intourist, the Russian tourist bureau, which is taking a party of travelers to Franz Josef Land this summer.

Fiala informed the bureau that he left a cache of food on Prince Rudolph I Island on his last Arctic expedition, and that Amundsen and Rene Guilbaud, who piloted Amundsen's plane when they left Tromsoe to search for survivors of the Italia disaster, could have lived from the cache up to now.

Fiala urged Prof. Vize, heading this summer's de luxe Arctic tourist expedition, to put in at Prince Rudolph I Island and serach for Amundsen. Prof. Vize commanded the Maliguin expedition which went to the relief of Gen. Umberto Nobile and the Italia party.

NEW YORK, June 6.—(Universal)—Anthony Fiala, former war correspondent, writer and expedition outfitter, today said that after a study of the route of the last flight of Capt. Roald Amundsen, he believes the Norwegian explorer and his pilot may have landed near Prince Rudolph land.

East End Robbery Suspect Arrested

Wilkinsburg police late yesterday arrested Henry Nass, 18, of Natrona way, it was alleged, as he emerged from a cellar window of the home of Thomas H. Miller, 1217 Walnut street, during the absence of the family.

In it there is the trapdoor that can be opened into the sea. In the door is a, glass spy hole through which we can look toward the bottom of the sea, even when the door is closed.

SUNLIT WATER

Beneath us today, at less than a hundred fathoms, the water was lighted by the slanting rays of the sun. It was a beautiful shade of green. But we are too busy as yet cleaning, painting and stowing to spend much time in observation.

The watch on deck, kept alternately by Capt. Dannenhower and Commander Schlossback, reported seeing several schools of blackfish and some porpoise. The weather has been clear, except for an hour or so of light fog early this morning.

The position of the Nautilus at 4 p. m., E. S. T., was latitude 41.45 north, longitude 63.43 west.

GRAF TO CARRY MAIL

BERLIN, June 6.—(INS.)—The German dirigible Graf Zeppelin will carry mail on its projected voyage to the North Pole, it was announced by the postal authorities here today. The plan is to drop the mail at the Pole, where Sir Hubert Wilkins' submarine is to pick it up.

Five Pittsburgh Girls in Class, All Get Honors

Five girls of the Pittsburgh district will be graduated Tuesday from Mt. Holyoke College, South Hadley, Mass., all with honor.

They are Miss Florence L. Feicht, of 1115 Portland street; Miss Mary McKittrick, of 2344 Perrysville avenue; Miss Adeline S. Pates, of Washington, Pa., and the Misses Helen and Jean Streeter, of Oakmont.

2 BANDITS GET $1,380 PAYROLL

When Vincent Costello, 43, Oakmont contractor, drove away from an Oakmont bank yesterday with $1,380.05 with which to pay off his employes in Monessen, he noticed an auto apparently following him.

On the McKeesport boulevard, just outside East Pittsburgh, the car swung ahead of him and blocked his progress.

Two gunmen were in the car. One remained at the wheel, the other, masked, shoved a revolver against Costello's ribs and ordered him to step from his car. He found the money in Costello's pockets, then sped away with his accomplice.

Crafton Trolley Injures Huckster

While crossing Wabash avenue, yesterday, according to a police report, Abe Mateski, 25, of 2325 Cedar avenue, a huckster, was struck by a Crafton-Ingram street car. At the South Side Hospital, physicians regarded his condition as serious.

PAROLE DOCTOR IN FAKE DOPE PRESCRIPTIONS

Physician Pleads Guilty To Violation of Narcotic Act; 2 Suspects Taken.

Dr. Isaac S. Diller, of the Highland Building, was on two-year probation today by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson.

Dr. Diller pleaded guilty to violation of the Harrison narcotic act. He was accused of issuing prescriptions for morphine to Mike Gannos and his wife, Betty Gannos, admitted drug addicts. Some of these prescriptions were in fictitious names.

Dr. Diller's arrest followed that of the Gannos. Mrs. Gannos was taken when a prescription she presented to a North Side drug store aroused the druggist's suspicion.

The physician's character witnesses included Dean Arthur Tarbell, of Carnegie Tech; the Rev. H. Boyd Edwards, pastor of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension, and John W. Chalfant, vice president of Colonial Trust Company. There was also a letter from A. K. Oliver.

LINDY STUDIES ARCTIC COURSE

NEW YORK, June 6.—(INS.)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Mrs. Lindbergh today pored over Arctic maps in preparation for their proposed summer flight from New York to Peiping, China.

The possibility existed that the Lindberghs, instead of flying westward across the United States to Alaska, and then across the Pacific to Siberia, Japan and China, may fly eastward across the Arctic to Peiping.

The daring Great Circle course to China across the top of the world, although possibly more dangerous, would be a great experiment from the standpoint of aviation. This route is approximately the shortest distance between New York and Peiping.

The speedy monoplane of the Lindberghs, in which last year they established what was then a transcontinental record, has been equipped with pontoons for ocean flying and powerful radio receiving and sending sets have been installed.

Transportation Men Elect Officials

Officers of the Traffic and Transportation Association of Pennsylvania were elected Friday night at a dinner in the Keystone Athletic Club.

Those elected to office included M. D. Perry, president; G. E. Greer, vice president; H. B. Parmelee, recording secretary; G. J. Harig, financial secretary; A. N. Von Pein, treasurer; J. T. Marko, custodian; R. W. Rowney, historian, and J. P. Andrews, G. Fred Spetz, A. C. Bringleson and C. R. McFarland, executive committeemen.

F. W. Waterman, president of the National Tube Company, has announced the following personnel changes in the sales department: J. J. Kennedy, vice president in charge of sales, succeeding J. H. Nicholson, retired; D. H. Ramsbottom, general manager of sales, succeeding Kennedy; Homer C. Gerwig and W. F. McConnor, assistant general manager of sales, and James B. Graham, from superintendent of field work to sales department in charge of field work.

2 Soldiers Given Terms in Slaying

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., June 6.—(AP.)—Two soldiers of the 26th Infantry, stationed at the Plattsburg barracks, today heard sentences of from 50 years to life imprisonment passed upon them in consequence of their having murdered a grocer in an attempted holdup here last January.

The men were Clarence Wolff, of Middlebury, Conn., and William Coughtry, of Albany, N. Y. Their victim was William Michler.

MORIN TO GET ARMY DIPLOMA

William A. M. Morin, of 219 Boquet street, will receive his diploma, a commission as second lieutenant of the regular army, at West Point commencement exercises Thursday. Morin, who is a graduate of Schenley High School, will graduate a cadet sergeant, having been appointed to that rank last June. He also has been a member of the Army polo squad since his admission to West Point and is manager of this year's team.

Morin has selected the infantry as the branch in which he desires to serve and at the end of his graduation leave next fall, the War Department will assign him to a regular regiment.

Contractor Held In Boy's Kidnaping

WOODBURY, N. J., June 6.—(INS.)—George S. Miller, 46, contractor of Pitman, was held today under $7,500 bail following his release from the Underwood Hospital here.

Miller was ordered held on charges of kidnaping, automobile theft and larceny.

The contractor attempted suicide three weeks ago when cornered in an alleged attempt to kidnap 7-year-old Paul E. Kramme, Jr., son of a garage owner of Monroeville, N. J.

Airway Beacons Now Operating

Twenty revolving beacon lights spaced at 10-mile intervals on the federal airway between Washington and Pittsburgh by the Aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce are now in operation. The Washington-Pittsburgh route, a section of the Washington-Cleveland route, is provided with four intermediate landing fields, five automatic telegraph typewriter stations and two airways weather broadcast stations.

Hollister, Lorbach Seek Longworth Post

CINCINNATI, O., June 6.—(AP.)—The first steps to select a successor to the late Nicholas Longworth, were taken today with the endorsement of State Senator David Lorbach, Democrat, and Attorney John B. Hollister, Republican, by the executive committees of their respective parties.

Selection by the committees is considered equivalent to nomination in the primaries which will be conducted in August.

Portage Girl Killed By Train at Station

PORTAGE, Pa., June 6.—Helen Kish, 17, was killed today when she was struck by a fast eastbound passenger train at the Portage station.

It is believed the girl's attention was attracted by a fire in an adjoining home and that she stepped directly into the path of the locomotive.

GREEN ASSAILS WAGE CUT TALK

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP.)—President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, said today rumors reaching him that the federation would agree to a 10 per cent wage reduction were "positively untrue." Green said:

"I don't understand how such a rumor could have been inspired. There is no justification for it whatsoever. Not only has the federation not consented to any lowering of the wage scale, but it is not sympathetically inclined toward such a move."

Reports reached here also that Secretary of Labor Doak had been in conference with labor leaders and that a downward revision of the wage scale had been agreed upon. Doak characterized the rumor as "foolish." He reiterated he favored upholding the wage scale.

Dry 105 Years, N. J. Newspaper Urges Repeal

MORRISTOWN, N. J., June 6.—(INS.) A dry editorial policy maintained for 105 years by the Jerseyman, Morristown daily newspaper, has been scuttled, an announcement yesterday proclaiming that the "Eighteenth Amendment is not, and cannot become a workable solution of the liquor problem in the United States."

In announcing its desertion of the prohibition standard, Edward S. Little, publisher of the Jerseyman, characterized the amendment as "a shattered ideal which is not of much practical use."

The editorial concluded:

"Some statesman must produce a substitute amendment that will forever bar the saloons and offer a sane and enforceable control of the traffic in thos states permitting the traffic, and protect those states which do not want it within their borders."

BOAST BRINGS RAID BY POLICE

Abraham Owens, 25, proprietor of an alleged illegal liquor establishment at 1221 Wylie avenue, who is said to have boasted to Police Lieut. John Murphy that he "can't be closed," was promised frequent raids by Police Inspector Albert Beebe.

Said Abraham, according to Murphy:

"Every place on the Hill will be closed if you close me."

Said Beebe:

"That's fine. If that's the kind of results we get, we'll see you often."

Police testified yesterday after raiding Owens they had seized 240 half-pints of moonshine, numbers tickets and punchboards.

Owens was held for court by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg on charges of violating the Snyder act and operating a lottery.

DAVIS TO MAKE 3 SCHOOL TALKS

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP.)—As a college commencement orator, Senator Davis will have few equals in the forthcoming graduation class.

The junior Senator from Pennsylvania has accepted invitations to speak at three colleges in as many days. He will open the series at Gettysburg College, Monday go to Bucknell University at Lewisburg the next day, and wind up at Lebanon Valley College at Annville, Wednesday.

In addition to those engagements, Davis will speak Thursday at the unveiling of a marker at Fort Davis at Welsh Run, near Greencastle.

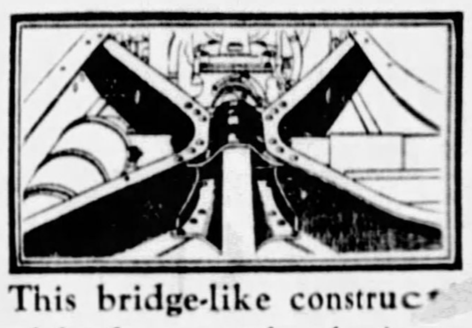
Only with Cars Costing

$500 to $1000 MORE

THE fact that Auburn has already sold over 9000 cars MORE, up to date this year than for the entire last year proves that buyers know how to measure values. In your search for the greatest value, here are a few of the questions to ask about cars costing MORE than Auburn:

Has it 127 inch wheelbase?
Has it 98 horsepower Lycoming Straight Eight motor?
Is its motor perfected thru 7 years' experience?
Has it automatic chassis lubrication?
Are the frame side rails 8" deep?
Has it four-wheel Steel-draulic brakes?
Has it four Lovejoy two-way shock absorbers?
Has it no metal-to-metal contact?
Has it roller bearing, cam and lever steering?
Has it steel running boards covered with vulcanized rubber?
Has it sloping windshield?
Has it adjustable front seats?
Has it ribbed steel cowl dash?
Is the entire body front all steel?
Is the body fully insulated?
Has it underslung front springs?
Has it "feather-touch" door handles?
Has it steering wheel adjustable to 3 positions?
Has it doors 42 inches wide?
Has it rear seat 48 inches wide?
Does it handle as easily, hold road as steadily and perform as efficiently?

Has it X-Type Frame?



The 8-98 Auburn has the strongest, most rigid frame ever built on a rear-drive car. In addition to the usual cross-members, Auburn introduces an X-member of great strength with a spread of 75 inches. This bridge-like construction greatly increases the rigidity of the frame, and makes it twist-proof. At the same time, it has permitted the body to be lowered approximately three inches.

Has it Silent-Constant Mesh?

Driving the new Auburn affords a new thrill. In addition to its lightning acceleration, due to the increased torque of the motor, gears can be instantly and easily shifted back and forth at any speed. Auburn's improved silent-constant mesh removes the possibility of human error, and positively prevents gear clashing. Second gear is constant mesh, helical; and consequently noiseless.

Come — compare — this new Auburn. If it does not sell itself you will not be asked to buy. But you will be invited to drive it.

NATIONS FIGHT AT GENEVA FOR DOPE PROFITS

Share in Spoils Instead of Suppression of Drug Evil Chief Business at Parley.

By WINIFRED BLACK
Universal Service Special Cable.

GENEVA, June 6.—Who divided the garments of the Son of Man before the sweat of agony was dry upon His face when He suffered upon the cross?

Was it the Roman soldiers, or simply a number of plain people of another race?

Whoever it was would have been quite at home at yesterday's session of the international narcotic conference of the League of Nations.

NO LIMITATION

It is no longer, as one disgusted delegate remarked, a limitation conference; it is unlimited from start to finish.

Sir Malcolm Delevigne, the English delegate,—called by the flippant "Conversation Kedgeby"—justified his nickname this morning by rising to defend and incidentally modify the English quota plan.

England, intimated Sir Malcolm, does not want to grab all the trade in dope. He said in plain language that he thought all nations should have their fair chance at the money made in narcotics.

Sir Malcolm's concession moved some of the delegates from the small but hopeful countries, who have been learning a great deal about the profits of the drug traffic at these limitation conferences, almost to tears.

GREED OF NATIONS

A foolish fellow from the Argentine rose and remarked that he had observed that it seemed to him that the dope conference was talking more about dope and selling it then it was about getting rid of even a small part of the wicked cruelty of the dope traffic.

Nobody paid attention to the Argentinian., except a few delegates who gazed at him more in sorrow than anger.

Delegate after delegate voiced determination to get a share in the dope quota for his own particular country if the heavens fell.

If the whole terrible business were not such a tragedy, it would be one of the funniest farces in the world.

Finds Advertising Aids Sales Campaign

Ludwig Hommel, of Ludwig Hommel & Co., who recently returned from New York where he attended a special meeting of distributors of the Norge electric refrigerators, said yesterday that newspaper advertising had stimulated the recent Norge sales campaign. Mr. Hommel, who is Pittsburgh distributor for Norge products, said sales had been greatly increased.

Friends Urge Sams For City Council

Friends of Earl R. Sams, constable of the Fifth Ward, have launched a movement to induce Sams to announce his candidacy as a member of City Council. Sams has been a peace officer in Pittsburgh for 20 years, first as a patrolman and far the last 10 years as constable.

COMING!

To Demonstrate Remarkable New

RUPTURE INVENTION

If you are ruptured and wear a truss, now is your opportunity to get a FREE TRIAL of the most scientifically constructed Rupture Support ever invented.

William S. Rice, Adams, N. Y., originator of the Rice (Non-Surgical) Rupture Method, is sending Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Gilligan to the Henry Hotel, 5th Ave. & Smithfield St., Pittsburgh, Pa., from Monday morning, June 8, until Saturday evening, June 13, to personally explain and demonstrate his wonderful New Rupture Invention entirely free to every man, woman and child who is ruptured.

It is absolutely guaranteed to hold any rupture, large or small, no matter where located, and afford proper protection at all times.

It's positively the most comfortable for every day wear at all kinds of work and can be worn nights and at all other times with no discomfort.

It is guaranteed not to slip out of place under any circumstances and the pressure so easily adjusts itself to all positions and movements of the body that there is no cutting or chafing.

It has proven the only properly constructed Rupture Support ever supplied for ruptured women, can be worn with or without the corset and actually improves the abdominal outlines.

It is equally valuable for ruptured children as it allows for full normal growth and development without limiting youthful activities or allowing the slightest protrusion of the rupture.

Pads are made of soft, resilient material, light, durable and comfortable. Hug the flesh snugly yet do not irritate. They are designed and shaped to fit and give pressure at the right spot so the bowel cannot possibly escape.

Hundreds of thousands in use all over the civilized world, and thousands are throwing all trusses on the scrap heap after a brief use of this scientific Rupture Support.

THE FREE TRIAL

is for every man, woman and child who is ruptured. So don't fail to call and test the exceptional merits of this guaranteed Rupture and Weakness Support. It has no equal and is being recommended by physicians and hospitals everywhere. Call any time from 9 to 12 noon, to 5 p. m., or 7 to 9 evenings. The test, remember, costs you nothing. Lady Expert attends all women. If for any reason you are unable to call, write for FREE TRIAL to

DUQUESNE 'U' GRADUATES TO HEAR SULLIVAN

271 Students to Receive Degrees From Bishop Boyle At Ceremonies Wednesday

Dr. John J. Sullivan member of the board of trustees of the Catholic University of America, will be the principal speaker at the fifty-third annual commencement exercises of Duquesne University to be held in Memorial Hall Wednesday evening at 7:45 o'clock. He will speak on the value of higher education. Degrees will be awarded 271 students.

Dr. Sullivan

The university will confer the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters on Dr. Sullivan. He is a member of the Philadelphia County Bar Association and is professor of business law in the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania. He is a graduate of St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia and the University of Pennsylvania.

He is the author of "Pennsylvania Business Law," "American Business Law," and "American Corporations."

The Rt. Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, bishop of the Pittsburgh diocese and chancellor of the university, will confer degrees on the graduates. The Very Rev. J. J. Callahan, president of Duquesne, will also speak. The program opens in the afternoon with solemn pontifical vespers in St. Paul's Cathedral.

Former Washington Banker Convicted

WASHINGTON, June 6—(INS.)—Harry V. Haynes, former bank president and long prominent in banking affairs of the capital, was in jail today awaiting sentence on charges of violating the federal banking laws. He was convicted by a jury.

He faces a maximum sentence of 70 years and a $70,000 fine for making false entries to cover up manipulations of $114,000.

WILL DISCUSS ZIONIST CHIEFS

World Zionist leadership will be discussed by Rabbi A. M. Ashinsky Tuesday evening, June 9, at the Y. M. & W. H. A. Various Zionist shades of opinion as well as personal points of view will be presented. The meeting is under the auspices of the Maccabean Zion Camp, of which Max I. Amdur is chairman.

The problem of Zionist leadership arose with the resignation of Prof. Chaim Weizmann as world president. Strong opposition to the old regime is said to be voiced by the Zionist revisionists headed by V. Zabotinsky and groups in Poland.

A decision will probably be reached at the World Zionist Congress to be held this month in Basel, Switzerland. A large American delegation will attend the congress.

Kirkland Jurors Believed Verdict Provided Death

VALPARISO, Ind., June 6—(INS.)—Acting as spokesman for 10 of the jurors who served during the second trial of Virgil Kirkland for the murder of his 18-year-old sweetheart, Arlene Draves Claude Walters today confirmed a report that the one to 10 years' sentence imposed upon the young athlete was far removed from the intentions of the jury.

Ten of the jurors, Walters declared, voted for the verdict in the belief that the judgment rendered mandatory death in the electric chair.

Walters said the jury had been confused by multiple instructions issued by Circuit Judge Grant Crumpacker and all but two talesmen were under the mistaken impression that Kirkland had been tried under two counts of the indictment, both of which carry death as the penalty.

ALLIES LAUNCH WAR DEBT DRIVE

customs union so long as the world's tariffs are against her.

FIRM STAND ON ARMS

3. Germany will insist that as long as the Versailles treaty keeps her as a fettered power paying war tribute to her conquerors, the treaty's stipulations regarding disarmament must be faithfully carried out despite France's determination to continue as the armed dictator of Europe.

Despite the foreign office's protestations that nothing can come out of the Chequers talks save a mutually helpful understanding, it becomes increasingly apparent semi-officially that Britain hopes Germany's admittedly desperate plight may by hook or crook soften Washington's heart and lead to reconsideration of the war debts.

Although Great Britain can afford to pay 5 per cent of her internal war debt should Germany resort to the moratorium, unquestionably Britain, France and Italy would use this leverage against Washington as an excuse for an all-around cessation of payments until Germany resumed the reparations burden.

LOOK TO AMERICA

When the London press says a German moratorium would be a severe blow, what the inspired editors mean is just that sort of action as outlined in the foregoing paragraph, but they do not say it. Evidence of this is found in the Manchester Guardian, which declares editorially:

"All revision of reparations must be parallel and proportional to the settlement of inter-allied debts, which eventually depends on the United States, but the American attitude on this subject is discouraging."

The London Times, also, moves along the same line of attack:

"The most that can possibly be arranged at Chequers is that other governments should be approached and the method of approach mutually determined."

HOOVER OPPOSES PARLEY

The Washington correspondent of the Times, in the same issue, significantly and at great length indicates that the Hoover administration at present is in no mood to discuss war debts in any way, shape or disguise.

An ironic smile played over the face of Chancellor Bruening today as he passed through the entrance of Chequers, above the Tudor pillars of which is inscribed:

"Abandon care, all ye who enter here."

Reparations Revision Demanded by Borah

WASHINGTON, June 6.—An immediate revision of the German reparations settlement was advocated this afternoon by Senator Borah (Rep.), of Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. He declared:

"No national ought to want to grind down into unspeakable misery the working people of Germany, and there is where the great weight of this burden is falling.

"The great middle class families are being sacrificed. That is a calamity the evil consequence of which, to say nothing of its inhumanity, no tongue can properly express.

"Nothing is to be gained by the nations to whom reparations are due and nothing is to be done by anyone in forcing Germany into a complete economic breakdown."

Vet Poisons Self, Condition Serious

George Erhardt, 32, of 1526 Garfield street, who signed a farewell note with his fingerprints and swallowed poison, police say, still was in a serious condition in Allegheny General Hospital.

The note read:

"I hereby leave my bonus and belongings to Margaret."

Margaret is a sister.

He was found by his brother-in-law, R. H. Haller, who took him to the hospital.

ASKS FOR QUICK TRIAL; GETS IT

"I want a quick trial."

It was William Flowers, 35, Negro, of Wylie avenue, speaking, when he surrendered to police yesterday charged with the murder of Samuel Kelley, 38, Negro, 2125 Wylie avenue, last August 3.

"I will put him on trial Monday."

That was Assistant District Attorney George F. P. Langfitt's reply.

For 10 months police had watched in vain for Flowers to return to his former haunts. Then he walked into the police station unannounced. He said he wanted to "get it over with."

It is related that Kelley offered to buy Flowers a drink, but became angry when Flowers ordered a half-pint. Both men are said to have gone home for their guns and to have met at Wylie and Trent avenues. Kelley is said to have beaten Flowers to the draw, but his shot missed, and Flowers sent a bullet through his abdomen.

Argentina to Lift Martial Law Soon

BUENOS AIRES, June 6.—(INS.)—Return of nation-wide tranquility was presaged here today by a government announcement that martial law will be lifted a month in advance of the national elections.

The provisional government issued a decree late last night suspending many of the special regulations implanted to maintain order following September's revolution and announced the early lifting of martial law.

BERLIN PLEADS INABILITY TO PAY WAR DEBT

Throws Up Hands, Calling Burden of Reparations Unbearable; Chaos Feared

he could not have succeeded better.

GERMANY IN TURMOIL

Something akin to consternation swept Germany this afternoon when the new decree was published. A storm of protest and unheralded political consequences threatens to break within the next few days. The decree is not intended solely for Germany, but is meant to inform the British and Americans that to reproach Germany for not economizing is impossible.

Unless all confidential information from financial and diplomatic circles is misleading, America will be the target for a barrage from Europe in the next few months for reduction of allied debts.

Directly and indirectly, Europe will inform Washington that reduction is the only solution for revision of reparations and prevention of chaos, forestalling a possible revolution in Germany such as has not been experienced since the end of the war.

RUSSIAN TREATY INVOLVED

Though Finance Minister Dietrich today declared that Germany is still sound enough to be able to take care of interest and repayment of some $2,500,000,000 American loans and credit, the London Daily Herald's statement that Germany might suspend payments is believed in some circles to have a tactical background.

It is said here, too, that Chancellor Bruening will be given to understand at Chequers that if Britain makes herself the advocate for revision of the Young Plan, it will be at a price of Germany's not renewing her political treaty with Russia which expires on June 26.

It was declared at Geneva that signing of this treaty's renewal was postponed until after the Chequers conferences at the request of Foreign Secretary Henderson, of Great Britain. In other words, reparations, Allied debts, Germany's future and Soviet Russia are more closely related than the ordinary observer believes.

LIMIT HAS BEEN REACHED

The government, in an appeal addressed to the German people, but directed to the world, publishes as the introduction to the emergency decree:

"After throwing in our last forces and reserves of all strata and classes of our people, this gives the German government the right and makes it our duty, face to face with the German people, to declare before the world that the limit of the privations which we can lay upon our people has been reached.

"The German people are now engaged in a decisive struggle, for their future. The government is conscious of its responsibility but must warn, however, against the superstition that success is attainable without sacrifice.

FAITH IN FUTURE

"If the German people have faith in their future, they must be determined, too, to throw everything into the struggle for that future.

"The Reich's government cannot believe that with the new generation, so small, and the older so weak, that united they cannot again, as in former fateful hours, demonstrate the greatness and idealism of the German people."

FALL OF SOOT 986.5 TONS TO MILE IN CITY

Woods Run District Shows Heaviest Precipitation; Downtown Section Next.

Every square mile of Pittsburgh averaged 986.5 tons of soot between July, 1929, and June, 1930, according to figures made public today by the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research.

Slightly more than 2,319 tons, or 13.1 per cent of the total deposit fell in the Woods Run district. In the downtown section 881 tons fell, while the Mt. Washington region was shown to be the "cleanest," with total deposits of 553 tons.

DECREASE SINCE 1924

Report of the research, compiled by H. B. Mellor, director of the Bureau of Smoke Regulation, City Department of Health, shows the fall of soot was 18 per cent less than in 1923-24 and 10 per cent higher than in 1912-13.

Eighteen stations were maintained throughout Pittsburgh district during the tests, samples being collected in two containers at each station, changed daily and monthly. The content of the soot was 36 per cent combustible matter, 46 per cent ash and 17 per cent iron oxide.

SMALL AMOUNT VISIBLE

Visible smoke, according to Mellor, is a small percentage of the total deposit. He added:

"This accounts for the fact that a city may be quite successful in enforcing an ordinance prohibiting dense smoke without making much reduction in the weight of total solids emitted from stacks—indeed, in some cases, the total weight may be increased."

Elimination of dust from the air, according to the report, will require the development of dust-catchers of such size and cost that their use might be required on all boilers and furnaces using any fuel other than cleaned gas.

FORMER CHUMS MARK 25 YEARS IN PRIESTHOOD

Ordained in 1906, Men Hold Silver Anniversary In Honor of Occasion.

Thirty-four years ago two school boys in St. Michael's parish left home to enter the Passionist Monastery adjoining the parish. Beginning today, these two school boy chums are celebrating the double silver jubilee of their ordination into the priesthood. They are the Rev. Conrad Eiben, pastor of St. Michael's, and the Rev. Bernard Hartman, assistant.

Since boyhood, these two men have played and worked together. Wherever one has gone, the other has followed, according to Father Hartman. They were ordained June 30, 1906.

For 13 years, Father Eiben was pastor of St. Joseph Parish, Union City, N. J., where Father Hartman was assistant. When Father Eiben became pastor of St. Michael's, Father Hartman served as pastor of St. Joseph's before coming to St. Michael's as assistant pastor. Father Hartman said yesterday:

"It always has been like that."

Father Eiben will celebrate his anniversary today by singing a solemn high mass of thanksgiving in St. Michael's Church at 10:30 a. m. Many neighboring clergymen will be present. After the services, a public banquet will be held in honor of the pastor. At 8:15 p. m., an entertainment will be given in honor of both jubilarians at the parish.

Father Hartman will celebrate his anniversary next Sunday.

Wife Dead, Jobless Man Kills Himself

NEW BRIGHTON, Pa., June 6.—Grief over the recent death of his wife and despondency because of unemployment prompted Henry O. Livingston, 52, of Block House Run, near here, to end his life today by shooting himself to death with a rifle, police say.

The body was found on the floor of his bedroom by a son, Wayne Livingston, when he returned home from work at noon today.

Court Clerk Jailed For Misuse of Funds

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., June 6.—(AP.)—Edward G. Strickler, former clerk of courts, today was sentenced to from 5 to 10 years in the Eastern Penitentiary after he had pleaded guilty to misappropriating county funds. He also was fined the amount which he confessed to have taken—$5,401.22.

Strickler was completing the last year of his second four-year term as clerk. The money taken, Strickler confessed, was from cash bail deposits and from fines collected.

CITY TO AWARD $900,000 JOBS

Public Works Director Edward G. Lang has prepared a schedule that calls for the letting before July 1 of contracts for public improvements totaling about $900,000.

Eighteen of the jobs were advertised last week with estimated costs totaling $257,000. Advertisements will be placed on June 18 for 18 more jobs estimated at $309,000, with the others to follow before the end of the month.

The extension of Mt. Washington roadway from the Liberty tunnels to Tenth street at an estimated cost of $700,000, is held up until agreement is reached with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

Lang is also working out plans for the improvement of Forward avenue at an estimated cost of $1,100,000.

Postoffice Receipts For May Decline

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(INS.)—There was a big drop in postal receipts in May as compared with those of May a year ago, the Postoffice Department announced today.

At 50 selected cities receipts declined from $31,370,304.44 in May a year ago to $27,843,801.88 in May last, a decline of 11.24 per cent, while at 50 industrial cities the decrease was 8:63 per cent.

Search for Missing Newsboy Started

Search has been started for Kenneth Maxwell Dick, 16, of Eldersville, Washington County, missing from his home since May 25. Kenneth, a former newsboy, is believed by his father, J. R. Dick, a Washington county road supervisor, to have started for the West.

Kenneth Dick

He is described as five feet, six inches in height, weighing about 130 pounds, wearing a blue silk shirt, black slipover sweater and light trousers and cap. His hair is brown, his eyes blue with a scar above the left one.

Doomed Boy Clears Second in Murder

MEDIA, Pa., June 6.—(AP.)—Declaring he would not die with a lie on his lips, Alexander Williams, 18, Negro, condemned to die for the murder of Mrs. Vida Robere, today admitted Earl Kratzer, 17, of Quakertown, had nothing to do with the slaying.

Williams was convicted of stabbing Mrs. Robere to death while he and Kratzer were inmates of the Glen Mills Reformatory last October 3. He accused Kratzer of helping him stab the woman. Williams is to be executed Monday at Rockview.

URGE INDICTED MAN BE OUSTED

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 6.—(AP.)—Petitions to oust Prosecutor Ray L. Thomas, signed by 4,428 persons, were filed today with the Mahoning County clerk of courts. The petitions were circulated by Attorney Abe Levin and Thomas Farrell.

The petitions will be presented here Monday to Judge H. W. Jewell, of Delaware, O. Thomas last week was indicted by a special grand jury on nine counts. Preliminary motions on these indictments also are to be heard next week by Judge Jewell.

Charges on which Thomas was indicted included embezzlement of public funds, intimidation of a public official, bribery, blackmail, receiving and concealing stolen property, receiving money for making appointments and destroying public records. These charges also are contained in the petitions filed today.

Urges Slayer Keep Child of Victim

STEUBENVILLE, O., June 6.—As Joseph Smith, 32, Yorkville World War veteran was sentenced to life imprisonment in the Ohio penitentiary here today, Nick Calabria, brother of Pasco Calabria, Smith's murder victim, arose and demanded the prisoner support the year old child of the victim. He held the girl, Dorea, in his arm.

Smith, drunk, on Easter entered the Calabria pool room, fatally shot the proprietor and wounded Maurice Himmell, 32, a patron. Today Smith pleaded guilty to second degree murder.

Lloyd Hamilton Files Bankruptcy Petition

LOS ANGELES, June 6.—(INS.)—Lloyd Hamilton, screen comedian, today had a voluntary petition of bankruptcy on file in Federal court here. His total assets, he claimed, consisted of household goods valued at $1,500. His liabilities, according to the petition, were $49,716, which includes $12,500 alimony due his former wife, and $18,000 income tax due the federal government.

Estates Here Get Tax Adjustments

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(INS.)—Income and estate tax adjustments announced by the Internal Revenue Bureau today included:

Estate of Mary B. Dalzell, Pittsburgh, $92,392, and estate of Lulu E. Brown, Pittsburgh, $76,023.

Speaking
WJAS—KQV

ONE OF THE NATION'S GREATEST CITIZENS, HAS SAID:—

"We stand against all Tyranny, by the few or many. We stand for the rule of the many in the interest of all of us, for the rule of the many in spirit, of courage, of common sense, of high purpose, above all in a spirit of kindly justice toward every man and woman." Theodore Roosevelt, Gentleman—Statesman—Publicist.

In addition, I say "The Greatest Good for the Greatest Number." It is still the public right to select and employ special knowledge at whatever price they can afford to give the best dental service to all classes of people at the lowest possible prices.

Pain and High Prices are feared by most people. Don't worry about either. My fixed prices and plenty of time to help solve your dental problems. Come to me daily, evenings or Sundays.

My painless methods, awake or asleep, are the safest known to medical and dental science. Some of my fixed prices as low as $5 to $17.50 for False Teeth. Great Savings as much as ½ to ⅔ on any kind of dental work. Yours for Beauty and Health, Dr. Walls, M.D. & D.D.S., Corner 5th Ave. & Market St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

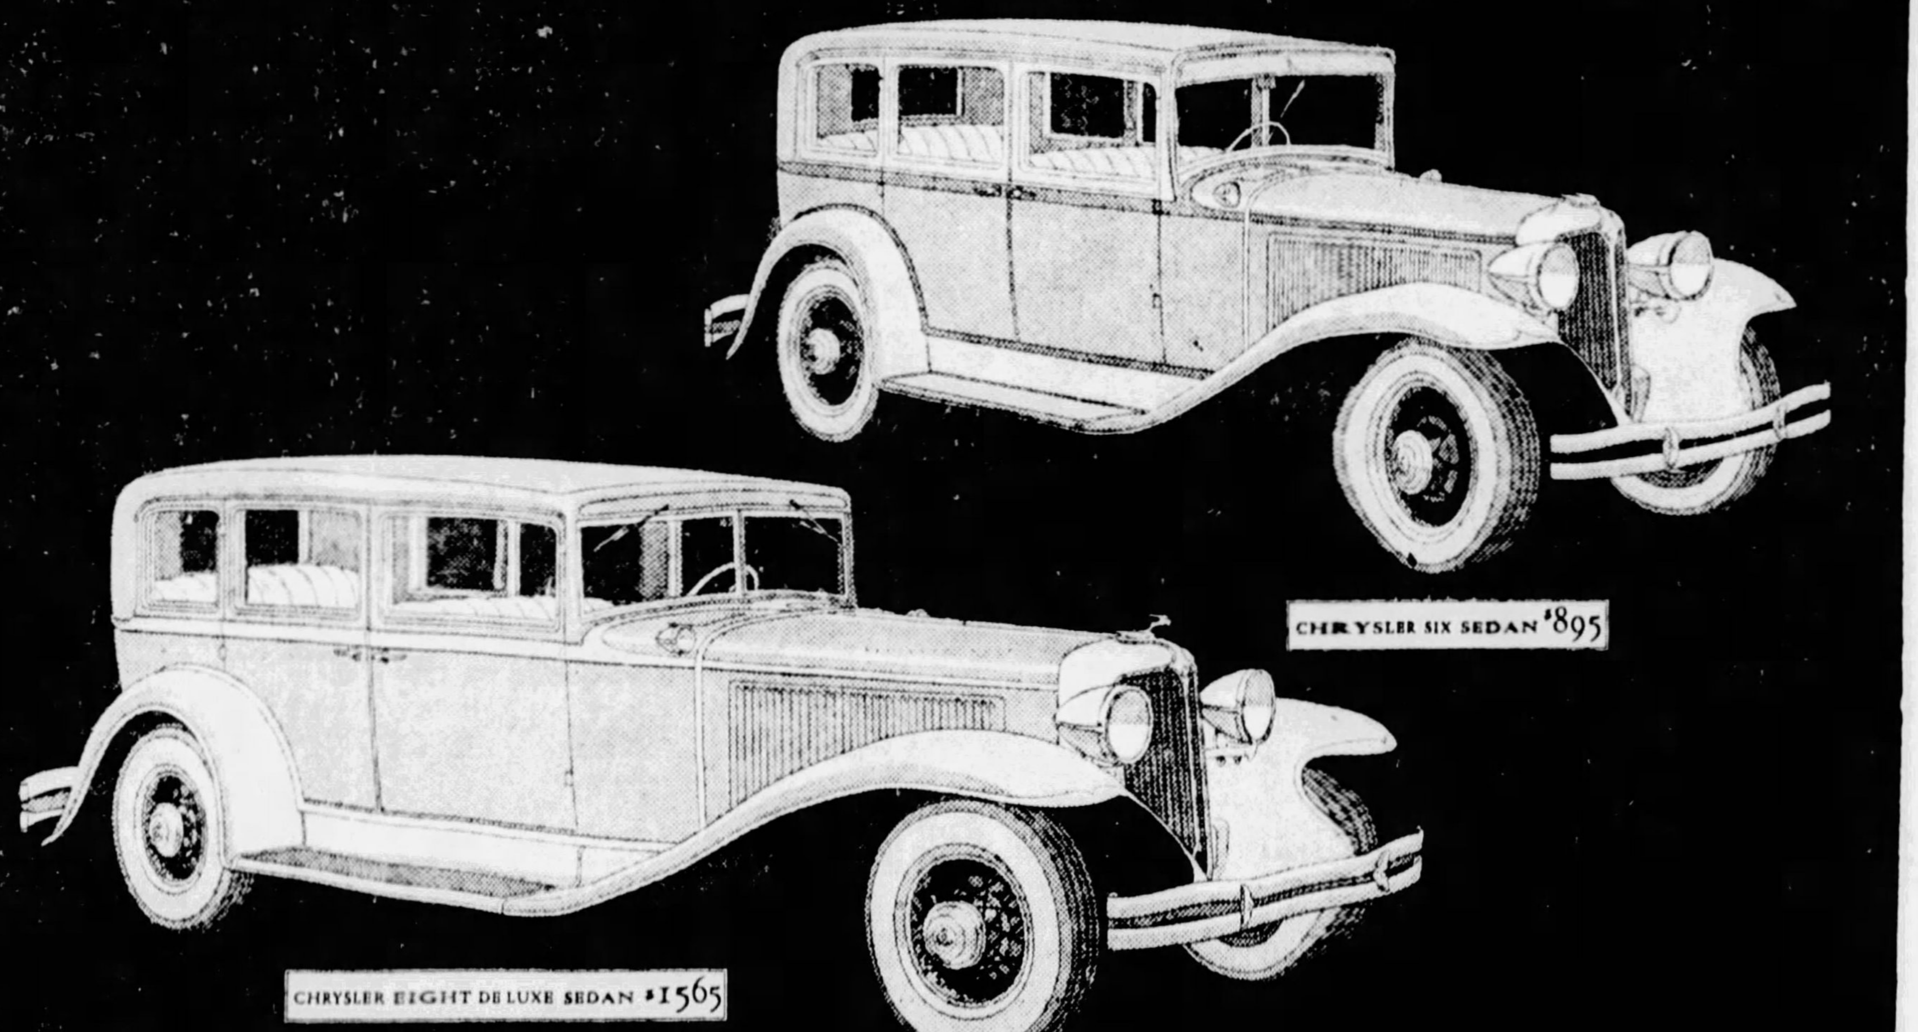
CHRYSLER
SIXES & EIGHTS



A Difference that's Fascinating

CHRYSLER engineering is quite different from other engineering—therefore Chrysler performance is quite different—brisker—more animated—smoother—more effortless to drive.

Simply drive a Chrysler—any Chrysler—and learn for yourself the convincing difference between Chrysler performance and other performance.

Drive a new Chrysler Six. A fine, big Six of 116-inch wheelbase; a staunch double-drop frame and low center of gravity; a very quiet 70-horsepower engine; safety bodies of steel; positive self-equalizing internal hydraulic brakes.

Drive a new Chrysler Eight De Luxe. A de luxe car in every particular, outside and inside. Smart divided windshield. Luxurious upholstery and appointments. A 124-inch wheelbase. Low center of gravity. Great stamina and sturdiness. A 95-horsepower engine—80 miles an hour if you want it, and always delightfully smooth.

Drive a Chrysler Imperial Eight—finest, fastest, largest Chrysler ever built. 145-inch wheelbase. 125-horsepower. Winner of twelve official A.A.A. Contest Board speed records for one to five miles.

The new De Luxe Eight and the Imperial Eight both have an exclusive Dual High transmission. TWO high gears—and you can shift from either to the other, at any car speed, without clashing. One high gear for flashing action in traffic. Another still higher gear gives faster speeds at slower engine speeds.

Drive a Chrysler—any Chrysler—and learn for yourself the better value Chrysler offers.

CHRYSLER SIX	$885 to $935
CHRYSLER "70"	$1245 to $1295
CHRYSLER EIGHT	$1495 to $1665
CHRYSLER EIGHT DE LUXE	$1525 to $1585

CHARGE COURT ERRED IN HALL SITE DECISION

Exceptions Filed to Pave Way for Appeal by Foes Of Schenley Farms Deal.

Exceptions to the decision by Judge James R. Macfarlane, denying an injunction to restrain the county from purchasing the Nicola site for the $6,000,000 Town Hall, were filed in Common Pleas Court yesterday on behalf of a score of Schenley Farms residents, the Masonic Temple, Syria Mosque and the Ruskin Apartments, complainants.

The bill alleged 41 errors by the court in its opinion, findings of fact and conclusions of law, its exclusion of certain testimony and in its refusal to accept facts contended by complainants. The exceptions are a step in preparing an appeal to the State Supreme Court and will be argued during June so that the case may be heard by the Supreme Court in September.

EXCEPTIONS FILED

The bill excepted to the court's findings that the property is adequate for a town hall, that it was selected after an investigation, that the price of $8 a square foot was not excessive, and will not create a nuisance. The bill alleged that the Keefer and Shanahan properties were not owned by the Schenley Farms Company, that no legal means were provided for acquiring the Keefer property, and that the option of the company for the Shanahan property, subsequently obtained, provided for its purchase at $6.25 a square foot, or $60,000, sold to the county at $8, or $76,800.

The court failed to find, according to the bill, that the Commissioners had no plan for a building and made no effort to obtain a plan. The bill alleged the court erred in failing to find and refusing testimony:

"To show the enormous waste which will result in the erection and operation of a town hall at such location, to-wit, the interest and sinking fund requirements would cost the taxpayers of Allegheny County approximately $500,000 a year and in addition there will be an enormous deficit in the operation of the town hall."

The court erred, according to the bill, in failing to find as a matter of law:

"That public funds, which are trust funds, will be wasted in enormous amounts due to the failure of the majority county commissioners to exercise a sound discretion based upon a knowledge of the real situation gained by a careful investigation."

The bill was signed by Attorneys Oliver K. Eaton, Ralph C. Davis and Kinnear, McCloskey and Best.

Married 50 Years, Couple to Celebrate

Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Miller, of 17 Wynoka street, Carrick, will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary June 15 in their home where they have resided since 1902. Three sons, Howard N., A. K. and James F. Miller; a daughter, Mrs. Mary E. Rockhill; six grandchildren, and Mr. Miller's brother and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Miller, and friends will join in the celebration.

Soviet Russia Bars 3 U. S. Ministers

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP.)—Soviet Russia has barred at least three clergymen from visiting that country this summer, it became known today.

Besides John Haynes Holmes, pastor of the Community Church, in New York, the Rev. Dr. David R. Williams, Unitarian minister of Rochester, N. Y., and the Rev. Dr. Doremus Scudder, Congregationalist missionary, have failed to obtain visas.

State College Plans Field Day June 11

Field day at Pennsylvania State College will be held June 11.

New varieties of vegetables and flowers will be discussed; home gardens; tools; equipment; fertilizer and green house problems; training and pruning trees; insect and disease control; growing of plants from seeds, cuttings and by budding and the culture of ornamentals will be features. There will be something of interesting importance to every visitor.

Cardinal Rouleau Funeral at Quebec

QUEBEC, June 6.—(AP.)—Funeral services were conducted at the Basilica today for Cardinal Raymond Marie Rouleau, Archbishop of Quebec, who died last Sunday. A pontificial requiem mass was chanted.

Msgr. Andrea Cassulo, Papal delegate to Canada, officiated, assisted by Msgr P. Fillion, rector of Laval University. More than 30 archbishops and bishops from all parts of the country were present.

French President To See U. S. Mayors

PARIS, June 6.—(AP.)—President Doumergue will receive America's visiting mayors Tuesday afternoon, it was announced today. On the same day the trans-Atlantic fliers, Coste and Bellonte, will give the mayors a model of their famous plane, Question Mark, made by a Paisian jeweler for presentation to President Hoover.

3,000 Paintings Lost In Fire at Munich

MUNICH, June 6.—(INS.)—Three thousand valuable paintings were destroyed today when fire swept through the "Glas Palast." The palace, internationally famous exhibition hall, burned to the ground in a few hours. Damage amounted to 1,000,000 marks. Three firemen were seriously injured.

Legion Lunch Club Meets Wednesday

The Legion Luncheon Club will meet every Wednesday noon in the Hotel Henry, according to officials of the club. All legionnaires and their friends have been invited to attend the meetings on June 10 and 17, when two jurists will speak. RUSH FIFTH AVE. WIDENING PLAN

The first step in the plan to widen Fifth avenue from Robinson street to Point Breeze will be taken tomorrow with the presentation to Council of an ordinance authorizing the widening of Fifth avenue from 60 to 78 feet and the easing of a curve between Dithridge and Bellefield streets.

The immediate improvement was requested by the officials of Mellon Institute in connection with a new building being erected in that area.

The additional width will be obtained by the acquisition of about eight feet on the north side of Fifth avenue and about 10 feet on the south side.

1 DEAD, 1 HURT IN PLANE CRASH

gaining altitude easily. At a height of about 150 feet, a sudden cross-wind lifted the right wing almost perpendicularly and in an instant the ship had nosed into the ground.

RUN TO ASSISTANCE

Golfers, caddies and mechanics ran to the fliers' assistance. The ship lay a mass of twisted wreckage on No. 5 fairway. The motor was still running, the prop threshing wildly behind the cockpit.

Byler motioned feebly. Joseph Wagman, a member of the club, saw him and told the mechanics. Fea leaned down and the injured pilot gasped instructions.

"Stop the motor—cut the switch."

Fea struggled with the broken mechanism on the dash board, but to no avail, then on sudden inspiration he reached up and jerked off the gasoline line.

Byler spoke in feeble gasps again:

"Tell . . my . . . wife."

Then he lapsed into unconsciousness.

The mechanics, aided by Wagman and others, set about to extricate the occupants of the plane. Calls were sent out for ambulances. Dr. A. F. Walsh, of Crafton, was called.

BYLER GIVEN AID

Ludwig was dead when taken out of the wreckage. Byler was given first aid by Dr. Walsh and rushed to Mercy Hospital. His injuries, according to Dr. Walsh, consisted of a broken hip, several broken ribs both ankles fractured and bruises and cuts about the body. His condition is said to be serious.

Byler, who is aged 31, is the father of several children. He lives at 486 Marion avenue, Wilkinsburg. He has been flying about a year, having demonstrated the new "flivver" plane successfully throughout this district. One of his favorite demonstrations was to land the ship in a small field to show the ease of a forced landing by the novice pilot.

He laughed at yesterday's experience and waved gaily to Mrs. Harold Broida, an acquaintance, who stood on No. 9 green as he brought the ship to a graceful landing the first time.

He clambered out of the cockpit and strolled over to her, saying:

"Let's finish this together."

NERVOUS AFTER LANDING

Ludwig was a bit nervous after the experience, but took the friendly gibes of the pilot with good nature. Soon after landing, he called his wife to tell her of the landing and to assure her that he was all right.

Ludwig, according to morgue attaches, was employed by the Carboloy Company, 704 Second avenue. He came here from Buffalo recently and had made his home in West View.

Girl Bather Drowns, Another Is Rescued

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., June 6.—(AP.)—One girl drowned and a second was rescued from the Monongahela River here today. Bertha Hiser, 15, met death when seized with cramps. The other girl was pulled from the water by an older boy and both had disappeared when a rescue squad arrived. The body of the Hiser girl was found an hour later and artificial respiration failed to revive her.

BROWN BACKS AIR, SEA MAIL

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP.)—Continued government expenditures for air and ocean ship mail lines as measures of national defense was recommended tonight by Postmaster General Brown.

At the same time he urged additional construction of government buildings to house the activities of the Postoffice Department as a means of reducing operating expenses.

Discussing the special problems of his department in an address over the radio, the Postmaster General said government aid was necessary for development of a merchant marine and an economically independent aviation industry which would keep this country abreast of other world powers.

Brown added the department is expending about $17,000,000 a year in aiding air mail lines, but that "it is not correct to regard this expenditure simply as a loss in one phase of postal operations."

Chalfant Wife Asks Divorce for Cruelty

Mrs. Henrietta Helene Saupe, 111 Shadeland avenue, Chalfant, asked a divorce from George E. Saupe, 56 Berkeley avenue, Forest Hills, in Common Pleas Court, alleging cruelty and indignities. They were married May 15, 1927, and parted April 18 last.

Owen D. Young's Daughter Engaged

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP.)—Mr. and Mrs. Owen D. Young, of Park avenue, from their home at Vanhornesbille, N. Y., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Josephine Young, to Everett Needham Case, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hebert Case, of Plainfield, N. J.

The Youngs had intended announcing the engagement some weeks ago, but delayed because of the serious illness and subsequent death of Mr. Young's mother.

Why Drug the Stomach

When Your Blood Cells Control High Blood Pressure and Most All Chronic Diseases?

The blood stream is merely the medium through which these energies float and carry on their duties. If the stream is thick and slovenly, if engorged, swollen, contracted or tortuous, is not the function hampered or arrested as the case may be? A clot in the brain—apoplexy. If a stoppage in the lungs or limps—dropsy. If in the brain—paralysis. If in the heart—sudden death. If in the eye—blindness. If too much blood—vertigo, insomnia. Repeated colds, low vitality, due to faulty blood. The germs themselves are harmless, but the toxins formed by them produce the poisoning. If an infection takes places, what suffers? The blood. In fever, where is temperature the highest? In the blood. In malaria, where is the germ? In the blood. In diphtheria, smallpox, rheumatism, gout—nearly all infections find their seat in the blood stream. Don't you believe it is time to give some special thought to these basic facts and eliminate this stomach drugging, which you know is wrong, neglecting the one only sure and effective avenue of medication—the blood stream? Lack of protein hinders cells' work. When the body cells undergo degenerative changes in Bright's Disease, arteriosclerosis and in all chronic diseases, we find distinct and demonstrable evidence of impairment in nutrition.

Thousands of patients (men and women), were successfully treated for Rheumatism, Anemia, Debility, Diabetes, Asthma, Kidney Troubles, Heart Trouble, Stomach Trouble, Swollen Glands, High Blood Pressure, Blood and Skin Diseases.

PHILA. POLICE HEAD, 6 OTHERS HURT IN BLAST

Boat Carrying Director, Officers on Trial Trip Destroyed by Explosion.

PHILADELPHIA, June 6.—(AP.)—Superintendent of Police William B. Mills was injured severely and six harbor policemen were hurt when an explosion late today wrecked the police boat William B. Mills in the Delaware River at Columbia avenue dock.

Director of Public Safety Lemuel B. Schofield was a passenger on the boat, but escaped injury.

Mills, after whom the boat, a 65-foot converted rum-runner, was named, was the most seriously injured, having suffered a broken leg, cuts, bruises and internal injuries and a possible fracture of the skull.

POLICE HURT

Others injured were Capt. George Price, William Miller, William Haeberle, Capt. Edward Corliss, John B. De Haas and Oscar Cavalier.

The explosion, which shattered the small craft to fragments, occurred as it was proceeding on a trial trip to the Penn Treaty Park at the foot of Columbia avenue.

Everyone on the vessel except Director Schofield and Assistant Superintendent of Police Joseph Le Strange, who were seated at the stern, was injured.

SAVED FROM RIVER

After the explosion the boat settled just a few yards offshore. Miller and Cavalier were seen struggling in the water, blown there by the explosion. Men from the pier put out in rowboats and pulled them in. Director Schofield said:

"Nobody knows exactly what happened. I was sitting at the back of the boat with Assistant Superintendent Le Strange, when the explosion occurred. There was a sudden roar and pieces of debris were falling all about us."

O'Donnell Chairman Of Boat Excursion

John J. O'Donnell is general chairman of the joint moonlight boat excursion to be held on the Steamer Washington June 24 by Pittsburgh Council, Knights of Columbus, and Court Pittsburgh, Catholic Daughters of America. The boat is scheduled to leave the Wood street wharf, Monongahela River, at 8:30 p. m. and return at 11:30 p. m.

22 Years Perfect Class Attendance In W. Va. Family

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., June 6.—Thomas Dunn checked off a 12-year perfect attendance and punctuality record for his school career here last night when he received his high school diploma. His sister, Emily, has only two years to go to equal her brother's record. She will be a junior in the high school next session, and has 10 years of perfect attendance and punctuality behind her.

They are children of Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Dunn.

During his high school career young Dunn worked both before and after school hours in a grocery store.

DO-X DELAYS FLIGHT TO RIO

RIO DE JANEIRO, June 6.—(AP.)—The giant German seaplane DO-X will remain at Natal, Brazil, at least three weeks for overhauling before proceeding here, it was officially announced today.

The fact that the great flying boat has been in the water constantly for two months makes a considerable amount of repairs necessary, it was said.

The DO-X will remain at Rio de Janeiro for two weeks or a month, it was said, before proceeding to the United States.

BACARDI SEES NO DRY REPEAL

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP.)—Luis J. Bacardi, whose family has been long been identified with rum making, thinks prohibition is "here to stay—and you folks in this country will have to take it or leave it."

Mr. Bacardi, of Santiago de Cuba, is in New York for a short stay. He said:

"Of course, we do manufacture rum, and would like to see the situation other than it is; but as a careful observer of things wet and dry, I am convinced the United States will remain dry.

"I believe prohibition is unpopular, but it is one of the paradoxes of the American people to dislike something, but do it anyway. In other words, although Americans would like to have their liquors back, they'll continue to vote dry and stay that way."

Socialists to Open Summer Conference

SCHOOL VISITS BY VOLUNTEER CORPS PLANNED

Protest Against New State Statute Abolishing Visitors Takes on Concrete Form.

Decrying the abolishment of Pittsburgh's Boards of School Visitors, Mrs. Arnold W. Mueller, secretary of the former Twenty-Seventh Ward visitors, today proposed the work be carried on by volunteers working with the Board of Public Education through a centralized committee.

Mrs. Mueller would have the boards continue their work of visiting and inspecting schools in their wards. They would then each month report their findings and needed improvements to a meeting of delegates from the entire city. A committee representing the combined boards would report the school's needs to the Board of Education each month as a group of private citizens, Mrs. Mueller said:

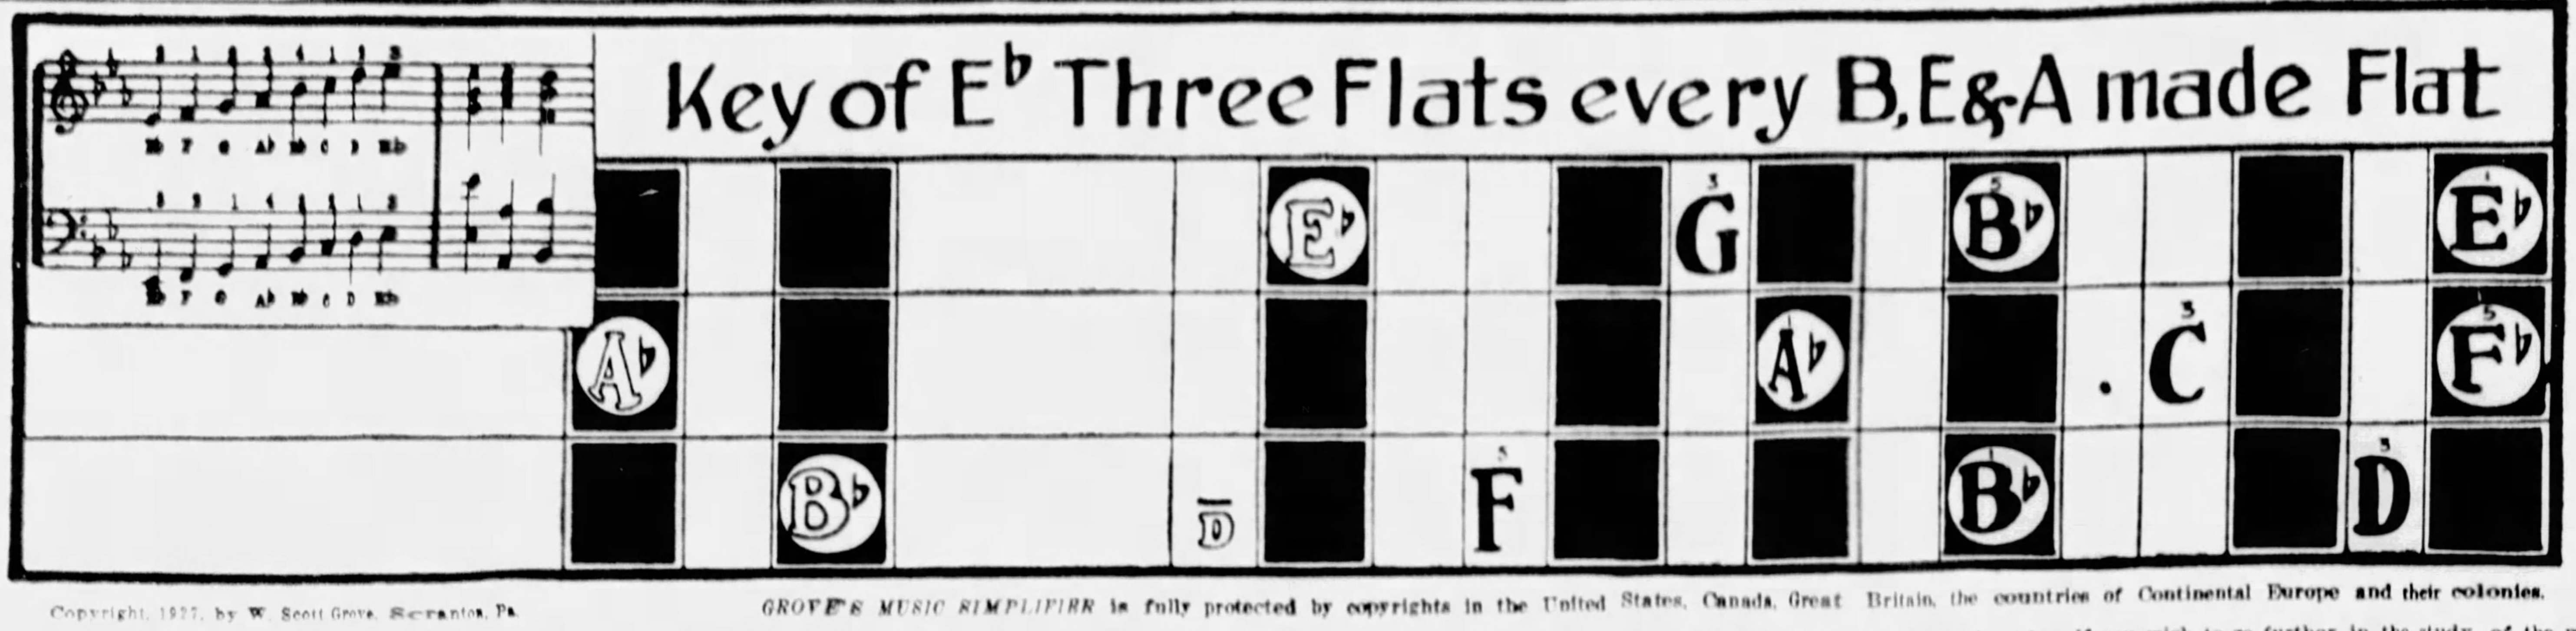
"I think there should be some link between citizens and parents and the board."

Those visitors who wish to continue the work voluntarily, Mrs. Mueller said, should write her at her home 3143 Shadeland avenue, North Side. During June, she will call a meeting to select officers and prepare for the beginning of school in September.

The Board of Public Education, Mrs. Meuller said, is a body entirely too broad and too deeply interested in the welfare of Pittsburgh's schools to interfere with such undertaking. She anticipates complete co-operation from the board in the same manner in which it co-operated with the visitors.

Boards of School Visitors were abolished in an admendment to the Mansfield omnibus bill which amended the Pennsylvania school code. The admendment introduced at the instance of Philadelphians, was incorporated into the Mansfield bill without the knowledge of the Board of Public Education or the Superintendent of Schools until it was too late to prevent passage. Governor Pinchot signed the omnibus bill Wednesday.

HOME COURSE IN PIANO PLAYING—LESSON NO. 19



Copyright, 1927, by W. Scott Grove, Scranton, Pa.

GROVE'S MUSIC SIMPLIFIER is fully protected by copyrights in the United States, Canada, Great Britain, the countries of Continental Europe and their colonies.

In the key of E Flat Major three of the notes are flatted. In this, the nineteenth lesson, the chords that are necessary to play accompaniments in that key are shown. Having committed to memory these chords you should have no difficulty in massing them into an accompaniment for any melody that is sung with a signature of three flats in the written music.

If you will compare the chords and bass notes of any particular chart in this series with the manuscript of music arranged in the same key this fact will appear. Two-thirds or even more of the chords of harmony in the manuscript, except those used for modulation, are comprised in some position of the chords arranged in these charts. That is, the chords must in use are those that you have already learned.

The chords of modulation are those that permit a change from one key to another by easy steps.

When you are playing accompaniments each chord you strike should (in general) contain the note of the melody that is sounded with the chord. You can study this out from the charts, but few persons should need more instruction on this point than the ear itself can give.

Persistence is necessary if you are to learn much from these lessons. You must play the chord over and over, first with the chart before you and then without, until you have fully committed the lesson to memory. Memorize also the names of the keys that make up the different chords. This should give you sufficient knowledge for playing accompaniments. If you wish to go further in the study of the piano or organ, learn the fingering of the scales shown in the upper left hand corner of each chart. Three chords follows the scales. Compare them with the chords shown in the main charts.

Every triad in black letter is marked 1, 3, 5. Always read it so, no matter in what vertical order the notes may be written. Note that the small letter D with a dash above it must not be played.

NEXT LESSON—Key of C Minor, which is the relative key of E Flat Major.

TEMPLARS WILL MARK BIRTHDAY

Exercises marking the tenth anniversary of the founding of Lincoln Commandery No. 91, Knights Templar, at Wilkinsburg will be held this evening. Services will be held in Calvary Lutheran Church, Wilkinsburg, of which Rev. Luther A. Krouse, a member of Lincoln Commandery, is pastor. Joining in the parade in its march to the church will be these commanderies: Pittsburgh No. 1; Allegheny No. 35; Tancred No. 43; Ascalon No. 59; Duquesne No. 72, and Chartiers No. 78. Sir Roscoe M. Dunning will be adjutant. will be adjutant.

Mr. Murrin

The celebration will be in charge of Commander Paul D. Murrin and his staff officers. Since its organization the commandery has doubled in membership.

Warless World Beyond Dreams, Scientist Says

LONDON, June 6.—(AP.)—Man's dream of a world without war can never come true, Sir Arthur Keith, the British scientist, said today in an address at Aberdeen University, where he is the rector. He declared:

"Nature keeps her human orchard healthy by pruning, and war is her pruning hook. We can not dispense with her services."

That "harsh and repugnant" assertion was wrung from him, he said, even though the future of his own dreams is a time of everlasting peace.

Even race prejudice has its place in the development of mankind, he said, and sooner or later the nations will have to consider whether it is a good thing not only to overcome such prejudices, but to eliminate them altogether.

FAMOUS GRAYS 100 YEARS OLD

Pittsburgh's famous military organization, the Duquesne Grays, will celebrate its one hundredth anniversary in conjunction with the annual reunion of the 28th Division at Mt. Gretna, August 8 and 9. Two Pittsburgh units, the 111th Infantry and the 107th Field Artillery, are planning to send 2,500 members to the reunion, according to Maj. John H. Shenkel, general chairman of the local reunion committee.

Maj. Sepp.

Maj. N. J. Sepp is commander of the 111th Infantry Veterans' Association, and Ronald L. Thompson is president of the 107th F. A. Veterans' Association. The two organizations will join in an automobile caravan from Pittsburgh to Mt. Gretna.

W. C. T. U. Seeks To Oust German Beer With Milk

TORONTO, Ont., June 6.—(AP.)—The W. C. T. U. is doing what it can, the international convention was told today by Dr. Hertha Kraus, to replace "das bier" in Germany with "die milch." He continued:

"We have opened a big restaurant without alcohol on the campus of the University of Cologne, and you can find there several hundred fraternity students in their caps and bright ribbons, sitting in the garden with a bottle of milk."

The W. C. T. U. also sends trucks to factories, carrying fruit beverages for workingmen accustomed to beer.

PARK BANQUET PLANS PUSHED

Plans are rapidly nearing completion for the Andrew T. Park testimonial banquet to be held June 18 at Motor Square Garden, according to A. W. McMillen, chairman of the executive committee.

Mr. Bair

More than 4,500 guests are expected to attend the affair, which will be under the auspices of the Minor Judiciary Association of Western Pennsylvania and the Constables' Beneficial Association of Allegheny County.

W. E. Bair, justice of the peace of Oakmont, has been named to the executive committee. National and local speakers will attend the banquet, McMillen said.

FLAG DAY FETE BY CREDIT MEN

Jurists, city and county officials and members of patriotic societies have been invited to attend the luncheon of the Retail Credit Men's Association Monday noon, June 15, in the Fort Pitt Hotel to observe Flag Day. Four addresses will be made on the subject, "The American Flag." Judge William H. McNaugher, Dr. Louis Joffe, Jenne Hayes and Judge D. Paulson Foster, of County Court, will discuss it from various viewpoints. Col. Franklin Blackstone is the chairman of the speakers' committee handling the affair. The Aeolian Singers will furnish the music.

Hibernians Plan For Park Reunion

Final arrangements for the annual Irish Day reunion at Kennywood Park will be completed this afternoon at a meeting of the Allegheny County board of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and Ladies' Auxiliary in the William Penn Hotel. James M. Kelly has been named chairman of the committee to arrange the program.

Mr. Kelly

Special equipment extra. Chevrolet truck chassis, $355 to $590. Low delivered prices and easy terms. All prices f. o. b. Flint, Mich. Chevrolet Motor Company, Detroit, Michigan.

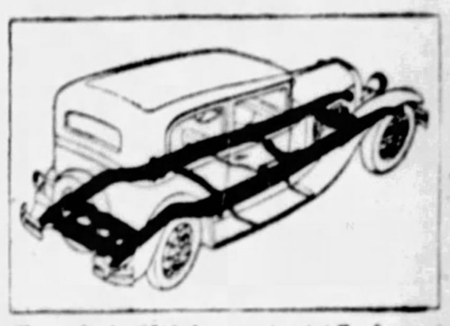
"Better than 20 miles to the gallon." "Its cost-per-mile is the lowest of any car." "Never have to add oil between crankcase changes." "Drove from Ohio to California on a repair expense of $1.05." "It just runs and runs and runs."

CHEVROLET In each day's mail, the Chevrolet Motor Company and its dealers receive comments like these from Chevrolet owners. Some of them tell about the unusual gasoline and oil mileage they are getting from the Chevrolet six-cylinder engine. Some praise the way their cars keep running, day after day, month after month, without need for adjustments or repair. Others remark about the low cost of Chevrolet standardized service. Still others pay tribute to Chevrolet's remarkably long life.

Yet more impressive even than these are the unsolicited reports that come from leading American business firms who use large fleets of Chevrolets. These firms keep daily account of the money spent on their cars in the field. Their records show that Chevrolet costs less for gasoline, oil, upkeep and service than any other automobile! And this matchless economy has been achieved with no sacrifice of smooth, quiet, powerful performance—no sacrifice of appearance or comfort—no sacrifice of dependability and long life. The reasons for this unusually economical operation are as follows:

1. Efficient Engine Design. Every feature of the Chevrolet motor that affects fuel and oil economy has been the subject of specially intensive study and development by Chevrolet engineers. The result is that 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline is a common experience with owners. And the small amount of oil used is equally impressive.

2. Modern Chassis Design. An important reason for Chevrolet's day-after-day dependability lies in its modern chassis design. For example: The long, heavy, 152-inch frame supports the body rigidly throughout its length. And Chevrolet's six-cylinder motor minimizes the wearing vibration that can lead to so many repair bills.



Chevrolet's 152" frame is rigidly braced and supports the body throughout its entire length, effectively resisting road shock

3. Excellence of Manufacture. As just one example of the extreme care used in building the Chevrolet Six—pistons are matched to within ½ ounce and individually fitted to less than three thousandths of an inch clearance. Piston pins, too, are allowed to vary in size only 3/10 of one thousandth of an inch and are individually fitted to their bushings. As a result of precision like this, thousands of Chevrolet owners have traveled 20,000 miles or more without having their motors opened for major servicing.

4. High-Quality Materials. Chevrolet rear axle gears are built of costly 3½ per cent nickel steel. Pistons are bushed with high-grade bronze. Transmission gears and springs are made of chrome-vanadium steel. Brake linings are a special high-quality moulded type. Obviously, a car made of such fine materials must cost less to maintain.

Chevrolet's long lived, grey iron pistons are built within close limits of precision, and are bushed with high-grade bronze

5. Economical Nationwide Service. Over 10,000 authorized Chevrolet service stations offer extremely low flat-rate charges on both labor and genuine parts. No charge is made for any of the parts or the labor involved in any replacements made under the terms of Chevrolet's liberal Owner's Service Policy.

If you want a car that will serve you through the years at the lowest cost, choose a Chevrolet Six. In addition to all the basic economies above—Chevrolet offers the extra advantage of one of the lowest delivered prices on the market. And this cost may be spread over a period of many months by the liberal G.M.A.C. plan.

Chevrolet's Owner's Service Policy is the most liberal ever offered in connection with a low-priced car

Read These RULES and REGULATIONS

After reading the hundreds of interesting classified ads in today's Sun-Telegraph, Alice has selected nineteen (19) unusual and outstanding classified ads. One line from each of these nineteen ads has been reproduced in the spaces to the right. Turn to the classified section, read the ads and find the 19 ads containing these lines. Each line has been selected from a regular offering and is reproduced on this page exactly as it appears in the classified section. You will find the nineteen ads among the classifications listed in the above picture.

After you have found the nineteen ads, clip them from the paper and paste them over the lines in the spaces provided elsewhere in this page. If you desire, you may paste the ads on other paper or anything else you wish. Select one classified ad yourself that you think is unusual or especially interesting and paste it in the twentieth space.

This contest is open to everyone except employes of the Sun-Telegraph and their families. Prizes will be awarded to the persons sending in the most nearly complete sets of discovered classified ads and selecting the most unusual classified ad. Neatness and originality in presenting answers will count in the final judging.

No entries will be returned, nor can the Sun-Telegraph engage in correspondence regarding the contest. In case of ties, duplicate prizes will be awarded. The decisions of the judges shall be final.

Entries must be addressed to Alice in Want Ad Land, P. O. Box 230, Pittsburgh, Pa. All entries must be in the hands of judges by midnight, Saturday, June 13th.

Winners will be announced Sunday, June 21.

WINDOWLESS HEALTH HOUSE INVENTED HERE

Engineers at Westinghouse Construct Dwelling With Artificial Ventilation.

A little house of perpetual spring, where the atmosphere is as invigorating and full of health as that of a May morning, and where mental and physical fatigue are unknown, has been constructed by research engineers of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company. It has been constructed for the purpose of testing new theories of heating homes and offices.

According to Samuel M. Kintner, vice president in charge of engineering, the reactions of numerous persons who have worked and studied in the conditioned air are so favorable that sponsors of the idea feel confident that it points the way to new methods of heating and ventilating that will be strongly conductive to greater health, comfort and sustained effort, and for an operating cost below that of present-day fuel.

The little house has been built without windows. Sunlight has been broken up into its several component elements and since the beneficial ultra violet rays of the light, which do not penetrate ordinary window glass, can be created by special bulbs attached to light sockets, Westinghouse research engineers believe the windowless house of perpetual spring is approaching the ideal of living conditions.

First of Pershing Contest Prize Winners Announced

ELIZABETH MADILL, HIGH SCHOOL WINNER

Three of Six Classes Judged; Others Next Week.

By CHARLES R. MACLOON
Contest Editor.

Judging of entries in the $3,000 cash prize contest based on Gen. Pershing's "Own Story of the World War," which appeared in the Sun-Telegraph, has so far advanced that the winners in three of the six classes are being published today. The names of the winners in the remaining three classes will appear in the Sun-Telegraph next Sunday.

Examination of the entries necessarily has been a long and serious task owing to the mass of material that had to be read. The majority of the entrants had a high score for their efforts. Yet in many instances the information required in answering the questions was entirely foreign to the question.

COMPLETE ANSWERS WIN

The glaring fault throughout the survey of all the answers submitted was in the fact that the extreme brevity of many did not adequately cover the question. It was the answers that most comprehensively related the story of the episodes or dates in question that received the highest ratings.

In making these awards the Sun-Telegraph takes particular pride in disclosing that the major cash awards in the classes for grade school children and high school pupils will be employed to develop the further education of the winners, both of whom declared without hesitation that their awards will be used to aid them in college.

OVERSEAS MAN GETS PRIZE

Dr. C. H. Kirk, of Homer City, winner of the $200 prize in the class for members of the American Legion or other organizations of World War veterans, is a member of Homer City American Legion Post. He was commissioned a lieutenant in the Medical Corps in 1917. After training at Fort Harrison, Ind., he was transferred to Ambulance Company No. 30 at Camp Shelley, Miss., as instructor. He was then transferred to the X-ray school at New York City, later to the Base Hospital at Camp Grant, Ill., and then overseas. Dr. Kirk was promoted to a captaincy in July, 1919.

DR. C. H. KIRK
LEGION GROUP WINNER

JOSEPH K. DEWAR
SECOND LEGION WINNER

Joseph K. Dewar, who won $100—the second prize in the same class—served two years in the Navy. He lives at 8 North Tremont street, Bellevue, and is in the decorating business in Pittsburgh. He is a member of the North Boroughs Post of the American Legion.

PRIZE TO PAY SCHOOLING

Lois R. Gorske, winner of the $200 prize in the class for grade school children, is 13 years of age and the daughter of Mrs. Anna Gorske. She is one of a family of six children and graduates this year from grade school into high school. She is delighted with her success and is going to save her prize money to pay her tuition in college following her graduation from high school.

Elizabeth Madill, of Jeanette, winner of the $200 prize in the high school class, has just graduated from the Jeanette High School. Through her good fortune in winning the first prize in the Pershing Contest she is going to take a course in English at Denison University, Denison, O.

Mary Daugherty, a teacher in the Pittsburgh Public Schools, was chairman of a committee of judges that examined the answers and letters submitted in the grade and high school contests. Robert H. Cochrane, county adjutant of the American Legion, and Harry S. Hall, who is active in all matters of interest to service men in Pittsburgh, judged the papers in the war veterans class.

Grade School Children

First prize, $200—Lois R. Gorske, 176 Claremore avenue, Mt. Oliver.

Second prize, $100—Elmore Jackson, 2111 Whiteside road, Pittsburgh.

SEEK TO HALT TAX LEAKS IN RICH ESTATES

Insurgents Declare U. S. Loses Millions Through Laxity in Collections.

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON.
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Aroused by leaks in the government's tax collecting machinery, the insurgent bloc today served notice it would seek enactment of legislation next fall to enforce drastically the inheritance tax against rich estates.

The bloc's interest in this subject grew out of a clash between insurgents and Attorney General Mitchell over the government's failure to collect $1,130,000 in inheritance taxes from the estate of the late Mrs. James J. Hill, widow of the railroad magnate.

LOSES MILLIONS

It was argued the government had lost and is losing millions of tax income annually as a result of this case.

The Hill case first attracted attention when Senator Schall (Rep.), of Minnesota, charged Mitchell had helped the estate to avoid payment of inheritance taxes. He said Mitchell, as Mrs. Hill's attorney, drew up a trust fund agreement, allowing her to make $14,000,000 in gifts just a few years before her death. Then, said Schall, when the government smashed this agreement in a Federal Court, getting a verdict for $1,130,000 in taxes, Mitchell—who had become solicitor general—allowed the case to go by default in an appellate court. He insisted Mitchell should have appealed the case to the Supreme Court.

Couzens revived the case by making public some correspondence with Mitchell. In it, the Michigan senator demanded to know why Mitchell had not appeared in the case before the appellate court and why the government failed to take an appeal to the Supreme Court. Mitchell ignored the inquiries.

MITCHELL'S DEFENSE

The only defense of the Attorney General, made last spring, was that a former attorney general had made the decision not to appeal the case. It was also said Mitchell had not influenced this decision.

Both Couzens and Schall have insisted it was Mitchell's ethical and legal duty to fight the Hill case doubly hard because of his conection with it in Mrs. Hill's lifetime. Both argued the case stood as a loophole by which rich men and women, anticipating death, may evade payment of federal taxes by transferring their fortunes to trust funds just before death.

The insurgents plan to discuss this case next winter. One of their spokesmen, not previously identified with it, declared he had information the Government was losing large sums each year as a result of the Hill decision. He indicated the insurgents would seek additional legislation in the next session to block this leak and prevent evasion of inheritance taxes through trust fund settlements prior to death.

Wife's Brother Held In Pastor's Slaying

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 6.—(AP.)—The Rev. W. J. Brown, a Baptist preacher who took up the ministry three years ago after an accident crippeld him, was shot to death as he and Mrs. Brown approached the front door of their home here last night.

Sam Rittenberry, Brown's brother-in-law, was held for questioning in connection with the shooting.

First Impeachment Of Gov. Horton Fails

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 6.—(AP.)—After rejecting the first of eight articles of impeachment preferred against Gov. Henry H. Horton, the Tennessee House of Representatives was in weekend adjournment today. Consideration of seven remaining charges was expected to start Tuesday.

The next to be acted upon alleges he was derelict in duty through failing to see that estimates were made of the size of surety bonds posted by officials and employes handling public funds.

Opportunity for College Men

In his last annual report, Dr. Elliott, of Harvard, strongly advised young men to get into practical life as soon as possible and not expect a college degree to insure success.

William Maxwell, Vice President, Thomas A. Edison, Inc., says: "If I were twenty-one again I would not seek a salaried position of any sort until I was twenty-five. Instead I would become a salesman or a canvasser on a commission basis, and I would do so before I left college. I can conceive of no better way to develop business backbone and stamina in a young man than to give him something to sell on a commission."

The first paragraph of the Yale Alumni Weekly, May 29, 1931, presen's a "Student S. O. S." appeal to Yale Alumni to help find employment for students this summer.

During the last thirty years thousands of men have paid their way through college in part or in whole by selling "Wear-Ever" Aluminum Specialties. Bruce Barton is one and N. Dean Jay, representative of J. P. Morgan's Bank of Paris, is another. Of course, many men associated with the Aluminum industry secured their "connections" by first "taking a job" selling "Wear-Ever" Specialties—made by the same Company which makes the "Wear-Ever" utensils sold by stores and the "Wear-Ever" Equipments used by the leading hospitals and hotels of the country.

Nowadays, the work of selling anything is hard. However, if a college man does even SOMETHING at the job of selling goods, he acquires confidence and knowledge which will help him in any work he ever will do. Moreover, it is better to earn something than to earn nothing, and it is better to acquire experience now which will be of value later than it is to acquire nothing this summer.

If you are interested in knowing what "Wear-Ever" Specialty Salesmen are actually doing today—if you are really willing to work—we suggest you write a letter to Dept. P.

Buses will take the visitors on a tour of the city at 1 p. m. A smoker and show will be given at 7:30 p. m., at Syria Mosque.

Tuesday will be one of the busiest days of the convention. The institute's annual debate and public speaking contest will be held at 7:30 p. m., in William Penn Hotel.

WINNER TO BROADCAST

The winner of the public speaking contest will leave immediately for New York, where he will broadcast at 10:15 p. m. Wednesday.

The first business session of the conference will begin at 9 a. m. Tuesday in the Davis Theater. The Rev. Clarence Edward Macartney will make the invocation, followed by greetings from James C. Chaplin, president, Colonial Trust Company, and vice president, Pittsburgh Clearing House Association.

ALEY TO SPEAK

President Ben Aley, Denver, Col., will deliver the president's annual address and Dr. Edwin Mims, head of the English department, Vanderbilt University, will speak on "Leisure and Education."

The morning session will adjourn following the nominating speeches. The afternoon will be devoted to departmental conferences.

Celebration Opens At Library School

With an address by Dr. George H. Locke, chief librarian of the Toronto public library, at a banquet in the Twentieth Century Club last night, the celebration of the thirtieth anniversary of the Carnegie Library School was opened. The conferring of the degree of Bachelor of Science in Library science upon 150 former graduates will be a feature of the celebration which will continue until Tuesday.

Now Take Off Fat a Pound a Day on a Full Stomach

Do Just These Two Simple Things —Fat Melts Away

No tiring exercise, no starvation. Instead, a full stomach and never a hungry moment! Yet fat melts away. You can easily lose from four to seven pounds weekly, see the coarse lines of fat replaced by the refined lines of slenderness—and feel better than you ever felt before in your life

WHAT YOU DO

There are just two simple things you do: Clear your system and keep it clear of waste matter, toxins and depleting poisons with ordinary JAD SALTS obtainable at any drug store. Start with a teaspoonful in a full glass of water tomorrow morning—a sparkling and pleasant drink.

Then EAT YOUR FILL—as much as your appetite can stand—of the following foods:

At breakfast eat two oranges, or the juice of two oranges. Eat also two slices of toasted whole wheat or bran bread. Eat rolled oats (with milk, not cream).

The Figure Every Fat Person Would Like to Have

At luncheon eat a good size piece of lean meat, then see how much spinach, lettuce, sauerkraut, boiled cabbage, green peas, broccoli or fresh turnips you can eat. EAT ALL YOU CAN COMFORTABLY HOLD of these foods. For dessert eat any fresh fruit; cantaloupe, berries, apples, sliced oranges, pears. Substitute turnips for potatoes. Substitute lean meats—beef, chicken, veal, white fish, trout, bass, etc.—for pork or any fat meats.

At night, have another FILL-UP-FULL meal as above. Cut down on butter and sweets—eat half of what you eat now. That's easy. For with your stomach full of other foods, you'll never notice it. Drink water or not as you like.

4 TO 7 POUNDS GONE IN WEEK

At the end of a week, you'll see the scale down four to seven pounds—according to how much overweight you are—from what you weighed the day you started. Your health, too, will be better. You'll be more active, more vigorous than perhaps for years. Your friends will soon begin to notice your increasing slenderness. You'll soon avoid the embarrassment of being called fat or bulky. And you'll do it with NEVER a HUNGRY MOMENT!

If in doubt about this safe and simple way, ASK ANY DOCTOR. Show him this article. Ask him whether or not it is safe and sure. It marks the latest findings of scientific men in the field of weight reduction. For it performs two necessary and important functions.

The JAD SALTS clear the bowels and system of the excessive toxins most overweight people have. *The change in diet—the FILLING OF THE STOMACH TO ITS LIMIT—with foods that turn to energy instead of fat, decreases the weight day by day. The salts build up your health. The change in food eases off the fat.

Start today. Clip this dietary out and save it. Get big package of ordinary JAD SALTS for the cleansing part of the method at any drug store. A large bottle costs less than a dollar.

*Note particularly—the salts are urged purely as a poison-banishing agent—not as a reducing. The change in food does the work.

SCHENLEY PARK COURSE SCENE OF TITLE PLAY

Entry List for Event to Close On June 25; Caddie Teams to Compete.

Club-Toters Within 20 Miles of Pittsburgh Eligible to Enroll in Meet.

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

Fore! Push right through, boys, and get a big earful of this!

You'd better start practicing right away, because you're next on the tee.

The fourth annual Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Western Pennsylvania amateur junior golf tournament for the William Randolph Hearst Trophy and many other prizes is to be held at the Schenley Park Municipal links on Tuesday, June 30.

For three years, the greatest of all junior amateur golf competitions in the entire United States, the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph anticipates this year's tournament will exceed by far all previous records established at the Schenley course.

PLAY AT SCHENLEY

City Council has formally set the park links aside for the day for the big affair, and the Golf Tournament Editor is building up his working staff. Only 23 days remain before the day of the tournament.

If you will take a look at the entry blank in the sports section, you will find that the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's tournament this year is open to all amateur golfers 19 years of age and under who are not attending an institution of learning above preparatory school grades, which also includes caddies who are 17 years of age and under.

You will note also that entries will not be accepted after June 25. That's important; better fill in your entry blank today and send it in immediately.

Prizes will be offered this year for club caddie teams as heretofore, and, with the permission of a club authority, all caddies at clubs within 20 miles of Pittsburgh are required to qualify in a preliminary test. Play will be directed by the caddie-master or professional in conjunction with the Golf Tournament Editor, and must be held prior to June 25.

All caddies playing in these preliminary tests either must present to the caddie-master or send to the Golf Tournament Editor a signed entry blank; caddies who do not comply with this regulation will not be considered.

EIGHT ON TEAM

As usual, eight caddies will make up a club team, the four lowest scorers competing as the club's representative team in the fight for the beautiful plaque and medals again to be awarded.

Here are the rules and regulations for this year:

1—The fourth annual Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph amateur junior golf tournament shall be

OUT—Oscar Charleston, first baseman of the Homestead Grays, thrown out at first base in the game with the Dormont club, of the City League, at Forbes Field last evening.

GIANTS BEATEN BY CUBS, 5-1

CHICAGO, June 6.—(AP.)—Bob Smith pitched the Cubs into a tie with the New York Giants for second place in the National League today, beating the Giants, 5 to 1, in a tight duel with John Berly. It was Smith's fourth straight victory.

Smith and Berly fought it out for seven innings with the New Yorker having a bit the better of the argument. Then Berly weakened and Chicago scored four runs. Grimm opened the big frame with a double and when Smith bunted, Hogan threw to third too late to catch Grimm. Cuyler's single brought in the winning runs and after two men had been retired, Stephenson's double and Moore's single, coupled with a wild throw by Critz, let two more runs cross the plate. The score:

GRAYS DEFEAT DORMONT, 10-7

The Homestead Grays defeated Dormont, of the City League, 10-7, at Forbes Field last evening in a game in which Wilbur Cooper, former Pirate southpaw pitching ace, returned to the scene of many of his diamond triumphs to oppose the Grays, but had to leave the contest because of a sore arm at the end of three innings. The score at this time was 2-0 in favor of the Grays.

Dormont staged a fine rally in the ninth that netted four runs, but Lefty Williams quelled the uprising in time.

LACKS OLD FORM

Cooper did not look like the great lefthander of his long Pirate service as he flipped the ball to the plate. He has had only scant opportunity to get into condition and there was none of the freedom of action that marked his delivery in the past. Nevertheless, he was able to fool the heavy sluggers of the Posey aggregation by working the corners with a slow curve.

Leo Carroll went to the mound for Dormont in the fourth and made a good showing. He was the victim of a lot of scratch hits and the Grays were good enough to cash in on them as they followed up with some real bingles.

CARNEGIE HITS HOMER

An outstanding star was Ollie Carnegie, centerfielder of Dormont, who tied up the battle in the third when he belted a big-league homer over the high score board in left field with Kelly on base.

The real batting star was Leftfielder Reid, of the Grays, who made five hits, including a pair of doubles.

Williams had a lot of stuff as he traveled the route, yet the Dormont batters found him for a dozen hits. Cooper and Carroll were touched for 16, four of which were made off Cooper. The score:

Phillips Drives Home Run Over Leftfield Wall for First Pirate Counter.

(PICTURE OF PIRATES' GAME ON PAGE 7, THIS PART.)

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Bleak defeat was transformed into sweet victory with sudden swiftness and in a melodramatic manner at Forbes Field yesterday as the Pirates triumphed over the fighting Phillies. The score was 3 to 2.

The fastest game of the season at the Oakland Orchard had reached the last half of the ninth and the Freebooters were trailing by a run with one out and nobody on the sacks when Paul Waner, Pie Traynor and Big Jim Elliott wrote the punch lines into the diamond play.

Big Jim appeared to be the master of all he surveyed and he is tall enough to survey the whole of the Schenley district. He retired Fred Bennett to start the inning all right, and then looked about to see that all was well among his supporters. All being well, he proceeded to pitch to Brother Paul.

GETS INFIELD SINGLE

The senior member of the Waner act is a tough hombre for any pitcher, be he a right or left hander, although the powerful southpaw on this occasion was too much for Paul, but Jim was not the master of his own destiny.

The little slugger chopped a ball back to the box. The drive was an ordinary grounder, but Big Jim was off balance, he being no dancing master at best. The rocket flickered off his glove and rolled about 15 feet toward third. The big fellow made a desperate falling effort to throw out the Pirate, but Paul was safely

INDIANS BEAT YANKEES, 7-5

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP.)—Piling up their runs in two big innings, the Cleveland Indians defeated the Yankees, 7 to 5, today for their first triumph of the year over the New Yorkers and their eleventh in the last 12 games.

Walter Miller started for Cleveland but was taken out shortly after Babe Ruth clouted his eleventh home run of the season in the third inning. Then Pinky Shoffner stopped the Yanks until the ninth.

Lou Gehrig and Lyn Lary completed the second triple play seen in the majors this season in the ninth inning. With runners on first and second, Willie Kamm lined to Gehrig, who stepped back onto first to double Vosmik, then threw to Lary at second to get Morgan. The score:

Broken Glass Wins Horse Show Feature

An enthusiastic crowd of approximately 4,000 fans, who filled the spacious stand to overflowing, saw Broken Glass, an 8-year-old bay gelding entered by Mrs. Dorothy N. Lee and ridden by Eddie Barker, win two major championships as one of the most successful horse shows ever staged by the Allegheny Country Club was brought to a close at the club's Sewickley Heights grounds yesterday afternoon.

Broken Glass, recently brought here from Virginia, and heralded as one of the best show horses in the world, scored a startling upset in winning the John C. Oliver Memorial Challenge Cup, generally regarded as the feature event of the three-day program, and he followed his "surprise" victory by annexing the first prize in the Hunter championship, a stiff competition open only to champions and runners-up in previous contests.

THREE RIDERS THROWN

Three spills, none of which resulted in serious injury to a rider, marked the Challenge Cup competition. Oliver M. Kaufmann was thrown when his mount, Lady Alasnam, refused to attempt to hurdle a high gate, the second hazard on the gruelling course. Although he fell heavily, Kaufmann refused to quit the competition, and gamely mounted Wilsonia, another horse which he and his wife had entered in the feature event.

Kaufmann was applauded liberally for his show of courage, and he showed his appreciation by riding Wilsonia to second honors in the great contest.

James O. Flower and another rider, all of whom were members of recognized hunt clubs in full dress hunting costume, were thrown when Fancy, entered by Miss Elizabeth M Bovard, refused to take the second gate, and Magic Maid, entered by Mrs. Dorothy N Lee, crashed into and shattered the third hurdle, a high gate. Flower was up on Fancy.

Imp. Rathfarnham, entered by W. C Stevenson, was awarded third prize in this major competition, and The Master, a Red Gate Farm entry, received fourth award.

Imp. Rathfarnham finished second to Broken Glass in the

Chase, Former Pitt Star, New Ursinus Coach

COLLEGEVILLE, Pa., June 6. (AP.)—Ralph Chase, former University of Pittsburgh tackle, today was appointed assistant football and track coach and head basketball coach at Ursinus College.

Chase was picked on the all-America eleven as a tackle in 1925. He starred in both football and basketball at Pitt and after graduating, coached at McKeesport High School for one year, 1926.

Upsets Mark Local Net League Openers

Wind, warm weather and individual upsets signalized initiation of 1931 Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League hostilities as 16 squads swung into torrid action in the bi-divisional loop yesterday. Despite notable absences from the lineups of several contenders, the teams displayed general improvement, competition being keener and results closer than has been the case in opening tussles for many a year.

The Section I titleholder, Edgewood, caught a tartar in Don Mattern's University Club crew on the latter's lot, and, although the Varsity stars let slide two matches by default, the champions could cop no better than a 6-3 decision. Frank McClintock, indefatigable U. C. veteran, registered brilliant reversal by outrunning Charley Lockhart, Princeton ace, in a free-hitting three-set seance, while Dick Cable, former Pitt captain, struck excellent stride to account for McCook Reed, Suburbanite mainstay, in another extra-canto affair. McClintock and Cable then paired off in doubles to down Lockhart and Len Reed for the third home triumph.

DAVE O'LOUGHLIN BEATEN

E. A. Knoche, giant Mount Lebanon slasher, shocked the natives by administering 6-1, 6-3 defeat to Dr. Dave O'Loughlin, of the crown-seeking P. A. A., host on the Lebanon rectangles. 'Twas O'Loughlin's first setback in more than a half decade of circuit tilting. Erratic forehand work told the tale—with Knoche's powerful service also proving an important factor. Brother John O'Loughlin and Ed Rhea, erstwhile Oxford University racqueter, grabbed off hero honors of the Winged Head's 5-4 victory, each breezing in ahead in both man-to-man and dual jousts. Blakeley, Lebanonian lobber, achieved similar distinction for the losers.

Out at Stanton Heights, Jack Beatty fought to 6-2, 5-7, 12-10 success over Butler, agile Westinghouse luminary, to lead an impressive Heights combine to 7-2 verdict over a dogged Electric aggregation. Carlton Hughes, rangy Stantonian, flashed brilliantly to smother the ever-consistent Clark, newly-elected Westinghouse boss, in consecutive sessions, 6-4, 6-2, in a real surprise affair.

BOBBY JONES' Lessons in Golf

By Robt. T. Jones, Jr.

American Open, Former British Open, American Amateur and Former British Amateur Champion

The other day I was thinking of Jess Sweetser and the amateur championship of 1922 at Brookline, and I found myself thinking of Jess' great mashie niblic play in that tournament. Of course that led me to consider the shut-face method of play which Jess employed, and then I remembered that I had never seen an ordinary player keep the face of the club closed without having reason for being sorry afterwards. Apparently the the closed face is only for the expert, and for him only when he is getting lots of play and has the touch.

Bobby Jones

Before we go any further we may as well see what kind of a swing is said to be of the shut-face type. This method of description has nothing in the world to do with the position of the club at address, for there are any number of players who address an iron shot with the blade hooded slightly, and yet open it quickly and fully during the back-swing. It is easiest to recognize a shut-face at the topmost position of the stroke, where the club comes up over the shoulder. When it reaches that point, if the face has been opened, the toe of the club will be pointing downward; and if the face has been closed the toe will be pointing toward the player's front. In other words, the face of the club will be looking upward in a greater or less degree.

Shoulder, Head Dip

I would say that Jess Sweetser and Leo Diegel are the two outstanding exponents of the shut-face method, and there is a marked similarity, especially in the back-swing, in their styles. Both appear to exaggerate the "drag" of the club away from the ball; that is, they seem to push back with the left arm even more definitely than the other good players we see, and there is a quite perceptible dipping of the left shoulder and head toward the ball as the swing goes back.

I have seen them both perform miracles with an iron club. When Sweetser was playing a lot and getting plenty of practice, I think he was as fine an iron player as the game has ever seen, and Diegel still, when he is right, can give the flag-sticks a terrific bombardment. I remember a game we played at Hoylake before the British open last summer, when Leo suddenly turned on the heat on the tenth hole. He played Nos. 10, 11, 12 and 13, each a stroke under par, and he didn't have to hole a single putt of any consequence. It looked as if each iron shot was certain to hit the stick, and the size of the putt which was left depended solely upon how accurately the distance had been gauged.

But the point of the thing is that Sweetser, now that he plays very little, is not nearly so fine an iron player as he was back in the years between 1922 and 1927, and Diegel appears to be a bit too likely to suffer lapses of form. With all due respect, I don't believe that anyone who employs the shut-face style can ever hope to enjoy the consistency and the duration of effectiveness that have been the lot of some of the players of the other school, and I think there is a very definite reason for this.

Simple Style Best

It seems to me that to be consistently effective a golfing style bust be rigorously simple. In other words, the first requirement of consistency is a swing which can be repeated over and over again, and this naturally can be accomplished by a human being only when every unnecessary action requiring accurate timing has been eliminated. Now, I think that this little matter of dipping the head during the back-swing is of sufficient importance to account for whatever uncertainties may be characteristic of the shut-face style of play. Every sound stroke should have an axis somewhere. There should be some definite point upon which the swing can be hung; and if the head moves, down and up, during the swing, I cannot imagine where such an axis or center can be found. I don't think it matters if the head should turn slightly from side to side during the swing, for it is still possible to select a point, say at the base of the skull, which can be taken for a center. But if the head moves down, going back, this means that the distance from the eyes of the player to the ball, and from his left shoulder to the ball, has been lessened; and it will mean also that this distance will have to be increased again by the time the club strikes the ball. This is one necessity for accurate timing which has to be accounted for in this style of play, and which does not worry the man who simply turns his body on the back-swing.

TROJANS CRUSH RIVALS; OHIO STATE SECOND

Letts Lowers Half-Mile Standard; Three Tie at New Mark in Pole Vault.

Tolan Loses 'Century' to Wykoff, But Wins 220; Keller Cops Hurdles.

CHICAGO, June 6.—(AP.)—Bronzed athletes of the University of Southern California swept into the National Collegiate Athletic Association track and field championship today with a record-smashing total of 77 1-7 points.

The Trojans victorious in all their track and field battles this season, won overwhelmingly. Their nearest rival was Ohio State, which scored 31 1-7 points, with Illinois third with 28, Iowa fourth with 26 1-7 and Indiana fifth with 26. Wisconsin was sixth with 23¾. Michigan had 20 for seventh, while Iowa State and Miami University, Oxford, O., finished in a tie for eighth with 16 points each. Forty-four of the 80 universities and colleges from 29 states scored in the table of points, others tallying as follows:

Oregon 14, Michigan State 14, Chicago 10, Denison 10, California 10, Nebraska 10, Colorado Aggies 10, Ball State Teachers, Muncie, Ind., 10, Notre Dame 9¾, Oklahoma Aggies 9, Oklahoma 8, Northwestern 8, Washington 8, Pennsylvania 8, Kansas Aggies 8, Minnesota 6 1-7, Washington State 6, Loyola (New Orleans), 6, Duke 6, Alabama Poly 5, Michigan Normal 5, North Dakota 4, Milwaukee State Teachers 2, Detroit City College 2, Hamilton 2, Tulena 1¾, Kansas 1¾, Butler 1 1-7, Marquette 1, Grinnell 1, Rice 1, Union 1, Abilene Christian 1, Western State Teachers 1-7, Kansas State Teachers 1-7.

NEW HIGH POINT RECORD

The Californians, winners of the championship a year ago, hung up a new high point record today, eclipsing the previous record of 72 points established by Leland Stanford in 1929. The Trojans scored in 11 of the 15 events, winning four championships and tying for another.

The meet resulted in two record-breaking performances despite wretched conditions. The cinder path was heavy due to an all-night rain and the field was soggy and slippery.

The Southern Californians won championships in the 100-yard dash, on the track, the shot put and discus in the field and tied for the pole vault in the air.

Frank Wykoff, the Trojan sprinter, who twice has unofficially run the 100-yard dash in :09.4, conquered his Negro rival, Eddie Tolan, of Michigan, world 100-yard dash champion, in a thrilling finish, beating him to the tape in :09.6. Wykoff's chest hit the tape only a few inches ahead of the flying Tolan, who later came back to win the 220.

THREE SHARE NEW MARK

William Graber, who cleared 14 feet ½ inch to win the pole vault in the I. C. 4-A meet last week, gained Southern California's share of a championship in this event. He tied with Tommy Warne, of Northwestern, and Verne McDermont, of Illinois, in clearing the bar at 13 feet 10 5-16 inches, to eclipse Warne's old N. C. A. A. record of 13 feet 9⅞ inches, hung up last year.

Individual honors were divided between Jack Keller, Ohio State's blond hurdler, and Bob Hall, Trojan weightman, each of whom won two championships. Keller won the 120-yard high hurdles in 14.6 seconds, and scored a lucky triumph in the 220-yard low hurdles when Ernie Payne, Trojan star, stumbled over the last barrier and sprawled face forward on the cinders. Keller beat Bill Carls, another Trojan in 23.8 seconds.

Dale Letts, University of Chicago, Big Ten half-mile champion, smashed the N. C. A. A. record for the event in the most thrilling distance race of the day. His time, 1:53.5, clipped six-tenths of a second off the record set by Orval Martin, of Purdue, a year ago. Letts ran his first quarter in 54 seconds. The summary:

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF LAST SUNDAY: THE WOEFUL WALLS OF MEKNES—The Woeful Walls f Meknes encircle what is left of the most ambitious building scheme in North African history. Mulai Ismail of Morocco, who died in 1727, conceived this tremendous structure to house his 4,000 wives and hundreds of children. Fifty thousand white captives labored for 20 years in the construction of this edifice. The mortality was very high among these white slaves of dusky masters as a result of untold privations and indignities. Their dead bodies were forthwith immured in the structure, as their taskmasters believed that such an act would render the edifice indestructible. Meknes was the idea of a single man. The city was built and erected into the capital of the Moorish Empire under the driving power of Mulai Ismail, who populated it with the overflow of his harem. By right of descendence, Meknes is the most royal city in the world. MARIE CLASHAN SPOKE A LANGUAGE SHE NEVER HEARD—The case of Marie Clashan Skotnicki of Warsaw, Poland, who overnight became possessed of the ancient Gaelic idiom, created quite a sensation in medical circles toward the middle of the nineteenth century. The child's only connection with this ancient language was the fact that she was descended on her father's side from a native of the Island of Lewis, in the Outer Hebrides, Scotland, who immigrated into Poland in the eighteenth century. For more than 110 years, the language had been completely forgotten in Marie's family. According to Prof. Seligman, there is no record of a similar manifestation of acute psychic atavism. Rosenbloom's Title Vacated, Others Warned

CHICAGO, June 6.—(AP.)—The National Boxing Association today declared Maxie Rosenbloom's light-heavyweight title vacated and warned Benny Bass, junior-lightweight titleholder, and Frankie Genaro that their crowns also would be vacated unless they entered into bonafide contracts to risk their titles soon.

Action on Rosenbloom's title was taken by mail vote of the members and a majority decided to declare the title vacated for failing to risk his crown within the specified time.

Bass was given until next July 5 and Genaro until June 26 to enter into bonafide contracts to defend their championships. If they fail to do so, mail votes will be taken to vacate their titles.

Howell Wins Golf Title

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va., June 6.—(AP.)—Billy Howell, of Richmond, won the Middle Atlantic golf championship here this afternoon, defeating Walter McCallum, of Washington.

Howell won the first four holes, halved the fifth and lost three in a row to McCallum, later winning the ninth and rounding the turn 2 up. He went 3 up on the tenth, but the eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth were halved with Howell winning the fourteenth and ending the match on the fifteenth.

Penn State Nine Defeats Temple, 2-1

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., June 6.—Penn State closed its baseball season here today with a sparkling 2-to-1 victory over Temple University. Diedrich's single in the ninth scoring Capt. Jack Livezey to win for the Lions.

Livezey, playing his last college game, hit a home run in the fourth to give State its other run, while Holderman followed suit in the sixth for the visitors' single run. The score:

Broken Glass Wins Horse Show Feature

Hunter Championship. Only two awards were made.

FORMER CHAMP BEATEN

In winning the Challenge Cup, Broken Glass defeated Windsor, a former champion, owned and ridden by Richard K. Mellon. Mellon gave a brilliant display of horsemanship, and his failure to receive an award occasioned considerable surprise.

The entries of Mrs. W. P. Roth won more awards than those of any other last-day exhibitor, and several major awards were included in her fine collection. Her Glory of Spring, a 5-year-old chestnut mare, won the three-gaited saddle horse championship; her Sweetheart On Parade won the five-gaited saddle horse championship of the show, and her Spirit of St. Louis outclassed a fine field in the park type saddle horse competition, feature event of the morning program.

The P. J. Lawler Challenge Trophy competition for hunt teams of three horses provided some exceptionally fine entertainment. Windsor, ridden by R. K. Mellon, was the "star" of the Rolling Rock Hunt team which won this event.

Weather conditions were ideal for the last day of the show, but a heavy shower sent the sportsmen and sportswomen scurrying to cover just as the judging in the final event was concluded. The summary of yesterday's awards:

Class 71—Farm horses limited to bonafide farmers in Allegheny County, to be shown in hand—Won by Colonel, br. g., 4 years, W. R. Shelvin; Ticket, rn. g., 5 years, John Baumgartel, second; Tearn, rn. g., 3 years, Charles Morrow, third; Dan, b. g., 4 years, Alvin Pfeudel, fourth.

LEO LERMOND'S MILE FEATURES N. Y. A. C. MEET

Leo Breaks 36-Year-Old Record in Annual Competition at Travers Island.

Scratching of Most of Stanford Stars Robs Event of Many Expected Thrills.

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP.)—A smashing 4:15 mile by Leo Lermond, former Boston A. A. middle distance ace, furnished the one outstanding event on the New York A. C. track and field meet program at Travers Island today. Scratches by several stars, including most of the Stanford athletes, robbed the meet of many of its expected thrills.

Lermond, running unattached, cracked a 36-year-old record when he crossed the finish line in the mile in 4 minutes 15 seconds flat, to beat Gene Venzke, of New York, by seven yards. The Travers Island record was set at 4:15 3-5 by Tommy Connors, Irish ace, in 1895.

Robert Jones, of Stanford, won the discus throw with a toss of 146 feet 11¼ inches, while Norwood G. Wright, former Cornell ace, competing for the New York A. C., tossed the hammer 150 feet 8½ inches to beat Allan Converse, of Yale, and the veteran Pat McDonald, of the N. Y. A. C. The summary:

TRACK EVENTS

220-yard run, handicap—Won by T. J. Finn, St. Michaels C. C., 12 yards; second, Charles McAllister, Prudential Life Insurance Company A. A., 12; third, James Grasser, St. Johns College, 7. Time, :21.8.

440-yard run, handicap—Won by Horace Whitney, N. Y. A. C., scratch; second, John Boreman, Manhattan College, 8 yards; third, Dan Hunter, N. Y. U., 10 yards. Time, :49 4-5.

Half-mile run, handicap (first section)—Won by Fred Lord, unattached, 16 yards; second, Phil Edwards, Olympia Club, Canada, scratch; third, Thomas Nase, N. Y. A. C., 18 yards. Time, 1:54 4-5.

Half mile run, handicap (second section)—Won by Abraham Rosenkrantz, Mellrose A. C., 10 yards; second, Howard Duffy, N. Y. A. C., 25 yards; third, Joe Mangan, Cornell, scratch. Time, 1:54 1-5.

One-mile handicap—Won by Leo Lermond, unattached, scratch; second, Gene Venzke, unattached, scratch; third, Joseph Mangan, Cornell, 10 yards. Time, 4:15. (New record.)

Two-mile run, handicap—Won by George Barker, N. Y. U., 75 yards; second, Leo Lermond, unattached, scratch; third, Harry Wertin, Mellrose A. C., 90 yards. Time, 9:25 4-5.

120-yard high hurdles, handicap—Won by Charles Felfer, N. Y. A. C., 2 yards; second, Frank Cavicchia, Prudential Insurance, 6 yards; third, Charles Paeffone, N. Y. A. C., 4 yards. Time, :16.

100-yard dash (handicap)—Won by Edward Siegel, Swedish-American A. C. (5 feet); second—Andrew Robertson, N. Y. A. C.; third—A. Lazarus, German-American A. C. Time—10 seconds.

FIELD EVENTS

Discus throw—Won by Robert Jones, Stanford, 146 feet 11¼ inches; second, Harry Schneider, N. Y. U., 141 feet 7 inches; third, Leo Sexton, N. Y. A. C., 132 feet 3 inches.

Hammer throw—Won by Norwood Wright, N. Y. A. C., 170 feet 8½ inches; second, Allan Converse, Yale, 155 feet 9½ inches; third, Pat McDonald, N. Y. A. C., 144 feet 6 inches.

Javelin throw—Won by George Werntz, Colgate, 185 feet 7½ inches; second, Alvin Ray, Stanford, 184 feet 10 inches; third, Edward Hick, New York, 176 feet 1½ inches.

Indians, White Sox Will Finish Strong, Mack Says

FONSECA, KAMM SWAP IS BOON TO BOTH CLUBS

Tribe Makes Up for Long Losing Streak With Surprising String of Wins.

Tigers and A's Handicapped By Loss of Regulars; Nats, Yankees Keep on Winning.

By CONNIE MACK

Manager of the World Champion Philadelphia Athletics and Winner of Five World Titles.

Baseball followers have not failed to notice the improvement of the Cleveland Indians and Chicago White Sox in the last 10 days.

Cleveland fans were in despair when the Indians dropped 12 games in a row and for a time it looked as if they would fall out of the percentage table altogether, but Manager Peckinpaugh finally checked the descent of his team down the chute and put them on a winning streak that on Wednesday morning had carried the Indians above the .500 mark, where they certainly belong.

Connie Mack

So in one spurt this team recovered a great deal of the ground lost in its long slump, and it now must be regarded as dangeraus to all opponents. The Cleveland team is distinctly back in the sun.

That trade in which Cleveland gave Fonseca to the White Sox for Kamm has undoubtedly helped both teams. At least, neither team has regretted the move, and I notice that both clubs credit their recent success to this deal.

The White Sox are coming fast, and when Carl Reynolds, that great player, is sound again they will do even better. Reynolds is to the White Sox what Al Simmons is to us, and the team faces a severe handicap when he is absent from the lineup.

On the other hand, Ted Lyons, a truly mighty pitcher, who was lost to the White Sox until well along in May, is once more pitching regularly and winning.

The White Sox look to me to be a club that will do better as the season goes along.

TIGERS IN SLUMP

While Cleveland and Chicago have been doing better of late, Detroit struck a severe slump because of the loss of Gehringer and Alexander. When the Eastern teams were out West, the Yanks won two out of four from the Tigers, then going fast, and we came to the Auto City and took three straight.

That put them in a slump, for they commenced to feel the loss of Gehringer, timely hitter and master keystone tender, and later when big Dale Alexander, the first baseman, was added to the list of cripples, it is little wonder that the Tigers continued to lose. This team will start winning again as soon as it can put its regular lineup on the field.

As for the three teams higher up, the Senators and Yankees are keeping comparatively close to the Athletics. Both of these pennant contenders are winning steadily.

After the Athletics had finished their successful six-game series with New York, their triumphant march was halted by the Red Sox in Boston, when they split a four-game series with us.

Incidentally, in the successful march of the Athletics through opponents during the month of May, they lost only four games and, singularly enough, it was this Boston team that beat us three times out of the four, the Yankees scoring the other victory. Our victories in May numbered 23, of which 15 were scored on the road.

RED SOX PRAISED

So Shando Collins and his Red Sox must get full credit for not letting us make a runaway of the pennant.

Athletic luck turned somewhat in the final game of last Sunday's doubleheader in Boston, for we lost the services of both Mickey Cochrane, our matchless catcher, and Joe Boley, our dependable shortstop, in that game. Both contracted charleyhorses and must rest.

As Third Baseman Jimmy Dykes had already been out since the series in Detroit with a spike wound that is slow to heal, that meant we were deprived of the services of three regulars.

Such heavy losses of regulars, of course, has done us no good, although Eric McNair at third, Dib Williams at short, and John Heving and Joe Palmisano behind the bat have played splendidly for us while the regulars have been out.

We are now having our first long stay at Shibe Park, and there is nothing to alarm us, if we play our game every day.

MISS ORCUTT STARS IN GOLF EVENT ABROAD

U. S. Representative in British Women's Tourney Meets Qualifying Test.

Maureen Near Lead With 82 For First Round; Tommy Armour Homeward Bound.

PORTMARNOCK, Ireland, June 6.—(AP.)—Enid Wilson, English woman's champion, today led the field at the end of the first qualifying round of the British women's golf championship with a 75. Maureen Orcutt, of Englewood, N. J., finished third with 82.

A thunderstorm, breaking over the course soon after Miss Wilson had finished, wrecked many hopes and sent scores mounting into the nineties.

Miss Orcutt

Vanda Morgan was second with an 80 and Molly Gourlay had an 83 for fourth place.

Sixty-four players will qualify in the 36 holes played today and Monday for the match play which will continue through next Friday.

Diana Fishwick, the defending champion, was one of those who went around in the wind and rain. She required 87 strokes, placing her in a tie with four others for eighth place.

Mrs. Mark Steel, of Los Angeles, who filed a post entry, withdrew from the tourney after completing her first qualifying round.

ARMOUR HOMEWARD BOUND

LONDON, June 6.—(AP.)—Tommy Armour, British open golf champion, left London today for Southampton and the United States, hoping to win the United States open golf for a double.

"It's great to be the British champion," Tommy said. "It has been by greatest ambition to win the old cup, and now I have succeeded I am going after the American open. What a double, eh?"

Bert Hodson, former Welsh champion, today was invited to join the British Ryder Cup team, completing the list of eight players and two alternates, and Arthur Havers, who played well in the open, was given a place on the team when Herbert Jolly withdrew from the squad because of the poor form he has shown recently.

GUNN DEFEATED IN SEMI-FINAL AT WILMINGTON

Watts Bows to McIntyre, 3 and 2, and Conqueror Goes on to Annex Title.

Oakmont Country Club Star Never Up in Match With Rolling Green Rival.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 6.—Watts Gunn, of the Oakmont Country Club, Pittsburgh, failed to survive the semi-final round in the Wilmington Country Club's invitation golf tournament here today and passed out of the picture when Bill (Buddy) McIntire, of the Rolling Green Golf Club, beat him, 3 and 2.

McIntire then plunged into the final round and brushed aside F. B. Craven, of Port Washington, 2 and 1, to win the title. Craven defeated C. W. Baker, of Wilmington, in his semi-final round, 3 and 2.

McIntire, who represents the Spring Haven Club as well as Rolling Green in local golf, made his journey out in 38 strokes, while Gunn required 41.

Gunn was never up on McIntire during the entire bout, as Buddy won the first hole when Gunn was out of bounds for a 6. They halved the second in par 3's, Gunn made a birdie 4 on the third to even the match, but McIntire responded with a birdie 3 on the short fourth to go into the lead again.

Gunn was safe with a par 4 to even again on the fifth, but missed his 4 and lagged behind on the sixth.

After they halved the seventh in par 5's, McIntire sailed ahead and took two holes in a row to make the turn 3 up, increasing it to 4 on the tenth green.

The eleventh was halved in par 4's, the twelfth Gunn captured with a birdie 2, but Bud came swinging back with his par on the thirteenth to lead by 4 up again.

Gunn made a fine gesture of taking the fourteenth with a regulation 5 and the fifteenth with a 4, but McIntire's birdie 3 on the sixteenth ended the match and gave him the round, 3 and 2. The cards:

Deadline Draws Near on Player Trades in Majors

JAMES J. LONG Sport Comment

Time Expires June 15.
Deal-Making Difficult.
Cut Squads Same Day.
Twenty Grand's Test.
Fitz Rated Greatest.
Sprinting Records.

WEEK MAY BRING BASEBALL DICKERS

IF THERE IS to be any further trading or selling of players among the major league baseball clubs before the conclusion of the pennant races that have almost completed their second month, the greater part of it will develop this week.

For the deadline is only eight days off. The bars will go up one week from tomorrow against trafficking of that nature, and clubs having deals in mind rarely wait until the last minute to put them through. Generally they get under the wire within a day or two to spare.

UNDER BASEBALL LAW a player cannot be transferred from one big league club to another between midnight of June 15 and the close of the season, except by the waiver route. After June 15 no player can be shifted until waivers have been asked and every club in the league has been thus given the privilege of claiming him.

The only trades possible after that date, therefore, are waiver exchanges, such as the Pirates and Phillies put through on August 8, last year, in the Fred Brickell-Denny Southern swap. Each club asks waivers on its man and the other claims him. A front-rank player, of course, could not run the gauntlet. Every club would claim him.

CONSEQUENTLY, THE WAIVER provision after June 15 acts as a ban on the trading or selling of first-class athletes beyond that date. It prevents a rich club from buying a pennant by purchasing valuable timber in the latter part of the season from a friendly club that is out of the race.

So any trades or sales that are planned must be consummated within the next eight days. After that, no club can acquire any new talent except by waiver claims or from the minor leagues.

WHETHER ANY SWAPS of importance will develop is another question. A club may be willing to part with a certain player, or eager to obtain a certain other pastimer, but that doesn't assure that it will be able to swing a deal. Perhaps nobody will consent to pay an acceptable price in playing material for the man placed on the market, and perhaps the price demanded in similar material for the player desired will be higher than the club seeking him can afford to pay. It takes two to make a trade, and a dozen attempted dickers usually fail against every one that goes through.

EVEN IN THE last eight days open for trading, therefore, it is by no means certain that anything important will materialize. That some attempts will be made is assured, however, and there is at least an outside chance of shifts that will change two or more lineups.

Needless to say, the Pittsburgh club is among those looking around for new strength. Jewel Ens would like to negotiate for a pitcher or an infielder with a punch, but so far he hasn't found anybody willing to talk business on a fifty-fifty basis.

ON THE SAME day that closes the trading season the rule restricting each major league club to 25 players will go into force. At other times each club may carry as many as 40 athletes, but from June 15 to August 31 the limit is 25.

That means some cutting down by the majority of the 16 clubs. The Pirates have 10 pitchers, four catchers, seven infielders and six outfielders, a total of 27, so that Ens will have to drop at least two, and more if he wants to make room for the taking on of any new players who may be discarded by other clubs.

THE HARDEST TEST of all for Twenty Grand, and the one that will determine whether or not Mrs. Payne Whitney's great colt is to go right on through to the 3-year-old championship of 1931, is just ahead. Next Saturday will bring the race of races on the American turf, the Belmont Stakes at Belmont Park in New York, a gruelling grind of a mile and a half, or a quarter of a mile longer than the Kentucky Derby, and in which the winner of the Wood Memorial and the Derby will meet the classiest field to which he has yet been opposed.

JAMESTOWN LOOMS AS the most formidable rival of Twenty Grand in this rich event, which is likely to be worth at least $65,000 to the winner. As a 2-year-old in 1930, Jamestown won six races and finished second once, in seven starts, and stands out as the chief obstacle in Twenty Grand's path to the 3-year-old championship.

Beating Jamestown threatens to be a tough job, but in view of the easy manner in which Twenty Grand won the Derby and the amazing time he made without being hard pressed, it will not be surprising if the Whitney horse gets away with it, provided the track is dry. That extra quarter of a mile is likely to help him, as the longer the route the better he runs.

JACK JOHNSON NAMES Bob Fitzsimmons as the greatest fighter of all time, and the majority of veteran boxing followers probably concur in the selection. As a combination of fighter, boxer, puncher and ring general Ruby Robert stands out in history pretty much alone.

As to the hardest punch he ever received himself, Johnson says it was delivered by Joe Choynski, former Pittsburgher, when the latter knocked him out in the third round of their fight in 1903.

MANY SPORTS FOLLOWERS have been puzzled from time to time at reading in reports of amateur track activities references to the recognized world sprinting record of 9.5 seconds for 100 yards, held by Eddie Tolan. They ask how Tolan's mark can be a world record when it is generally known that Frank Wykoff twice last year did the century in 9 2-5 seconds, or one-tenth of a second faster than the time of the University of Michigan's Negro star. The explanation is that no amateur athletic record, no matter when or where made, can become an official world mark until it has been accepted and approved by the International Amateur Federation, the governing body of amateur athletics throughout the world.

THE FEDERATION MEETS only every two years. It met in Amsterdam in 1928 during the Olympic Games there, and last year it held its biennial convention in Berlin on May 19 and 20. Tolan had made his 9.5 before those dates and the mark was approved, but Wykoff's 9 2-5 was not made until after the Federation adjourned.

Tolan's 9.5 is still the recognized world record, therefore, because the Federation has not met since Wykoff sliced a tenth of a second off that mark. A similar case is that of Eric Krenz and Paul Jessup in the discus throw. Jessup has broken Krenz's record since the last meeting of the Federation, but Krenz's mark is still carried on the books. The records of Wykoff and Jessup, and any others that may be made this year, will not become world marks until the Federation meets again during the Olympic Games of 1932 in Los Angeles.

NATS DEFEAT CHISOX, 7 TO 3

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP.)—The Senators knocked Caraway, Chicago's hurler, out of the box today to win, 7 to 3, and keep step with the league-leading Philadelphia Athletics.

Carl Fischer, Washington's young southpaw, held Chicago to eight hits, winning his second game this week and seventh for the season.

Caraway gave way to Frazier in the third inning after Washington had scored three runs on singles by Harris, Kuehl and Fischer and a walk by Bluege. Frazier held the Senators for three innings, but they got one more in the eighth inning off Braxton, who succeeded him.

Fischer allowed the Sox two runs in the first inning, but held them scoreless thereafter except for one in the seventh. The score:

RALLY GIVES REDS 6-5 WIN

CINCINNATI, June 6.—(AP.)—The eighth-place Reds ran their winning streak to four games for the first time this season when they put on a three-run ninth-inning rally today to defeat Boston, 6 to 5.

In the ninth Heathcote, first up, pinch hit for Kolp and doubled. Crabtree tripled, scoring him and knocked Socks Seibold from the box. Roettger doubled off Cantwell, scoring Crabtree. Roettger took third on a wild pitch and Stripp walked. Frankhouse relieving Cantwell. Hendrick was purposely passed, filling the bases. Roettger was out at the plate on Roush's roller to Maguire, but Cuccinello singled, driving in Stripp with the winning run. The score:

Streeter Pitches No-Hit Contest

Sam Streeter, pitching star of the Crawford Giants Negro team, turned in a no-hit performance over the nine-inning route against the Book Shoe team, of the City League, at Ammon Field yesterday, winning 3-0. He walked three batters and struck out eight.

The Giants touched Jacoby, on the mound for Book, for nine hits, but were able to score only in the first and eighth innings. The score:

Ninth-Inning Rally Wins for Corsairs

on the bases with a highly important run.

Capt. Traynor, of the home forces, lost little time in delivering the most significant drive of the stirring battle. Traynor blasted Jim for a line triple to left center. The spirited third sacker realized the import of getting himself to third base with that all-important run and he literally tore up the ground as he beat the ball to the three-quarter post. In another moment Comorosky clouted to Brickell in deep center. Brick had no chance whatever to stop Pie as the winning run was recorded.

All of this took place in a couple of minutes, the entire game being reeled off in one hour and 22 minutes.

Something like 6,000 fans sat in on a great slab duel featuring Big Jim and Remy Kremer, the clever Frenchman, whose fine slab deeds of the past few weeks have been bringing him little but good write-ups, and you cannot trade in good press notices for ham and eggs, if you are so put.

REAL MOUND DUEL

Kremer's full-distance performance was delightful. He held the hard-hitting Quakers to eight hits, and any time you do that you either are a front-rank sharpshooter or the supporting cast is doing a big job behind you. Well, Kremer really had some fine support yesterday, but on the other hand, there were times when he rose to great heights. Take the eighth round, for example. Dick Bartell opened this inning with a double to left and Kremer had to face three great hitters in Klein, Arlett and Whitney, but he made each and every one hoist an infield fly. That is pitching, ladies and gentlemen.

Moreover, the Phillies scored what many thought was the winning run in the seventh after Ben Sankey's high throw put Hurst on base with none out. Two singles followed and the first baseman went over the plate to put the Quakers out in front at this late moment.

Eddie Phillips gave the contest its first marker in the second when he drove a great homer over the left field wall. This was the only tally until the fifth, when Hurst put the Quakers on an even footing with the home team. Don started the fifth with a single, moved ahead on an out and scored on Davis' hit.

The fans had a big reception for Dick Bartell and the fighting shortstop did not disappoint. He was in his typical mood of hustle and in every way looked the part of a star shortstop.

PLAY EXHIBITION TODAY

Today is an off-day in the Pirates' schedule, but most of the regulars, aside from the pitchers, will play in an exhibition game at Alliance, O. The Phillies series will be continued tomorrow and Tuesday and the Giants make their first appearance of the year here on Wednesday.

RED SOX TOP BROWNS, 9 TO 8

BOSTON, June 6.—(AP.)—The Red Sox opened a series with the St. Louis Browns today with a 9-to-8 victory, by piling up eight runs in the last four innings.

Coffman was knocked out of the box in the sixth when the Sox scored three runs. Kinsley replaced him and was hit hard.

Goslin scored four runs and made two singles and a triple. Rothrock was the Red Sox big stick. He drove in two runs, scored two more and made three hits, including a double. The score:

Cards Beat Robins, 8-6

ST. LOUIS, June 6.—(AP.)—The Cardinals edged out the Brooklyn Robins, 8 to 6, today in a game which featured home runs. The victory in the series opener increased the Cardinals' margin of leadership in the National League race to 4½ games, the biggest lead they have held all season.

Paul Derringer, recruit right-hander, was credited with his fifth victory of the season as the Cards won out in the eighth inning after a Brooklyn uprising, which included Ernie Lombardi's pinch homer, had brought four runs and a tie score. Chick Hafey and Gus Mancuso hit earlier homers for St. Louis. The score:

MACKS SWAMP TIGERS, 11 TO 5

PHILADELPHIA, June 6.—(AP.)—The World Champion Athletics smothered the Detroit Tigers, 11 to 5, in the first appearance of the Bengals here this season. Fifteen thousand witnessed the explosion of the Mack bat pile. Thirteen hits sprouted out of the Athletic bats with the return of Jimmy Dykes and Mickey Cochrane to the regular lineup.

Walberg weakened after his mates had gained a wide lead with seven runs in the fifth inning. The Tigers crashed the portsider for three tallies in the seventh and George Earnshow was summoned to finish the game. The score:

and Dick Creighton met stiff opposition in upper and lower divisions, respectively. College Hill entertained the senior troupe and annexed 7-2 success, with Bob Lampus and his Bellevue contingent making excellent league debut to overwhelm the secondary Hilltop squad, 8-1, on the Mt. Washington courts.

Charley Lyon's West Penn Power huskies spilled the dope spectacularly in Section II by dint of 5-4 noseout of the crack Westinghouse Seconds in the East Pittsburgh enclosure. The Electricians bagged second wheel laurels in handy fashion a year ago and had been reckoned odds-on favorite to trim the Powerites in the inaugural debate.

VETERANS EXTENDED

Meanwhile, at College avenue, Howard Moore's tusslers repulsed the youthful Rockwood group, 7-2, although not before such clever youngsters as Ackerman, Hatch and Greer had offered plenty of pretty tennis in the face of the experienced East End opposition. Capt. Dixon, of the visitors, likewise starred, singles and doubles wins ripping from his accomplished racquet.

Sam Keller and his driving Duquesne Librarians rounded out the program of the day by snaring a 5-4 win over John Ferrick's Washington Heights performers on the Hill rectangles. The home lads' consistency came quite close, indeed, to offsetting the superior pace of the Library warriors, with both combines exhibiting prospect of nifty milling in future frays. The summary:

Under official A. A. A. supervision, a strictly stock Willys Six Roadster sweeps dramatically to five amazing new speed records for American stock cars in its class—one mile, flying start, 50.925 seconds, average 70.692 miles an hour; standing start, 61.56 seconds, average 58.479 miles an hour; one kilo, flying start, 32.225 seconds, average 69.416 miles an hour; standing start, 42.17 seconds, average 53.045 miles an hour; one mile, flying start, second gear, 66.90 seconds, average 53.812 miles an hour. The gear ratio used in these record breaking runs was 4.6 to 1. These records continue the long string of remarkable performance achievements of the Willys Six, which include winning first and second places in the annual mountain race from Mexico City to Puebla. Pitted against a field comprised mostly of eight-cylinder cars, the winning Willys Six covered the course of 75.8 miles in 75 minutes. The record for the steep Mount Baldy climb is also held by a stock Willys Six, which clipped 38-3/5 seconds off the former record. In the last Pike's Peak race two stock Willys Six Roadsters won first and second places. The winning time of 24 minutes, 18-1/5 seconds is the fastest on record for a stock car under $1000. These records are convincing evidence that the Willys Six is the fastest, liveliest and most powerful of all low-priced cars.

Trapshooting Aces Await Title Meet at Bradford

VETERAN RIFLE CHAMPS TO VIE FOR GUN CROWN

Newcomb, Crothers, Helyer Among Notables in Event, June 24, 25 and 26.

Philadelphian Expected to Retain Laurels Despite Array of Challengers.

By GIB MARSH

The trapshooting aces of Pennsylvania will assemble at Bradford on June 24, 25 and 26 to contest for the various championship titles carded at the forty-first annual tournament and convention of the Pennsylvania State Sportsmen's Association. Yes, the crack wing shots will journey into Bradford from every section of the Keystone State and that high scores will be recorded there is no doubt for included among the target breakers of Pennsylvania are many skilled marksmen, the peer of them all being Stevenson M. Crothers, of Philadelphia. And Crothers has taken the measure of the best shots of this nation, being former National champion.

Gib Marsh

The Pennsylvania State Sportsmen's Association is the oldest organization of its character in the country and two of its pioneer members, Elmer E. Shaner, now of Slippery Rock, and Dr. A. W. Vernon, of Bradford, are the fathers of the registered trapshooting sport, Shaner organizing the first national body to control the sport, the Interstate Trapshooting Association and Shaner directed the sport for over a period of 25 years.

VETERANS ENTERED

Likely at Bradford will be a lot of the veteran title holders, Charles Newcomb, Stevenson M. Crothers, of Philadelphia, Allen Heil, of Allentown; Edward Helyer, of Huntingdon County; G. E. Painter, of this city; James W. Napier, another local star; Lou Fleming of this city; Louis M. Erwin, of Kittanning; George Baldwin, of West Chester, now president of the state body and John M. Fontaine, of Philadelphia. All these gunners have either won major or minor titles in past years.

On the rolls of the organization are many shooters who in past years figured prominently in the national championships and two of those marksmen, Stevenson M. Crothers and Charles Newcomb, won the national singles, Crothers in 1925, and Newcomb in 1915. And Crothers was the first winner to make a perfect score on 200 targets in the national singles. In 1917 Roy McIntyre, of Butler, tied with Mark Arie, of Champaign, Ill., in the singles title, but lost in the shoot off.

But of all these shooters the record compiled by Crothers over a period of 10 years makes him supreme. He has won the singles of this state five times. The doubles title he has annexed a number of times, also the handicap title and the all-round title, total score on 200 singles, 25 pairs of doubles and handicap score, he has won six times and in the last 10 years he has lost the high average title, total on all 16-yard targets, but once. He holds the records in the state singles and double contest, both perfect scores.

FINE EXHIBITIONS

In discussing recently past state championship tournaments the writer was asked for his opinion in reference to the best exhibition of shooting given in state tournaments. There were three wonderful exhibitions of shooting performed in the opinion of the writer, one by Edward Hellyer, at Butler in 1919; J. Mal Hawkins, the professional, at Lancaster in 1918, and Allen Heil, at the tournament held at Harrisburg in 1920. In 1919 the state single's contest was an event of 300 targets. George Baldwin, shooting in a squad ahead of Hellyer, finished with a mark of 294. In order to defeat Baldwin, Hellyer had the difficult task in store of breaking all of his last 75 targets. The shooting was hard, a strong wind blowing when Hellyer went to the traps. Briefly he accomplished the task and made some wonderful shots on ducking targets. It was quite a strain, as any trapshooter of experience knows, and he finished with a score of 295 out of 300. The writer can vision Hellyer now, working on some of those hard tossed targets, his concentration and pointing was perfect.

Hawkins at Lancaster gave a wonderful exhibition of shooting in 1918. The title race for the professionals was 100 targets. Lester German, who was the national champion professional at the time, having won the crown in 1917, went on the firing line ahead of Hawkins, missed his first target and broke the next 99 targets under the most difficult of shooting conditions. The wind was breaking the targets down and sending them aloft. In order to defeat German, Hawkins had to turn in a perfect score, which he did giving a splendid exhibition under those trying conditions.

At Greensburg in 1923 Letterman duplicated a performance very similar to those of Hellyer and Hawkins. When he went on the line he had to break his last 100 targets in order to win by a single target over two gunners who had turned in scores of 197 out of 200.

BRILLIANT SHOOTER

Letterman was shooting in wonderful form that year, in fact he made a strong bid for the national title the same year at Chicago. And Letterman reeled off 100 straight at Greensburg, winning by a score of 198, just one target to the good. When the gunner constantly has in mind that he must break all his targets to win by a single target, tends to contribute to the mental strain of the test. But Hellyer, Letterman and Hawkins could shoulder just such tasks, all being cool, careful shooters. And all of them were "pointers," shooting in rather slow time, getting the full benefit of the shot patterns, which sometimes is an advantage over "snap-shooting" style in hard-pressed contests.

Crothers should repeat at Bradford, although there are some good shooters among the new group of gunners in the eastern section of the state.

Brady Boxes Gans In Windup at Bowl

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

The Pittsburgh district will have its customary two open-air boxing shows this week, but only one of them stands as originally arranged. That is the Baby Joe Gans-Jackie Brady offering at the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, tomorrow night.

The management of Hickey Park, Millvale, still is scouting around for a windup to take the place of its Frankie Genaro-Jimmy Thomas billing, slated for Thursday night, but set back one week because Genaro is suffering from a cold that has forced him to break training.

Gans has shown here twice before, in bouts with Rudy Ceder at Bridgeville two summers ago and with Young Saylor at the Bowl last summer. Brady was seen in a winning battle with Cuddy De Marco at Motor Square Garden several winters ago.

GORNICK IN SEMI-FINAL

Marty Gornick, Paul Leiby's up-and-coming young lightweight, of Whitaker, who has won the favor of the fans with his fine work in recent bouts, steps up to the semi-final notch at the Bowl, meeting Al Ghan, a good club fighter, of Columbus, O., who has shown here twice before. Mickey Solomen, of Youngstown, begins a comeback campaign against Carl Montebano, Braddock middleweight, in the second bout, and Anson Green, Negro, of Homestead, goes against Carl Cesko, Uniontown middleweight, in the opener.

WALTERS AT FRANKLIN

Professional bouts are listed at Franklin, Pa., on Tuesday night and at Uniontown on Friday. K. O. Kelly meets Joe Walters, Springfield (O.) Negro middleweight, and Indian Tiger West engages Billy Bruns at Franklin, and Joey Spiegel and Teddy Welch are in the main event at Uniontown.

An amateur show is listed at Yukon, Pa., near Greensburg, on Monday, at which Mayor Anton Cermak, of Chicago, and Al Simmons, star outfielder of the world champion Philadelphia Athletics are advertised to be guests.

Between Rounds

Young Rosely, of Charleroi, and Red Eye, of Akron, welterweights, who recently fought a close 10-round battle at East Liverpool, O., have been rematched for the semi-final at Hickey Park, Thursday night. Norali Smith of Homestead, and formerly of Newark, O., and Nick Hughes of the North Side will box the second bout, and Young Bordell of New Kensington and Steve Senich, of Homestead, are in the opener.

Jackie Fields, former world welterweight champion, boxes Relampago Saguero, the Cuban, in the main bout of a card of four eight-rounders in the Mills Stadium, Chicago, tomorrow night. Bryan Downey, veteran middleweight, tries a comeback against Matty Matthews, of Chicago, in one of the battles and Billy Papke, Jr., light-heavyweight son of the former middleweight champion of the same name, is in the semi-final against Edgar Norman, of Chicago.

A flock of the biggest heavyweights in the world will be in action this week. Victorio Campolo boxes Big Bill Hartwell, Negro, at Newark, N. J., Tuesday night and Primo Carnera engages Pat Redmond, Irish-Australian giant, at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, on Wednesday. Roberto Roberti was booked for a battle with Campolo in New York's Madison Square Garden on Thursday, but this bout had to be canceled because of Campolo's engagement in Newark on Tuesday.

GARDEN CANCELS SHOW

NEW YORK, June 6.—(INS.)—Inability of Madison Square Garden officials to have Roberto Roberti relieved of an engagement to box in Newark, N. J., next Tuesday, today resulted in cancellation of the Victorio Campolo-Roberti bout scheduled at the Garden next Thursday. The entire program was canceled, as it was too late to obtain a substitute main event.

Local Sandlot Leaders Encounter Defeats

CIVICS REGAIN WINNING PACE IN CITY LOOP

List of Unbeaten Teams Narrowed Down as Result Of Upsets in League Frays

Homestead Aces and Reliance Life Show Clean Slates in West Penn Loop

By TOM BIRKS

With the field of undefeated clubs narrowed down considerably as a result of unexpected defeats suffered during the past week, local followers of independent baseball are being treated to some close races by the members of the West Penn, City, Steel City and Commercial-Industrial leagues.

The City League race became a wide-open race during the past week when the ever-popular Art Rooney took the North Side Civics in hand and went out to capture three straight victories after the Civics had dropped seven successive contests.

Homewood, under the tutelage of Heinie Boll, was considered first-half champion of the City League until Gus Otey and his slow ball tamed the Dalymen at the Salt Works grounds. The victory over Homewood has given the Civics added fight and anything is liable to happen in this circuit before the race is concluded.

DORMONT IN RACE

Dormont also can be considered in the race now that Abe Martin has returned to the scene of his early triumphs and is pitching winning ball. Abe virtually ruined the championship aspirations of the North Side Buicks when he defeated them last week. It was one of the best pitched games of the season.

Few clubs are now flashing records that are free from defeat. However, Jack Fertig's Homestead Aces are one of the exceptions. This team still is unbeaten in the West Penn League race. Reliance was defeated at Swissvale after a stretch of unbroken victories and now George Miller's club and the Aces are battling neck and neck for the league title.

In the Commercial-Industrial League, the Reick-McJunkin nine and Reliance are undefeated. Bill Stuhlfire has gathered together a team of stars, in fact many fans consider this year's Reick nine much stronger than last season's. Pittsburgh Coal, Joseph Hornes, B. & O., Reliance and Reicks all have powerful clubs enrolled in the C. & I. circuit and it appears at this stage that the club showing the best pitching staff will be the ultimate winner.

STEEL CITY STRONG

The Steel City League, organized by Honus Wagner, is bearing out the predictions that it ranks with the greatest light first-class loops ever formed in his vicinity. All of the leaders were handed reverses during the past week and as a result St. Elizabeth's, East End Cardinals and the Pasquale teams are staging a great fight for the championship.

Mifflin upset the dope bucket by defeating the East End Cardinals. The Nolan outfit had won four in a row before tackling Mifflin, but the Cardinals had to be content with a 2-to-1 setback. This game was marked by a close pitchers' battle between Humeric and Paisley, each allowing only three hits.

FEATURES OF WEEK

Last week's games provided many features for the followers of sandlot baseball. Here are a few of the outstanding ones:

Gus Otey's pitching against the Homewood Club.

Spencer's fine twirling for Reliance against the Homestead Grays and Heyl's great hitting and fielding in the same game.

Ski Twyman and his triples off Williams in the game with the Grays.

Abe Martin's fine start in the City League against the Buicks and Heinie Boll's brilliant hitting and fielding against Book Shoe.

Jimmy Rooney's five hits in six trips to the plate against Abe Martin and Bill Doak, and the rally of the Civics in the same game, which fell short one run of tying the game in the ninth inning.

Jimmy Henderson's debut in the City League, handling the spitball of Carl Stewart.

The veteran Britt's pitching feat for the Homestead Grays against the Buicks, whom he held to three hits.

Fourth Hearst Junior Golf Tourney Set for June 30

open to all amateur golfers 19 years of age and under, including caddies who have not attained their eighteenth birthday.

2—It will be held at the Schenley Park municipal links, Tuesday, June 30, at 18 holes medal play.

3—The William Randolph Hearst trophy is to be awarded to the player registering the low score for 18 holes medal play; ties to be played off at a later date. Individual prizes for second, third and fourth places will be awarded, ties for each place to be played off. A plaque will be awarded the club caddie team of four players which aggregates a low score for 18 holes medal play, no member of any caddie team to be more than 17 years of age. Individual medals will be given members of the winning and runner-up teams, the plaque to be awarded to the club. Special prizes will be awarded for holes in one. All caddie team entrants also are eligible to the William Randolph Hearst trophy competition on their individual scores.

4—Club caddie teams must qualify preparatory to the tournament with the permission of a club official and play will be directed by the caddie-master or professional in conjunction with the Golf Tournament Editor. Entry blanks must be received by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph before any boy's score will be accepted in any preliminary qualifying round. Eight will qualify, the four low scorers to be the boys who will represent their club in the team championship, the other four playing only in the tourney. Caddies at clubs located more than 20 miles from Pittsburgh will not be required to qualify, and caddies at courses where permission cannot be obtained to play a qualifying round should confer with the Golf Tournament Editor.

5—Entries for the tournament will close on Thursday, June 25. Entry blanks with canceled postmarks of that date will be accepted.

6—Club caddie teams must be qualified prior to Thursday, June 25.

7—The United States Golf Association and Schenley Park links local rules will govern the competition. Infringement of these rules means disqualification. (Local rules also prevail during the caddie preliminary qualifying tests.)

8—Misinformation on entry blanks, failure to replace divots, not adhering to the rules of the game, ungentlemanly conduct at the course, failure to score correctly, discourtesy to officials, or failure to appear at the tee within 10 minutes of the stipulated starting time will bring disqualification at the hands of the Golf Tournament Director or any one of his authorized aides.

9—All contestants will be required to provide their own clubs and balls.

10—Winners of prizes in past tournaments who still are within the age and school eligibility limit and maintain their amateur status will be accepted as entries without a qualifying test if they are caddies.

11—Any amateur golfer in the United States who is eligible under the rules as set forth may enter the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's fourth annual junior tourney.

One word in conclusion—clip your entry blank today, fill it in and send it to the Golf Tournament Editor, in care of this newspaper.

IN OPEN QUALIFICATION ROUND

GUNN—Watts Gunn, of Oakmont, and formerly of Atlanta, Ga., where he was a playing mate of the great Bobby Jones. He is one of only four golfers rated at one stroke in the state amateur handicap list and will be in the field of players who will essay to qualify at Oakmont tomorrow for the National Open tournament to be played at Toledo, O., on July 2-4.

STAR FIELD SET FOR QUALIFYING TEST TOMORROW

91 to Battle at Oakmont for Eight Places in National Open Golf Championship.

State Tourney Slated at Highland; Women Play at Stanton Heights Friday.

With the traditional championship links at the Oakmont Country Club at their best, the star professionals of this district, together with a few out-of-town luminaries, and salted with several aspiring amateur satillites, the sectional qualifying round for the National open titular play, to be held on the very eve of Independence Day at the Inverness layout, in Toledo, is expected to produce the best golf this district has known this year.

Aside from the fight at Oakmont tomorrow, in which only eight men out of 91 will qualify to make the trip to the grueling test at Toledo, there is a superior week's card of tourneys at hand.

STAGE WOMEN'S EVENTS

The Pennsylvania Golf Association will stage another of its events at the Highland Country Club on Wednesday, while the Stanton Heights Golf Club will be host to more than 100 linkswomen during its one-day tournament, under the auspices of the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania, Friday.

Entries for the state tournament will close at the association's office, 1101 Farmers Bank Building, Tuesday at noon. Play will be foursomes under seven-eighths handicap, 18 holes. The Highland Club will have ample caddie facilities to take care of all entrants.

The Stanton Heights Golf Club's links are in perfect shape. The women will eagerly enter Friday's tournament there, because they are anxious to play the changed layout. Mrs. Frank E. Campbell, West Penn woman champion, is at home at Stanton Heights, and is the ranking favorite to cop.

Charley Manning's Goofy Golf Day at Shannopin Wednesday, means a boatload of fun. Everyone will have a musical instrument to sound when another in his match is hitting the ball, and any first shot from the tee can be recalled. So there'll be no holes in one at that layout Wednesday.

INVITATIONS CARDED

Tuesday the Women's Team League will resume play, Section 1 cavorting the links of the Chartiers Heights Country Club, and Section 2 playing at Longue Vue. Allegheny, Oakmont and Butler remain in the lead.

The Highland Country Club has carded the first invitation tournament for women this year, and it will be played on Tuesday, June 16, according to Mrs. Cliff Meyer, chairman of the committee. She has issued invitations to 14 clubs, and a field of more than 200 is anticipated.

Mrs. Thomas Griffen, chairman of events for women at St. Clair, announces an invitation tourney for women at that club for Wednesday, July 9.

Reverting to the National Open championship qualifying round, there are exactly 91 entries for tomorrow's event at Oakmont. More than 1,000 entries for 97 places will be playing in the 20 sectional rounds throughout the nation.

Pete O'Hara, Westmoreland's professional, who finished last year in a tie for eleventh place, is exempt from the preliminary test.

STAR AT OAKMONT

The field at Oakmont tomorrow includes Alex (Sandy) Armour, brother of Tommy Armour, who just won the British open; Freddie McLeod, noted Washington professional; Monro Hunter, of Silver Springs, Md.; Emmet French, of Southern Pines, and the local champions, Greer McIlvain, of Oakmont, state amateur king; Watts Gunn, Oakmont, West Penn amateur titlist, and Ted Luther, of Corry, West Penn open crownholder.

Experts believe the weather will have a great deal to do with tomorrow's scoring, and, with the markers on the back tees, it appears that a man who can pull a pair of 80s out of his bag in the 36-hole test is going to easily make the grade. The outside scoring is expected to be a pair of 83s. The number of entries from each section and the number who will qualify follow:

Section.	Entries	to Qualify.
Chicago	177	15
New York	154	13
Boston	37	3
Philadelphia	74	6
Richmond	31	3

SATURDAY—Usual Saturday sweeps and club matches; Second round of Murrell Cup play, at Alcoma; "Learn to know our members day," at Alcoma; Match play against par, at Wildwood.

Tee to Green

The committee in charge of the women's invitation tourney at the Highland Country Club, June 16, includes Mrs. Cliff Meyer, chairman; Mrs. William Risher, vice chairman; Mrs. William Langfitt, Mrs. Edward Langdon, Mrs. Charles Bailey, Mrs. Julius Schmidt, Mrs. Charles Burgoyne and Mrs. Edna McKee Houston.

The Pennsylvania Society, Sons of the American Revolution, will play a team match next Sunday against the District of Columbia Society, at the Bedford Springs Golf Club. The match will start at 1:30. Members of the local society who intend to participate should immediately communicate with the secretary of the golf committee.

The Women's Committee at the Pittsburgh Field Club has announced a weekly women's event for each Friday, beginning with July 3. Players with a handicap of 30 or more will be eligible to compete in these matches.

QUESTIONNAIRE IS SECOND AT BELMONT PARK

Her Grace Runs Third as Gallant Knight Is Practically Left at Post.

Alyssum Upsets Dope in Illinois Oaks and Rewards Backers $45.84 for $2.

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP.)—The turf prides of the Eat and West went down to defeat today as Harry F. Sinclair's Mokatam, a 6-1 third choice, won the forty-fifth running of the Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park.

Only a head away in second place, but a beaten horse, trailed James Butler's Questionnaire, the 3-to-5 favorite and generally rated as the eastern handicap titleholder. Far to the rear in last place followed the Audley Farm's Gallant Knight, western champion, which was practically left at the post. In between ran Rap Parr's Her Grace in third place and W. R. Coe's Polydorus in fourth.

REVENGE VICTORY

In winning the classic mile and a quarter journey and the $11,200 purse, Mokatam reversed the easy victory registered over him by Questionnaire in the Metropolitan. Jockey Slim Robertson, up on Mokatam, rode a perfect race to defeat his stablemate rider, Sonny Workman, who had the mount on the favorite.

Questionnaire, the top weight of the field with 128 pounds, conceded Mokatam five pounds and it was the extra weight that probably kept Questionnaire from duplicating the feat of his famous sire, Sting, which won both the Metropolitan and Suburban.

45-2 SHOT WINS OAKS

HOMEWOOD, Ill., June 6.—(AP.)—A fast start and the ability to remain in front of a field of class and speed despite a racing strip deep in mud today brought victory by a short head to J. W. Parrish's Allyssum, extreme outsider in a field of seven 3-year-old fillies, in the fifth running of the Illinois Oaks at Washington Park.

Never headed after breaking well from an inside post position, Allyssum lasted to win over the short-priced favorite, Charles Nuckols' Cousin Jo, and the two leaders were well in advance of S. W. Labrot's third-place Anne Arundel. Overlooked by the bettors because of having run eighth, 20 lengths back of the winner, Cousin Jo, in the Kentucky Oaks at Churchill Downs a month ago, Allyssum returned $45.84 to win, $15.10 to place and $11.52 to show on a $2 mutuel ticket.

TIEING RUN—P. Waner scoring tieing run for the Pirates in their ninth inning two-run rally which enabled them to come from behind and beat the Phillies, 2-1, at Forbes Field yesterday. Chicago Defeat Gives Illinois Big Ten Title

MADISON, Wis., June 6.—(AP.) — Wisconsin's baseball team, behind the three-hit pitching of Jake Sommerfield, turned back Chicago, 5 to 0, here today to give Illinois the 1931 Western Conference title. The result left the Illini a season record of eight victories against two defeats to eight wins and three losses for the Maroons.

Coach Pat Page's nine, making its first bid for the baseball title since 1913, could not cope with the Wisconsin attack. No Maroon advanced past second base.

FIGURING PLAY IN ADVANCE FROM THE OUTFIELD

By BABE RUTH.

BASEBALL'S HIGHEST SALARIED PLAYER.

One very important part of baseball is to think ahead of the play. By that I mean that a player should figure before a ball is pitched what he should do if the ball is hit to him. Now and then a freak situation will develop unexpectedly—one which nobody could figure in advance—but in most cases it is possible to be prepared.

Figure what is the best possible play for your team. Notice where the base runners are and decide for yourself what your chances are of stopping the one nearest the plate. But don't forget this part. Never make a play for a runner from third base to the plate when there is another runner on first unless you have a very good chance of stopping him. Your throw simply allows the man on first to advance to second base and another single here means a run. It is frequently a better play to pay no attention to the man running from third and to throw the ball to second, just to keep the other runner on first.

Notice how often this is done in a league game when you see the next one, whether in the majors or minors. With only one runner on the bases, it is all right to throw home, but, if you have men on first and third, it is not always a good play. You must figure on the speed of the runner and the strength of your arm.

When the ball is hit your way get your body into position, if it is possible, to make the throw to the base where the ball should go. If you are right-handed, set yourself with right foot behind the left and your body partly turned, as shown in the photograph accompanying this article. If you are left handed, then you set yourself with left foot behind the right. This puts you in a position to make the throw as soon as the ball is caught. The loss of time in shifting yourself into throwing position may be the difference between a put-out at one of the bases and the runner being safe.

Remember that it is impossible to make a play properly if you are flat-footed when it is necessary to make a quick throw from the outfield to one of the bases. You may not have noticed this shift of feet and body when looking at a professional game, but just take notice the next time you go to a game. You will see a player set himself to catch a fly ball and invariably he will move his feet and body in such position that he will be all set for the throw as soon as he gets the ball.

In remembering these rules about preparing for the next play, do not go to the other extreme and put this shift of feet and body ahead of the most important thing in outfielding. By this I mean that the first thing to do is to catch the ball. These bits of advice I have given refer to plays when an outfielder has time to set himself and wait for the ball to come down.

If you have to run hard for a ball, then forget everything except making the catch. Never mind position for the next throw. Don't take a chance on missing the putout by too much attention to having your feet and body in a particular position. The next play will have to take care of itself if you have to run your legs off to catch the ball.

Infielders also have to figure plays in advance, but this advice today is chiefly for outfielders. I want to stress two points. One is the idea of not letting a runner go from first to second through a useless throw to the plate, because the runner on first may be carrying the winning run of your particular game, and that throw puts him in position to score on a single. The other point is that an outfielder can get many a base runner, or prevent many from advancing simply by being all set to throw as soon as the ball is caught.

But remember—position is not as important as catching the ball, so forget position on a running catch.

NEXT SUNDAY—RUNNING AND ROUNDING THE BASES.

Field House To Perpetuate Rockne Memory

NOTRE DAME, Ind., June 6.—(AP.)—The memory of the late Knute Rockne will be perpetuated in a $1,000,000 field house, the Rev. Charles L. O'Donnell, president of the University of Notre Dame, announced tonight.

The building will be erected at a cost of $650,000, Father O'Donnell said, and $350,000 will be placed in an endowment fund for its upkeep.

The campaign for funds, although directed by Notre Dame men, will not be limited to them alone.

It will be a national movement "for the whole country to pay tribute in some outstanding and lasting way to this ideal of the American public," Father O'Donnell told guests at the annual alumni dinner.

EDDIE JACOBS WINS TITLE

HARTFORD, Conn., June 6.—(AP.)—Eddie Jacobs of Baltimore, University of Pittsburgh star, won the 1931 New England men's singles tennis championship at the Hartford Golf Club today, defeating Samuel B. Gilpin, Philadelphia, in straight sets, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4. The 22-year-old Maryland ace had to complete a semi-final match with J. Gilbert Hall, seeded at No. 2, in the morning before facing Gilpin in the afternoon. He stroked out an 8-to-6 victory over the New Jersey player to qualify for the championship match.

Mrs. William B. Shedden, of Boston, defending her women's singles championship against Miss Margaret Cluett, of Troy, N. Y., retained her crown with a 4-6, 6-1, 6-2 victory.

Burns Beats Bell In Tennis Tourney

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP.)—Edward W. Burns, of Brooklyn, upset the first-seeded player, Berkeley Bell, of Austin, Tex., in the semi-final round of singles in the Brooklyn tennis championship today, 6-4, 1-6, 5-7, 6-0, 6-3.

In the other semi-final singles match, Percy Kynaston, of New York, defeated Edward Tarangioli, also of New York, 2-6, 6-2, 6-4, 7-9, 8-6.

Burns and Kynaston will meet in the final tomorrow.

Scotties Down Governors In Day and Night Tilts

FINANCIAL Local Securities MARKETS

LOCAL MARKET RALLIES WITH N. Y. EXCHANGE

Heaviness on 'Big Board' In Week's Final Session Impedes Recovery Here.

Prices staged a moderate recovery on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange toward the end of the week in line with the rally in New York. The extent of the gains here was limited, however, and there was no evidence of the sweeping advances noted in "big board" stocks on Wednesday and Thursday.

Activity in the two leading fuel issues, Lone Star Gas and Western Public Service, dominated the local market. The former enjoyed a turnover of more than 15,000 shares, the largest in some time. Total sales of Western Public were about 7,000 shares. In the selling pressure which marked the end of the long downturn during the first two sessions Lone Star had dropped to near its record low, but the rally pulled it up almost 2 points later in the week. Western reached new low ground at $6, but rallied a full point.

PLATE GLASS RALLIES

In the industrial division the recovery failed in most instances to carry the stocks above the levels at which they left off the previous week. The few issues which did close higher for the period were up only fractionally as compared with the finals of the Saturday before. One of the most active of the high grade industrials was Pittsburgh Plate Glass, which sank four points to a new low and recovered only half of the decline. Blaw Knox also hit a new low, but managed to finish the week with a small gain. Armstrong Cork was also slightly higher at the close.

IRREGULAR AT CLOSE

Westinghouse Air Brake established a new low at 20, but rallied 3½ points. Standard Steel Spring also snapped back two points after reaching a new bottom at 20. Screw and Bolt sold at 10 during the week and finished at 11. Similar movements were noted throughout the market.

The Saturday recession on the "big board" affected the list here and tended to impair the rallying tendencies noted on Friday. In two hours yesterday the New York market lost twice as much ground as it did in five hours on Friday. However, the closing prices of the leading rails and industrials were well above the week's low points and showed moderate improvement over the final figures of the previous Saturday.

Acreage Planted by Soviet Exceeds 1930

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Russia, retarded in its early sowing campaign by adverse weather conditions, now has exceeded the acreage planted during the corresponding period of 1930 and is proceeding at a faster rate than a year ago.

The Agriculture Department said today that the total sowings to May 25 of all grains were 159,930,000 acres as compared with 153,758,000 last year. Wheat plantings were 47,934,000 acres, against 46,103,000.

In another report, the department today estimated the world winter wheat acreage sown last fall for 1931 harvest in 18 countries at 138,686,000 acres, or less than 1 per cent above the 1929 plantings.

New York City Bank Stock Market Rises

NEW YORK, June 6.—The New York City bank stock market during the past week registered a brisk rally as compared with the previous week, the dollar-index figures compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster shows. Based on today's prices, 16 leading bank and trust company shares were quoted at 16.8 times known earnings, against 16.3 times at the close of the previous week. The yield now stands at 4.869 per cent, against 5.022 per cent a week ago.

Sales of Clothing Show Improvement

NEW YORK, June 6.—Retail sales of men's clothing and furnishings during the current week have been the most satisfactory since the end of March, although the general volume of trade still continues disappointing, New York store executives report. The last three days of this week have been particularly encouraging, with consumer demand stimulated by the warm weather, it was said.

DIVIDENDS DECLARED

Bunker Hill and Sullivan Mines declared the usual monthly dividend of 25 cents, payable immediately. President F. W. Bradley announced that the directors have decided to suspend further dividends until an upturn in price of lead increases earnings.

Second National Investors declared a dividend of $1.25 on the preferred stock, applicable against dividends in arrears since last October. Third National and Fourth National Investors declared dividends of 65 cents each on the common shares.

Household Finance Corporation declared quarterly dividends of 90 cents each on class A and B common and $1 on participating preference, all payable July 15 to record June 30.

Burao, Inc., declared quarterly dividend of 75 cents on preferred, payable July 1 to record of June 19.

Nebitt Sparks Industries declared regular quarterly dividends of 75 cents cash and 1½ per cent in stock, payable July 1 to record of June 20.

Standard Steel Spring Company declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1, payable June 30 to record of June 20.

COTTON PRICES DROP SHARPLY

NEW YORK, June 6.—Cotton prices experienced a further sharp decline today, losing about ¼ of a cent per pound from the previous closing levels and declining to within 3 points of the low levels established early in the week for most of the active positions.

Cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 65,000 bales, compared with 66,000 a year ago.

Spot cotton 8.35c. Range on futures reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

NEW ORLEANS, June 6.—Cotton futures closed barely steady at net declines of 20 to 22 points. July, 8.31@8.34c; October, 8.65@8.67c; December, 8.88@8.89c; January, 9.00@9.01c; March, 9.20c bid; May, 9.37c bid.

Cottonseed Oil Market.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Bleachable cottonseed oil on the New York Produce Exchange closed easy today, 5 to 26 points net decline, influenced by the favorable cotton weather, the rather weak trend to cotton, grains and lard and the reaction in stocks. Scattered liquidation of July was apparent. Tallow closed easy, as did greases and competing fats. The market for crude oil was nominal.

Closing prices: Spot, 6.75c; July, 6.90c; September, 6.85c; December and January, 6.25c. Prime summer yellow contracts were neglected, with closing prices as follows: Spot, 6.60c; July, 6.70c; September, 6.70c, and December and January, 6.25c.

PRICE INDEX DROPS AGAIN

AUBURNDALE, Mass., June 6.—(AP.)—The general index of all commodity prices showing the trend for the past week has taken a decided drop, says the McGill Commodity Service. Of the price changes in the 14 individual groups, 11 declined, one remained the same, and two recorded upturns. The only groups to show increases were hides and leather and vegetable oils. In spite of greatly curtailed production of raw materials in most lines for some months, business activity has not been sufficient to reduce the relatively heavy inventories. With summer at hand when there is normally some slowing up of business, these inventories look particularly heavy.

The most important price changes for the week follow:

GRAIN MARKET LOSES GROUND

CHICAGO, June 6.—Wheat reacted today from a 4-cent advance that had taken place in the last week. Much wheat bought on account of drought conditions in Canada was sold out to realize profit and there was also heavy speculative selling. An eagerly awaited comprehensive summary of the Canadian crop situation proved to be bullish but not so sensational as some forecasts had indicated, being qualified by a statement that one good soaking rain within a week would materially alter the outlook.

Wheat closed unsettled, ⅛@¾ cent lower; corn ¼@½ cent down; oats ⅛@⅜ cent off, and provisions unchanged to 12 cents decline.

U. S. Farm Exports Drop in 10 Months

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Exports of principal American agricultural products were reported by the Agriculture Department today at $940,928,000 for the 10 months from July to April, as compared with $1,394,687,000 for the corresponding period the year previous.

A continued decline in exports was shown in April when the index of 44 commodities was placed at 68, the lowest in 16 years with the exception of the April, 1930, index of 65. In March, 1931, it was 87 and 71 in February.

Excluding cotton, the April index was 81, the lowest monthly index on record for 43 commodities. Imports for 10 months to April were reported at $956,832,000 against $1,598,198,000 a year ago.

Dry Goods Market.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Cotton goods were in moderate request today at low prices for print cloths and other unfinished goods. Finished cottons were selling in small quantities for nearby use. More interest was developing in women's wear for fall. Rayon sales were beginning to show a seasonal falling off. Hosiery continued quiet in first hands but the retail movement is steady. Knit outerwear was active in distributing channels. Silk held steady with some indications of firmness.

LOREE AGAINST MODERNIZATION OF RAILROADS

Use of Buses, Trucks, Planes Not Economically Sound, Delaware President Says.

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

NEW YORK, June 6.—Railroad executives in the East and elsewhere are conferring as to the most effective method of improving their finances through freight rate increases.

Mr. Rukeyser

The demand came to a head in the East at a recent conference, at which L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad, presided. Mr. Loree suggested petitioning the Interstate Commerce Commission for relief.

Asked to set forth more fully what is in his mind concerning railroad relief, Mr. Loree, a brilliant executive, who, perhaps, belongs to the hard-boiled school of business leaders, pooh-poohed some of the ideas now afloat for modernizing railroading. He told me:

CITES LOSSES

"The engagement of railroad companies in transportation such as motor buses, trucks, steamers, airplanes, pipe lines, etc., does not strike me as economically sound. This corporation has lost about 32 per cent of its passenger business. Of this loss, 29 per cent was absorbed by privately owned motors and only 3 per cent by the motor bus. I think the motor bus business five years from now will have slumped to at least one-half of its present size and will never seriously affect the railroad passenger business. The trucks are three in character—privately owned, contract trucks and common carrier trucks, and it is only this last that can be controlled by legislation. The three classes divide 82 per cent, 12 per cent and 6 per cent, respectively.

"It has been suggested that the railroads institute a pick up and delivery service. The English roads have been doing this for 100 years. In 1929 this service involved them in a loss of $5,948,847, and in 1930 a loss of $6,217,307. Everything indicates that if the American roads undertook it they would lose correspondingly.

SEES FEWER TRUCKS

"I believe as a police measure laws will shortly be passed limiting the length, width and height of motor trucks, the weight they can carry on the highways and their speed, and that when this is done they will be substantially reduced in number.

"When the roads were turned back to their owners by the federal government in 1920, the Interstate Commerce Commission reported 188 Class 1 railroads (roads earning a net income in excess of $1,000,000 annually.) The commission now reports 153. Of these, the common stock of 10 only sold above par on June 2, last.

"Certainly the railroads need prompt relief."

Business Progress Seen by Wilshire

NEW YORK, June 6.—Better business in the second quarter of the year than in the first and a gradual improvement from now on was the opinion expressed by Joseph Wilshire, president of Standard Brands, Inc., in a statement to the 10,000 employes of the company, none of whom, he said, had suffered a cut in wages or salary during the world-wide economic depression.

In the first three months of this year, Standard Brands, the chief units of which are the Fleischmann Company, Chase & Sanborn and the Royal Baking Powder Company, earned 30.02 cents per common share, compared with 25.68 cents in the same period of 1930. The company will retire 50,000 shares of preferred stock on July 1. This is about one-third of the total amount outstanding.

Youngstown Steel Operations to Gain

NEW YORK, June 6.—Operations of steel plants in the Youngstown district next week will be at 42 per cent of rated capacity, an increase of 1 per cent over the current week and the first increase in 13 weeks, Dow, Jones & Co., reports. Youngstown Sheet and Tube open hearth steel production, at its Campbell plant, is approximately double that of 10 days ago and the company's operations next week are likely to average 33 per cent in the Youngstown district, an advance of 3 per cent. The increase in operations is due to a moderate improvement in the market for pipe.

U. S. Steel Backlog To Show Decrease

NEW YORK, June 6.—Dow, Jones & Co. says that unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation as of May 31, to be published next Wednesday, are likely to show a material decrease and estimates are that, without allowing for any adjustments, the drop may reach 250,000 to 300,000 tons.

For years May has been a month of substantial reductions in bookings of the corporation, and Dow, Jones says that, as compared with the past seven years, a drop of 250,000 to 300,000 tons would be under the average.

Zinc Production Drops During May

NEW YORK, June 6.—Stocks of zinc at the end of May were 143,049 short tons, compared to 143,212 tons at the end of April and 106,080 at the end of May, 1930, according to the American Zinc Institute.

Production in May was 25,688 tons, as against 29,137 in April and 44,556 in May, 1930. Shipments totaled 25,851 tons for May, against 27,418 tons for April and 38,681 for May, 1930.

MARKET RALLY DISPELS GLOOM OVER OUTLOOK

Little Change Reported in Business Conditions as Seasonal Slump Spreads.

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

Last week's rally in the stock market did much to dispel the pall of abject gloom hanging over the business situation but there were few actual changes in commercial activity.

It has become trite to say that business is merely drifting, but there has been little other comment to make about the trend of activity since early in April.

After moderate gains in activity starting in January, most types of business reached seasonal peaks in March or April. Since that time the pendulum has been swinging in the opposite direction. This has been entirely in accord with seasonal precedents.

The reduction in activity over the past two months has not been an indication that business is getting worse because trade activity almost invariably declines during this period.

STEEL OUTPUT OFF

Steel ingot production has slumped close to 40 per cent of capacity. This is a drop from over 55 per cent of capacity in March.

The decline in steel mill activity has reflected the curtailment of automobile production and reduced activity in other lines. Demands for material for the building industry have taken up only a small part of the slack created by decreased activity in Detroit plants.

Lower prices for scrap and curtailment in pig iron output indicate that steel men do not expect an upward movement in their business before the latter part of the summer.

COAL TRADE SLOW

Coal men expect the production figures for their industry for last week to show approximately the lowest levels for the present year. This is not entirely attributable to strikes since only a few mines have been affected by labor troubles and the remaining workings have supplied all the needs of industry.

The strikes at mines do not seem to have created any apprehension on the part of buyers. Coal prices have shown no change from their recent low levels.

Steel Ingot Rate Declined in May

NEW YORK, June 6.—Steel ingot production in May declined to 45.36 per cent of rated capacity, compared with 49.29 per cent in April, and 73.68 per cent in May last year, the American Iron and Steel Institute reports.

Production for the 26 days last month totaled 2,505,485 gross tons, an approximate daily output of 96,365 tons, compared with 2,722,479 tons, or a daily average of 104,711 tons for the 26 working days in April. Output for May, 1930, amounted to 3,982,915 tons, a daily average of 147,515 tons for the 27 working days.

More U. S. Wheat Bought by France

PARIS, June 6.—France is buying more wheat from the United States than at any time within the last year, native stocks having dwindled to such an extent the country must buy in foreign markets.

The amount of foreign wheat legally admitted to France recently was raised to 25 per cent of the amount used from 10 per cent. However, authoritative circles said that millers actually are buying from 50 to 60 per cent of their wheat abroad.

Says Canada Crops Poorest in 29 Years

WINNIPEG, June 6.—The Manitoba Free Press, after receiving reports from 347 correspondents in the three prairie provinces—Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta—said today that crop conditions in Western Canada are worse than they have been previously in 29 years at this season.

Drought prevails in practically all areas, and grain fields in Saskatchewan and Alberta have suffered from severe dust storms. Frost has damaged crops in some districts.

STOCK MARKET PRICES DECLINE ALL ALONG LINE

Recession Leaves Shares Midway Between Recent Highs and Extreme Lows.

By BROADAN WALL
Universal Service

NEW YORK, June 6.—The price tendency on the stock exchange continued downward during today's short session. In this respect, the market was not particularly surprising in its action, since it was generally conceded that the rapidity of the recovery during mid-week suggested a reaction from the peaks.

The lower tendency undoubtedly was helped along by the disclosure that Germany has officially announced its inability to carry through the terms of the Young plan with the natural suggestion that some moratorium may be necessary unless a downward provision of the international payments is effected.

Then, too, a forecast of substantial decline in steel tonnage during May also contributed to selling pressure. News that Detroit employment declined 3 per cent during the week was in line with seasonal expectations, but it also emphasized the current depression.

VOLUME SMALL

Despite the continuation of the decline inaugurated Friday, the volume remained relatively small, less than a million shares changing ownership. The most severe reactions took place in the public utilities, but the railroads naturally suffered sizeable declines.

Al in all, the market performed in a fashion quite natural to similar periods in the past, and it might also be stated that the reaction was to be expected regardless of the news.

Virtually the entire list participated in the setback and, roughly, most stocks are midway between their recent highs and their extreme lows.

OUTLOOK BETTER

Midst the extreme pessimism toward the railroad shares, it should be remembered that present indications point to the biggest crop of small grains ever raised in some sections of the country. The entire railroad industry enjoys its greatest earnings in the period from June to October.

With technical factors dominating the market currently, it is not at all unreasonable to await further signs from the market itself during the first day or two of the new week before attempting a forecast on the prospects for the next week or 10 days.

A demonstration of resistance to selling following possibly additional profit taking and renewed short selling in the early part of the week will undoubtedly strengthen the conviction that a more extended recovery is in store.

German Gold Flight To London Reported

LONDON, June 6.—Reichsmarks were firmer today at 20.50⅜, up from .50, but they are still around the gold export point, and it was learned that important sales of gold have been made to Paris.

Gold shipments from Berlin to London are threatened, but it is hoped they will be avoided, owing to their possibly being misinterpreted politically.

The Financial Times declares today:

"It is difficult to believe that the German authorities will not counteract the adverse trend of the reichsmark or France encourage the withdrawal of French funds from Germany in connection with the Chequers discussions.

"Such Machiavellian policies would be most unlikely to throw dust in the eyes of the parties concerned."

April Footwear Production Gains

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Boot and shoe output in April rose to 29,756,542 pairs from 29,363,616 in March and 29,000,816 in April, 1930, says the Department of Commerce reports from 1,192 factories. Production, January 1 to April 30, totaled 102,969,983 pairs against 110,058,575 in like period a year ago; April increase was from 59 Illinois and 262 New York factories. The 379 factories in Massachusetts showed a decrease.

Rumor Russia Seeks Cotton in America

NEW YORK, June 6.—An interesting rumor has made its appearance in cotton circles this week to the effect that Russia is in the market for 250,000 bales of American cotton provided credits can be arranged. This rumor has not been confirmed, although there is a fairly well authenticated report to the effect that Russia has bought or practically completed arrangements to buy 250,000 bales of Egyptian cotton.

League to Oppose Freight Rate Boost

WASHINGTON, June 6.—National League of commission merchants, representing organized distributors of fresh fruits and vegetables, announce their intention of opposing a horizontal increase in railroad freight rates. Warning is issued that such a program will meet strenuous opposition and that producers, growers and farmers generally are expected to join the offensive against freight rate increases.

Vienna Bank Rate Increased to 6%

VIENNA, June 6.—(AP.)—The National Bank today increased its discount rate from 5 to 6 per cent.

Says Many Trade Rules Unnecessary

CHICAGO, June 6.—James C. Murray, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, issued a statement yesterday asserting that the Canadian Royal Commission investigating grain futures trading had definitely confirmed the high economic value of the marketing system which originated in the United States and had been practiced for many years. Murray's statement said much had been lost by business in the United States through unnecessary restrictions and regulations as compared with other countries, and that it was now high time the United States government should turn attention to regaining the lost ground.

Oakland Traders To Meet Tuesday

Members of the Oakland Board of Trade will meet Tuesday evening in the Schenley Hotel. This will be the final meeting until September. The annual picnic will be held at Kennywood Park on June 15.

Steel Slump Laid To Cuts in Auto Output

By W. S. COUSINS

NEW YORK, June 6.—Much of the reaction in business in the next month or two may logically be attributed to the so-called seasonal recession which always features the summer months.

Two years ago a surprising expansion of summer manufacturing and distribution of goods took place, but that in itself marked the ushering in of the greatest depression in American economic history. Maintenance of current rates of steel and automobile production for the next month or two would be quite satisfactory, provided the way was paved for an upturn after Labor Day.

STEEL LOSS

Steel production has now settled down to around 40 per cent of mill capacity, a loss of 17 per cent since March. Seasonal influences and a fresh wave of pessimism have been cited by the Iron Age as the most important factors in the steel trade.

Finished steel prices, as measured by the Iron Age composite index, now average 2.102 cents a pound, or only $2.08 a ton above the low point reached in the last severe depression (1.998 cents a pounds on February 28, 1922). And if one takes into account the amount of business taken in recent months that is represented by large construction projects, usually subject to rather sharp concessions, it is likely that net average returns per ton are no higher than they were nine years ago.

AUTO DEMAND CUT

A prime cause of the present decline in steel production is the slackening of activity in the motor car industry. Automotive demand for steel this month is expected to show further curtailments, since retail sales of cars have been adversely affected by the recent stock market slump.

Severe price slumps in copper, oil and raw and finished materials exert a depressing influence upon all important branches of trade. The price indexes are carefully watched for positive indications of an upturn, but thus far these have been few and far between.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

PIONEER AUTO AGENCIES JOIN IN DODGE SALES

Frank D. Saupp, Steel City Company Announce Pact For Single Enterprise.

Announcement is made by James J. Kilroy, Jr., president of Frank D. Saupp, Inc., Western Pennsylvania distributor for Dodge Brothers' products, that the Steel City Automobile Company, through arrangements completed with H. D. Eierman, vice president of the latter organization, becomes an associated dealer for the complete line of Dodge Brothers passenger cars and trucks and Plymouth cars.

Thus, two of Pittsburgh's oldest and best known automobile institutions, operating from separate establishments and located in different sections of the city, become identified with and associated in a single sales and service enterprise.

The Hiland Automobile Company, which later became Frank D. Saupp, Inc., has represented Dodge Brothers' products in this territory since Dodge Brothers' first car was produced, while the Steel City Automobile Company, long established distributor of Peerless motor cars, in which connection it continues as representative of the Peerless Motor Car Corporation for Pittsburgh and the Western Pennsylvania territory, is so well and favorably known in this district as to require no introduction.

LONG CAREER

It will be remembered by many Pittsburghers that prior to 1914, in which year the Hiland organization acquired the Dodge franchise, that Peerless was represented by that firm and that A. J. Gosser, organizer and president of the Steel City Automobile Company, and the late Frank D. Saupp were for many years associated together in Peerless affairs under the Hiland regime.

In view of this early relationship, it is only natural that the Steel City management in scanning the medium and low-price car field should be led to re-establish sales and service affiliations of a former day, particularly when that affiliation rests on a product that has met with continuous public acceptance over many intervening years and has become so firmly identified with the Frank D. Saupp name and reputation in this community.

Mr. Eierman says:

"In no sense does the Steel City Automobile Company relinquish its sales and service interests and activities in Peerless. Since the Peerless Motor Car Corporation is now entirely committed to producing automobiles for the higher-priced market only, we are providing an additional line of reputable medium-priced merchandise to round out our price range and to supply our buyers of lower priced Peerless models of past years with transportation facilities which they may justifiably approve and readily accept.

"As a matter of fact, our action is primarily instigated by numerous Peerless customers suggesting that we make available to them automobiles of the price class where they can continue the sales and service relationship already established."

SPECIAL DISPLAY

A special display of Dodge Brothers products is being held this week in the Steel City establishment on Forbes street, opposite Hotel Schenley.

Mr. Kilroy states:

"In augmenting our wholesale organization with the addition of the Steel City Automobile Company, we have again chosen the class of dealer who ranks foremost in his commodity as we feel this is entirely in keeping with Dodge Brothers standards.

"The Steel City Automobile Company is one of about 800 new contracts which Dodge Brothers have made throughout the country this year, adding to their already adequate organization of over 4,000. The added opportunity for Dodge Brothers owners in this district to enjoy the splendid facilities of the Steel City Automobile Company are also a marked advantage."

SEEK HUDSON SALES PRIZE

For the past several years the Hudson Motor Car Company has conducted a national sales contest during the month of June. Each salesman has a certain sales quota to reach and the distributor sales force having the nearest perfect score receives the prize donated by the factory.

Two years ago the June contest was won by the Pierpoint Motor Company, Pittsburgh distributor, and the boys here are set to repeat.

This year's event will be known as the Hudson-Essex June blue ribbon free wheeling contest. Every member of the Pierpoint Motor Company's sales staff has entered enthusiastically into the contest.

Aside from the group prize donated by the factory, individual winners will also be suitably rewarded.

Simmonds Elected Manager for Yundt

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Yundt Motor Company, Ford dealers in Millvale, W. R. Simmonds was named manager.

W. R. Simmonds

Mr. Simmonds has had a varied experience in the automobile industry during the last 12 years, having served as zone manager for Ford and was also associated in a similar capacity with other prominent auto concerns.

Mr. Simmonds is well known in automobile circles here as well as throughout Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Maryland and Ohio. He succeeds the late H. J. Yundt, who before his death was president as well as manager.

March Shipments Best Since 1929

March shipments of cars by Studebaker constituted the largest month's business done by the corporation since September, 1929. At the same time, unfilled orders exceeded the figures of any month during the year while both factory and dealer stocks of new cars were the lowest in a long time.

Reo Stock Eight Finished Ninth in Holiday Classic

A Reo Royale Eight, entered by the Elco Grease and Oil Company, of Cleveland, with Cliff Bergere at the wheel and Don Ostrander as mechanic, rode into ninth place in the nineteenth running of the Indianapolis 500-mile racing classic and upset all the pre-qualifying and pre-race predictions of racing experts, who were unanimous in the opinion that a car of its long wheelbase could not make the turns or maintain the high speed necessary to place it among the money winners.

Its showing is considered most remarkable in view of its being a 95 per cent standard car and in competition with cars built for no purpose but speed.

20 MILLIONTH FORD GREETED

Thursday afternoon representatives of the Ford branch here with several prominent Ford and Lincoln dealers, welcomed the twenty millionth Ford to Pittsburgh. The car is touring the country in charge of C. D. Hilton, of Dearborn, Mich.

City officials, including the Mayor, President of Council Herron, County Commissioner Armstrong and Supt. of Police Peter P. Walsh, officially greeted the car in front of the City-County Building and signed its log.

A police escort met the twenty millionth Ford at the city line on the Ohio River boulevard. Moving pictures of the production of the twenty millionth Ford were shown at the Ford branch Thursday evening.

3 Main Violations Charged to Drivers

Three specific driving violations by operators of automobiles were responsible, in whole or in part, for 68 per cent of the 1930 accidents due to improper driving, according to information supplied the Silvertown Safety League. They were exceeding the speed limit, driving on the wrong side of the road and failing to grant the right-of-way.

NEW DE SOTO MODELS SHOWN BY FIRM HERE

Cars Brought From Exhibition In Cleveland on Display; Many Features Included.

Richard (Dick) Hevesey, sales manager for the B. F. Stout Co., has just returned from a meeting held at Exhibition Hall in Cleveland last week where many dealers from throughout this district were given their first showing of some specially built DeSoto automobiles.

The meeting at which a luncheon was served in connection with the Salon showing was addressed by R. W. Rowland, assistant sales manager, with Walter F. Durkin, Cleveland district manager, acting as toastmaster.

Simultaneously with the showing of these special jobs the new De Soto Six two-door sedan was introduced. This is the lowest priced six-cylinder model ever designed and built by this company.

In spite of its low price the car is beautifully tailored and upholstered with a fine and handsome broadcloth which measures up to De Soto standards in every respect of quality and appearance.

Safety of control is assured the driver at all times through the positive and easy operating internal expanding hydraulic four-wheel brakes.

Every comfort and convenience of both driver and passengers have been looked after in this new De Soto Six two-door sedan. This combination of two-door sedan body with performance and convenience standards already established should make this one of the most popular and fastest selling models of the entire De Soto line.

The B. F. Stout Company is now showing several of these special jobs which were brought over from the salon.

OLDSMOBILE OPENS DISPLAY

The Oldsmobile-Pittsburgh Company has arranged an interesting display at its service station on Melwood street which will continue until June 15. Special equipment has been installed to acquaint Oldsmobile owners with the complete facilities of this modern service station. The special equipment includes the New Departure Bearing "Mystery Ball Bouncing Machine." It is fascinating to see how this machine demonstrates the accuracy with which these bearing balls are made.

A Delco Remy auto radio has been installed on a cut-away chassis which shows all the working parts of the Oldsmobile. Another interesting feature is the demonstration of the synchro-mesh principle of transmission. There is also a 1900 model Oldsmobile which still runs under its own power.

Outside of these special displays there is, of course, a complete line of Oldsmobile accessories for every vacation need.

The Oldsmobile-Pittsburgh Company invites the public to view this display prepared by its service manager, Hughey Lavery.

Auburn Shipments Above 1929 Total

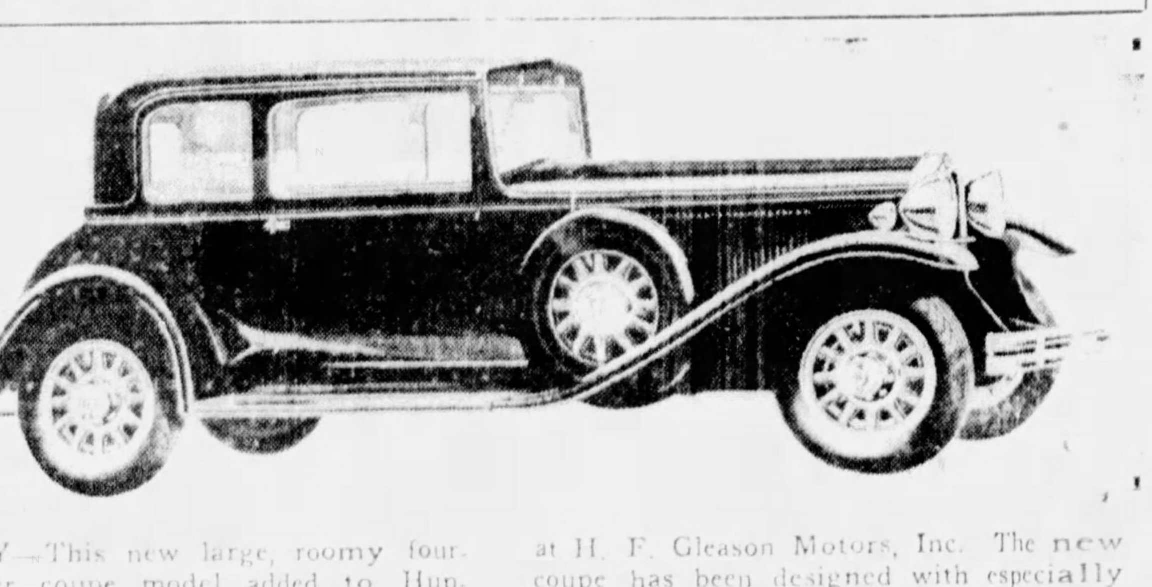
A factory report just received by J. A. O'Malley, president of the Pittsburgh Auburn Automobile Company, states that shipments of Auburn cars this year exceed by 100 cars Auburn's shipments for the entire year of 1929, which was a peak year in the industry. Shipments already this year exceed the entire year of 1930 by 9,066 cars.

Auburn's shipments for the entire year of 1929 were 22,749 cars, and up to May 25, Auburn's shipments this year amounted to 22,759 cars. The statement further advises that 682 new Auburn dealers have been added since January of this year, and that conservative estimates indicate no let-up in public demand.

Studebaker Stands By Present Models

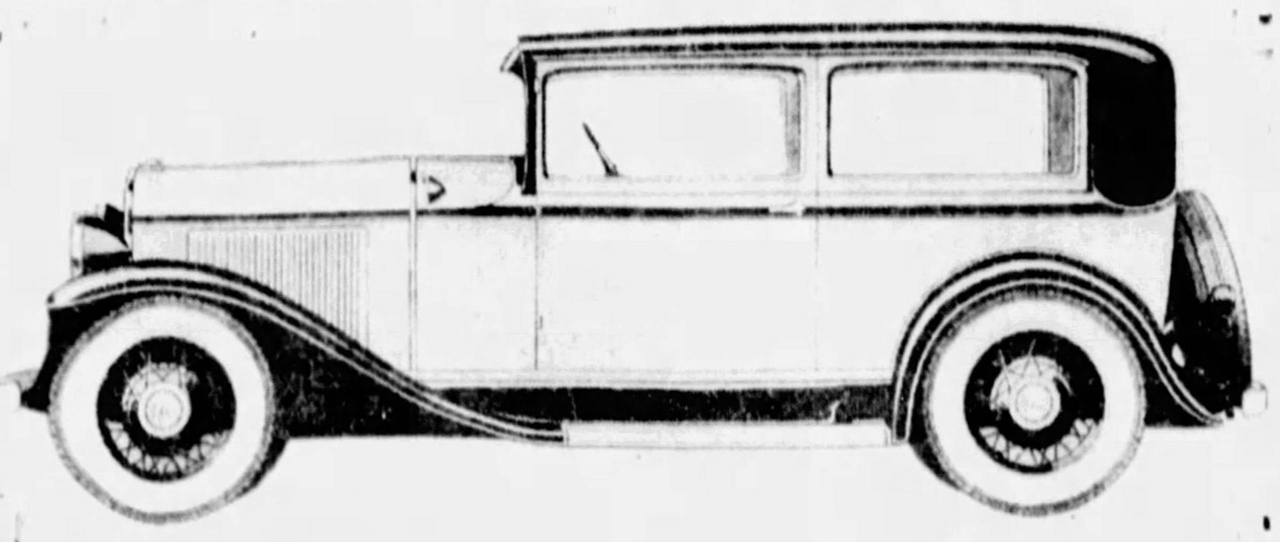
Convinced that free wheeling with single lever gear control represents the apex of modern day automobile engineering, Studebaker has announced its intention of making no model changes this summer.

COUPE ADDED BY HUPMOBILE



ROOMY—This new large, roomy four-passenger coupe model added to Hupmobile's 100 horsepower and 133 horsepower eight cylinder lines is being shown at H. F. Gleason Motors, Inc. The new coupe has been designed with especially roomy seats, including the auxiliary seat which may be folded up out of the way.

NEW DE SOTO SIX SEDAN



WIDE DOORS—This new two-door sedan is the lowest-priced six ever designed and built by De Soto Motor Corporation. Steelweld body has two large, wide opening doors giving easy access to all seats, which are roomy and comfortable. Lowness due to double-drop frame, with powerful 67 horsepower motor, provide maximum performance and roadability at every highway speed in this new model.

GENERAL TIRE JOB AID CITED

The General Tire and Rubber Company is one of five largest American industrial concerns which has just been selected by the President's Emergency Committee for Employment as examples of industries with approved plans of relief of unemployment and loans for workers.

The five plans are those of the General Tire and Rubber Company, the General Electric Company, the Southern Pacific Company, the International Harvester Company and the Mathews Construction Company of Princeton, N. J.

Summarizing the features of the General Tire and Rubber Company plan, the President's committee says:

"This company recently declared an extra dividend to be divided into two parts, the first half going to the stockholders and the second to a fund to stimulate buying in off-seasons, so that plant operations may be regularized through the year and employment stabilized. If stimulation of sales fails to eliminate the winter slump, loans are to be made to unemployed regular workers up to five days' wages a week."

New Model Gives Willys Full Line To Offer Users

Completing its commercial program with the introduction of the new Willys Six, model C-157, on a 157-inch wheelbase chassis, Willys-Overland is now placed in an enviable position with its truck line, affording more than 90 per cent coverage of all commercial transportation requirements.

MARMON'S '16' WINS ACCLAIM

Back at the factory after a 2,200-mile trip in one of the new Marmon 16 models, George C. Tenney, general sales director of the Marmon Motor Car Company, reports a most enthusiastic reception of the 16 in every city visited. He predicts substantial sales of the new 200 horsepower car.

Favorable comments concerning the car's appearance and performance were numerous. One man told Mr. Tenney he had more thrills out of driving the 16 than he has had since he drove his first car. Another stated that the 16-cylinder smoothness of the new Marmon was almost comparable to a car driven by an electric motor.

CHRYSLER CARS PLEASE PUBLIC

A bulletin just received by Howard Samson, Samson Motor Company, states that never before in the history of Chrysler cars has the factory received so many written and verbal congratulations on a new model as has the recent introduction of five new de luxe body styles.

Just seven days after these new de luxe models were put on display in Chrysler salesrooms throughout the country, thousands of letters and telegrams were received.

Practically every telegram, letter or personal message commented upon the stimulating grace and beauty of the new de luxe itself; the remarkably quiet and smooth performance of the 95 horsepower engine and the absolute absence of gear noises and silent, easy gear-shifting in the dual-high transmission.

Not only are factory officials pleased with the reception accorded the Chrysler De Luxe Eight, but they are rejoicing at the sizeable bank of orders which are accumulating for this latest addition to the Chrysler line, although it is too early yet for comparative figures.

JUNE SELLING DRIVE OPENED BY CHEVROLET

Company Plans Million Demonstrations for Month; Domestic Sales Gain.

A national demonstration campaign, with a goal of 1,000,000 demonstrations during the month, has been mapped out for June by the Chevrolet Motor Company.

The campaign is in line with Chevrolet's previously expressed opinion that the potential buying capacity of the country is unimpaired and requires only intensive sales effort to develop a satisfactory volume, according to H. J. Klingler, vice president and general sales manager.

The last four months for which registration figures are complete show that Chevrolet sixes have led the domestic passenger car market.

During the month of June every one of the 35,000 Chevrolet dealers, sales managers and salesmen will be required to fill an assigned quota of demonstrations, appraisals and sales.

The campaign is unique in that the objective is directly aimed at increased demonstrations and that special recognition will be given salesmen wo fill their demonstration quota.

During the month the campaign will be strongly supported by dealer window displays, campaign buttons, wind-shield stickers, special advertising literature and helpful guidance from the factory, Mr. Klingler said:

"Time and experience have proven that sales are made directly in proportion to the number of convincing demonstrations and this fact was never more true than in the case of the 1931 Chevrolet car. The smooth six-cylinder power of this car, together with its beauty of line and wide range of selection makes it unquestionably the great American value of the year."

ANNIVERSARY SALE
Week of June 7th

This month marks the ending of our first year as a used car dealer. Our sales for the past year have exceeded our wildest dreams—only going to prove that there is a ready market for good merchandise at the right price. We are exclusive used car dealers and are able to control our inventories, buying only late model cars in good condition—our prices are always the lowest in town.

Wilbur Warns Against Fetish Cultural Education in Child Training

INTERIOR HEAD SCORES LAXITY IN TEACHING

Use of Body as Well as Mind Urged in Speech Dedicating New School.

'Hell' in Duce's Vocabulary, Too, Schwab Reveals

BEDFORD, Pa., June 6.—Hell, that four-letter word that has made Ambassador Charles Dawes famous and that caused so much comment on the radio talks of Gen. Smedley D. Butler, has a place in the vocabulary of Premier Benito Mussolini, Charles M. Schwab revealed today.

Speaking at the Smith Vocational School dedication at Yellow Creek near here Schwab told of congratulations wired him by prominent persons following a gift he made to his home community of Loretto, Pa. Among the messages he quoted was a cablegram from Il Duce, which concluded:

"But where the hell is Loretto?"

By JAMES A. BAUBIE
Staff Correspondent.

BEDFORD, Pa., June 6.—Secretary of Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur deplored the lack of knowledge of the ordinary boy and girl of vocations and professions today in his speech at the dedication of the Smith Vocational High School at Yellow Creek, near here.

He also warned that the "fetish of cultural education" must not be permitted to interfere with up-to-date and effective child training. He said in part:

"A large number of our youth have found themselves dislocated in an economic sense at the very beginning of their life careers.

"Our schools are just beginning to sense the need of working out some form of training which will develop the use of the body as well as the mind. Only a modest percentage of our students receive even that training of the hands requisite for laboratory work in chemistry, physics, biology, physiology and botany."

NOTABLES PRESENT

Secretary Wilbur was the principal speaker at the dedication, in which Congressmen J. Russell Leech, Ebensburg; E. M. Beers, of Mt. Union; M. W. Shreve, of Erie; Adam M. Wyant, of Greensburg; S. A. Kendall, of Myersdale, and J. Howard Swick, of Beaver Falls, took part.

Gen. Edward Martin, of Washington, Pa., chairman of the Republican State Committee, and Senators Richard W. Williamson, Huntingdon; Chauncey W. Parkinson, of Waynesburg, and Charles H. Ealy, of Somerset, also were present at the exercises.

Charles M. Schwab and L. H. Dennis, state vocational educational head, were also guests of honor. The Rev. Joseph H. Clapper, president of the Hopewell Township School Board, presided and accepted the high school building in behalf of the school authorities.

SCHOOL'S DONOR SPEAKS

The Smith Vocational High School was the gift of Robert P. Smith, Washington, D. C., attorney who formerly resided in Hopewell Township, where he was born. In addition, Smith also provided a library. The school and library cost approximately $50,000.

Smith said in part:

"In presenting this school, I have only desired to do something for the little community where I was born and raised, that will be of assistance to the boys and girls in the locality.

"My thought has been to give them some of the advantages which I was unable to enjoy but which children in many other places now have."

Smith, who has resided in Washington for 11 years, is married and has four children. Prior to the ceremonies, he was host at a luncheon at the Fort Bedford Inn. Secretary Wilbur, Schwab and other guests of honor were present at the luncheon.

De Paul Institute Holds Graduation

Commencement exercises will be held this afternoon for the De Paul Institute, Oral School for the Deaf, Castlegate avenue, Brookline. Diplomas will be presented to the graduates by the Rev. Thomas F. Coakley, of Sacred Heart Church, after which there will be drills, dancing, athletic stunts, and other activities.

POWER SAFETY RECORD GROWS

The power stations department of the Duquesne Light Company has completed a six months period without a lost-time accident, T. E. Purcell, general superintendent said yesterday. The last lost-time accident occurred December 2, 1930.

The department employs on an average 670 men who operate and maintain the equipment at Brunot Island, James H. Reed Power Station, Colfax and the stations of the Allegheny County Steam Heating Company.

The department has won the inter-departmental safety trophy, a bronze plaque, permanently, as a result of the record for the year ending May 31. The safety record of the department showed an 87 per cent reduction in accidents as compared with the five-year period ending May 31, E. J. Kreh, accident prevention bureau manager, said.

17 Flee From Home In Night Clothing

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., June 6.—Clad in night clothes, 17 persons occupying the home of Clarence Bryner, at Pleasant Hill, east of here, escaped a fire which destroyed the dwelling early today by jumping from the roof of the back porch. Clarence Lee, of Detroit, broke his ankle in the leap. Two daughters, their husbands and four children were overnight guests at the house. Other occupants were Mr. and Mrs. Bryner and their eight other children. Loss was estimated at $7,000.

Auto Kills Husband, Widow Asks $15,000

Asking $50,000 damages for the death of her husband, Henry J. Gross, through being struck by an automobile, Mrs. Katherine Gross, of East Liberty, filed suit against Buchholz & Maus, of Liberty avenue, dealers in beauty shop supplies, alleging that an automobile of defendants, operated by W. J. McCullough, struck Gross as he was crossing Negley avenue, at Broad street, October 23 last.

GERMAN ART COMING HERE

Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of the Fine Arts Department at Carnegie Institute, has completed arrangements for bringing the German section of the 1931 International Exposition to Pittsburgh, according to word from Berlin last night.

Saint-Gaudens has been in Europe arranging the next International for some months. He expects to sail for home June 20.

Germany's exhibition in the 1931 International will include Max Slevogt, Ulrich Huebner, Xaver Fuhr, George Grofs, Gert Wollheim and Max Beckman, and will be later shown in Baltimore and St. Louis. The section will contain 15 pictures.

California Killer Suspect Taken Ill

LOS ANGELES, June 6.—(INS.)—David H. Clark, former deputy district attorney bound over for trial in connection with the slaying of Charles Crawford, prominent politician, and Herbert Spencer, newspaperman and magazine editor, was ill and confined to his bed today. He was reported suffering from a sore throat and a high fever. He is at liberty under $100,000 bail pending his trial.

700 St. Paul Orphans Plan Athletic Drill

More than 700 children of St. Paul's Orphan Asylum school will take part in the annual exhibition of physical education work which will be given next Sunday afternoon on the grounds of the home. Prof. Charles A. Gerber, director of physical education, has announced that a patriotic note will dominate the performance this year.

$35,000,000 Suit Filed by Woman

BOSTON, June 6.—(AP.)—Eunice M. Antonian made legal history here today by filing a suit for $35,000,000 in Suffolk Superior Court against the Boston Consolidated Gas Company for alleged personal injuries suffered by leakage of gas in her home in 1929. She was not represented by counsel.

Vacation Trips Offer Variety To Stowaways

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

There are some good propositions for stowaways this summer.

You can hide yourself in the crowd of presidential candidates. They're not going anywhere. But the food is good.

How about a trip to the North Pole with Sir Hubert Wilkins? Reduced fare for school teachers.

Or across the Pacific in the rumble of Lindy's plane? Plenty of cheering and free confetti.

Prof. Piccard is going to make another 10-mile jump in his aluminum gondola. No references required.

Or you can stow away in the Zep that is going to meet Wilkins at the North Pole. If you are a ventriloquist, leave your dummy home.

The week end cruises of the big ocean liners are also great for stowaways. These four-day trips are for practice in case the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed. The only trouble is that you must B Y O L.

If you are real thirsty we advise you to stow away in any of the big furniture trucks running between New York and other cities. The furniture they carry is all buffets.

And Red Hill is going over Niagara Falls in a barrel on the Fourth. Plenty of publicity, but don't make any dates for the fifth.

NEW AIR LINE HERE READY TO START SERVICE

Admiral Byrd Will Attend Ceremonies Inaugurating Capital Link Tomorrow.

The Pittsburgh-Washington passenger and mail air line will be inaugurated at Bettis Field tomorrow afternoon with Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, Postmaster General Walter F. Brown and a number of other celebrities participating. The program is directed by the Chamber of Commerce.

Two planes carrying 18 passengers are expected to arrive at the airport at 12:30 p. m. On board will be Brown, Thomas A. Dunn, Raymond A. Tucker, John F. Wolfinger, state commissioner on aeronautics, and Congressmen Clyde Kelly, Guy E. Campbell and Samuel A. Kendall.

MRS. THADEN ABOARD

Others in the party will be Assistant Postmaster General W. Irving Glover, William P. McCracken, former Assistant Secretary of Commerce in charge of aeronautics, and Mrs. Louise Thaden, Pittsburgh aviatrix.

Admiral Byrd, A. L. Humphrey, T. C. Foley, James Francis Burke and George Hahn will leave Bettis Field shortly after noon in two other planes to escort the Washington ships on their first flight.

CHRISTENED BY TWINS

A new nine-passenger tri-motored monoplane, piloted by R. B. Baker, senior pilot in the Pennsylvania Air Lines, Inc., will lead the flight from Washington. The plane is to be christened prior to the takeoff by the 5-year-old twin daughters of Earl B. Wadsworth, superintendent of the air mail.

On the first trip, approximately 10,000 letters, total weight 250 pounds, will be carried. Two other trips will be made tomorrow as every day, leaving Washington at 1:10 and 6:30 p. m.

A luncheon for 600 persons will be held in the Chamber of Commerce.

The program will be broadcast from KDKA, starting at 1:30 p. m.

BAPTISTS NAME LAYMAN HEAD

KANSAS CITY, June 6.—(AP.)—A lawyer, Mattison Boyd Jones, who lives in Glendale, Cal., was elected president of the Northern Baptist convention today.

He will succeed a minister, the Rev. Albert W. Beaver, D. D., of Rochester, N. Y.

Another layman, H. T. Sorg, of Newark, N. J., was elected first vice president. Other officers chosen were G. I. Neal, of Huntington, W. Va., second vice president; the Rev. M. A. Levy, of Pittsfield, Mass., corresponding secretary; the Rev. C. M. Gallup, Providence, R. I., recording secretary, and G. R. Judd, New York, treasurer.

The report of the resolutions committee, made public today, expressed interest in the suggested establishment of a national daily newspaper to handle news from a Christian and moral viewpoint.

One section protested against present-day cigaret advertising and called on Baptists to "discourage the growing use of tobacco in any form."

Minister's Daughter Kills Self With Gun

ST. LOUIS, June 6.—(AP.)—Mrs. Archibald C. Loud, 33, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Alfred Franklin Smith, of Nashville, Tenn., shot herself in the right temple in a bedroom of her home late yesterday and died without regaining consciousness at a hospital today. Dr. Smith is editor of the Christian Advocate at Nashville and a widely-known Methodist minister.

Mrs. Loud had been despondent since separation from her husband about six weeks ago.

Nebraska Honors Woman Educator

LINCOLN, Neb., June 6.—(AP.)—The University of Nebraska today conferred an honorary degree of doctor of laws on Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the Children's Bureau, of the United States Department of Labor. Miss Abbott, a native of Grand Island, Neb., received her masters degree from the university.

Free Verse Writer Wins His Bride With Couplet

BALTIMORE, June 6.—(AP.)—Wrote Ogden Nash, young New York free verse writer, in the introductory couplet of his latest book:

"What shall I do with So and So,
"She won't say yes and she won't say no."

"So and So"—otherwise Miss Frances Leonard—said yes today without qualification, however. She became the bride of Nash at the Church of the Redeemer.

The engagement was announced in March, not long after Nash's latest book of verse was published. He declined to admit today that Miss Leonard was its inspiration and the girl in the so-and-so couplet, but his friends said there was no doubt of it.

Miss Leonard, who is a graduate of the Barrington School, also studied in Paris. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Wirt Leonard, a granddaughter of the late Gov. and Mrs. E. E. Jackson, of Maryland, and a member of the Junior League.

Nash, former student at Harvard, connected with a New York publishing house and a magazine during his short literary career—he is 28—has been hailed by reviewers as the Lincoln of modern poetry, and his book called the emancipation proclamation of would-be poets who have hitherto labored under the delusion that poetry must follow some law of rhyme or meter.

He has succeeded in getting a rhyme for a line ending in "John D., Jr." It is "Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania."

Voting Machine In Danger, Harris To See Pinchot

State Senator Frank J. Harris expects to confer with Gov. Pinchot Monday before the latter acts on the amended Richards voting machine bill that would empower county commissioners to authorize the former Australian ballot system if, in their judgment, "voting machines are impossible or impractical."

The amendments also would permit election boards to open the polls with the dials indicating a number of persons had already voted, whereas the original intention was to have the dials set at zero before the voting began, Harris said:

"I understand the amendments were agreed to by the Philadelphia Committee of 70 and the Election Reform Association. If the attorney general decides they weaken the law I will ask Gov. Pinchot to veto the bill."

The amendments were made during the excitement of the closing days of the session and their full import not realized until recently. It was said the amendments were demanded by Philadelphia members and agreed to by proponents of the original measure in order to insure passage.

The Poole Engineering Company of Baltimore, which has a contract to deliver 1,100 voting machines for the fall primary, has announced that the first delivery of eight machines would be made by truck tomorrow.

M'GREEVY WEDS CLEVELAND GIRL

Announcement was made today of the marriage of John T. McGreevy, chief booking representative for Warner Brothers theaters in the Pittsburgh district, to Miss Val Theis, of Cleveland, O. They were married at the bride's home.

Mr. McGreevy

The romance started eight years ago in Cleveland when McGreevy and Miss Theis worked in the same office. Ten days ago McGreevy went to New York to attend a meeting of Warner Brothers officials, and from there flew to Cleveland for the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. McGreevy will leave June 15 for Troutdale, Col., and upon returning to Pittsburgh will take a cottage at Conneaut Lake for the summer.

Stampede of Aliens To Quit U. S. Denied

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(INS.)—Reports that thousands of indigent aliens residing in the United States had made application to the Labor Department for transportation to their native countries were characterized as "absurd" today by immigration officials.

Harry E. Hull, commissioner general of immigration, said that less than 900 applications of all nationalities had been received, and less than 700 had been granted.

Lincoln Dedication Program Announced

HARRODSBURG, Ky., June 6.—(AP.)—The Marriage Temple, housing the cabin in which the parents of Abraham Lincoln were married 125 years ago will be dedicated at Pioneer Memorial State Park here next Friday with the federal government and four states represented. The program was announced today by the Kentucky State Park Commission, the Kentucky Pioneer Memorial Association and the Harrodsburg Historical Society.

Single Patent Court Proposed

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP.)—Creation of a single court of patent appeals ranking second only to the Supreme Court was recommended today by the patents committee of the American Engineering Council.

A bill establishing such a court has been drafted by the committee. Establishment of the new court would abolish jurisdiction of the Circuit Courts of Appeal in patent cases.

De Mille on First Vacation in 18 Years

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 6.—(AP.)—Cecil B. DeMille, film director, was en route today with Mrs. DeMille to Europe on what he said is the first vacation since he came here 18 years ago to make his first motion picture.

They will stop at Chester, Pa., where De Mille will receive an honorary degree of Doctor of Letters from the Pennsylvania Military College.

Erie Man Named on Penn State Board

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., June 6.—(AP.)—Edwin W. Nick, of Erie, today was elected a member of the board of trustees of Pennsylvania State College at a meeting of 200 delegates of county agricultural and engineering societies. He replaces Harvey S. Adams, of Butler. Among members of the board re-elected were Edwin S. Bayard and John C. Cosgrove and George H. Deike, Pittsburgh.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT HORSE SHOW GAY, COLORFUL

Festive Air and Costumes of Latest Mode Make Vivid Picture at Final Session.

By BERNICE SHINE

Though the annual Sewickley horse show is always a thrilling event for grown-ups it is particularly exciting for the children. The third day of the show is always for children.

Yesterday was the final day in the Allegheny Country Club show ring, and very gay it was, with the sun smiling down on a huge gathering.

An orchestra playing gay music, and the vivid banners displayed around the grandstand added to the festive air of the children's day.

PARTICIPATE IN EVENTS

Small Anne Callory rode in the show, as did Mrs. Lewis A. Park and young Stella Coulter from Greensburg, who was there with Miss Margaret Coulter, who participated in several events.

Miss Margaret Holdship was in the grandstand, wearing a frock of blue and white crepe with a blue hat, and with her were Mary and Barbara Clause, very interested in ice cream cones.

Susan Burgwin, daughter of the J. O. Burgwins, rode in the Shetland pony class. At the ringside was Miss Elizabeth George, wearing a white jersey frock with a green coat and matching felt hat, with her sister, Miss Rebecca George, wearing a navy blue wool suit with a matching turban.

Mrs. Cyrus R. Miller chose a smart white boucle suit with a green and yellow motif at the neckline, and a white straw hat.

WATCH FROM AUTO

Sitting on a tonneau of a car in a parking space were Diane and Sally Anne Smith, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore F. Smith.

In a box was Mrs. John W. Lawrence who had chosen a green knitted costume with a white openwork straw hat. Mrs. J. O. Burgwin wore a pirate blue skirt with a romany striped blouse, and Mrs. Samuel Adams, Jr., a very smart white crepe dress.

Mrs. Dudley Livingston was in the R. T. M. McCready car, wearing a frock of rust colored jersey with brief sleeves, and a white hat, with Miss Margaret McCready.

Miss Ruth and Miss Virginia Willock were strolling near the grandstand and Ruth wore a suit of white linen with a white turban, and her sister was smart in white eylet batiste with a white turban. Miss Caroline Crittenden was among the spectators, wearing white crepe, as was Mrs. H. C. Bughman, in pink and white linen with a white picture hat.

PINK PIQUE, GREEN CREPE

Mrs. W. A. Galbraith, sitting in a box, wore pink 'pique, and with her was Mrs. H. Horton Van Voorhis, in printed green crepe with a hat of green straw.

In the William Christopher Robinson box were Mrs. Robinson, very chic in a yellow boucle suit with a matching hat of straw, and her daughter, Miss Mary Robinson, in a deep apricot boucle suit with a smart bolero jacket.

U. S. CONSULATE IN CUBA MOBBED

SANTIAGO, Cuba, June 6.—(INS.)—The American consulate here was broken into today by a mob of hungry and anti-government demonstrators who were fleeing from troops and police.

The consulate door was broken down by the leaders of the mob who were seeking protection from the police and troops, but no other damage was done. Vice Consul Harry W. Story finally prevailed upon the leaders to leave the building, but not before a number of them had used threatening language when informed the consulate could not afford them protection from the police.

The trouble started with the explosion of a bomb in a street near the consulate during a hunger demonstration by anti-government elements. Police and troops were rushed to the scene and dispersed the mob.

Returned to the street, the crowd was broken up into small knots by the police and run out of the neighborhood.

Mace Leaves for Trip to Holy Land

James C. Mace, retiring religious work secretary of the Downtown Branch Y. M. C. A., has left Pittsburhg with his wife for a trip to the Holy Land, the gift of intimate friends. The gift was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Mace at a dinner given by their friends last night in the Downtown Y. M. C. A. Presentation was made by Ralph W. Harbison, president of the Y. M. C. HOOVER SEEKS TO AVERT NAVAL MANPOWER CUT

Studies Means of Reducing Expenses Without Laying Off Men; Drop Stations.

ORANGE, Va., June 6.—(AP.)—President Hoover today called together the ranking officials of the Navy at his Rapidan camp to discuss possible ways of curtailing the expenses of that department during the coming fiscal year.

The chief executive came to the camp last night and Secretary Adams arrived shortly before lunch time today in an autogiro plane piloted by Assistant Secretary Ingalls, in charge of naval aeronautics.

In addition to telling the President about his experiences on the flight, Adams was prepared to report that the Navy had saved approximately $7,000,000 during the fiscal year of 1931 and "was anxious" to make any further saving possible.

Chief among the topics discussed was the possibility of abandoning a number of shore stations considered useless by the Navy. A concentration of activities in certain strategic centers also was discussed.

Neither President Hoover nor Secretary Adams felt there was any need for reduction of Navy personnel or for any delay in building the Navy's strength up to the limits set by the London arms conference.

The President brought with him Hugh Gibson, ambassador to Belgium, and Admiral Pratt, chief of naval operations. Other Navy officials, in addition to Adams and Ingalls, arrived today, including Assistant Secretary Jahncke and Rear Admiral McLean.

Representative Simmons of Nebraska, and Mrs. Simmons also were week-end guests. They took no part in the naval conferences.

LIQUOR DEALER KILLED, WIFE DENIES GUILT

Youth Confesses Part In 'Butcher Murder' But Places Blame on Widow.

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP.)—A trail of human fragments revealing a new Brooklyn "butcher murder" led tonight to the door of young Charles Obietes and past him to the widow of the murdered man, Lena Zubenski.

Obietes confessed today that he slew Andrew Zubenski, speakeasy owner, dismembered the body and over a period of two days disposed of the parts in various sections of the city. He said the crime was done at the urge of Mrs. Zubenski and he was paid $300 for doing it.

The motive, Obietes told police, was Mrs. Zubenski's fear that her husband intended to return to Cleveland, O., where they lived until eight years ago, and "tell" about the death of her first husband, Adam Vilentis.

Mrs. Zubenski persisted in denials of any knowledge of her husband's whereabouts. She said he left home March 25. She went to the morgue, viewed the assembled parts of the body and said it was not that of her husband.

Obietes was questioned more than eight hours before he confessed to Capt. Carey, of the Brooklyn police. He fixed the date of the slaying as March 25. Two days later came the first discovery that murder had been done; a human thigh, wrapped in newspaper, was found on the Williamsburg Bridge.

Subsequently other parts of the body were found.

Police took Obietes this afternoon to the lot where the body was dismembered.

"This is the place," he said, and then collapsed.

Zubenski in 1922 was bartender for Mrs. Zubenski's first husband, Vilentis, in Cleveland. On May 23, 1922, Vilentis' body was found in his backyard. He had been killed with an ax blow. Zubenski and Vilentis' widow were questioned, but permitted to go. They came to Brooklyn and established a speakeasy, police said.

Mrs. Zubenski, who is being held with Obietes, is 43 years old. Obietes is 26.

Robinson Heads Men's 57 Club

T. A. Robinson was elected president of the Men's 57 Club at its annual meeting in H. J. Heinz Company aduitorium Saturday. Other officers elected follow: First vice president, F. C. Heinz; second vice president, G. F. Spetz; secretary, R. B. Johnston; treasurer, Victor Kent; director, C. K. Schmidt.

The meeting was followed by a boat excursion, outing and sports program on Fourteen-Mile Island, during which O. F. Mayer, retiring president, was presented with a cake baked by O. E. Brunner, a club member.

BROADWAY EPISODES

By MARK HELLINGER

Once They're in the Frame—

WHEN YOU ARE unfortunate enough to get a reputation, there is but one of two things to be done. You can either live up to your reputation—or you can try to live it down. There are no half-way measures. Once the public gets an idea about you—regardless of whether the idea is true or false—you must stand or fall by that idea. Do you get what I mean? If you do, I congratulate you. Because I'm not quite sure of what I'm talking about, myself.

Maybe I can clear it up a trifle. Consider, for instance, a little lady named Helen Morgan. Her history, I imagine, is pretty well known to the entire country. Graduating from the chorus, she became a great attraction in night life. She sang sad songs in a brilliant manner—but she hit upon a little trick in connection with her delivery. She always sat upon a piano as she went through her routine.

As Helen grew more famous that piano thing grew to be a gag. The girl became a great vaudeville star. When Ziegfeld produced "Show Boat," one of his greatest hits, Helen almost walked off with the show. A year or so ago they turned her into a picture star and I thought she was very grand.

In other words, Miss Morgan is an excellent actress. One of the very best, I think, on the stage today. But nobody is wise enough to fashion a play around her. No producer has been shrewd enough to forget her voice and cast her in a straight emotional role. And do you know why? Because Broadway feels that the public will not accept her as anything but a piano-sitting songstress.

Thus, ironically enough, the very thing that brought her fame is now holding her back. It's nonsensical, of course—but there it is. Some day some manager who is just a little wiser than the rest will give Miss Morgan the opportunity she should have. And the town will be amazed.

Right now, however, she's in a certain frame. And once you're in that frame, you have a devil of a time getting out . . .

About a week ago, Al Jolson, head man in show business for the last 20 years, closed his show, the "Wonder Bar," until September. He had played it on Broadway for some 14 weeks. And in these times, a run of three and a half months is no mean achievement. Especially when you're asking $6.60 a seat at the box office.

Jolson should have closed that show two weeks before he did. His doctors warned him that his throat was in bad shape. But Al refused to give up. In order to keep the entire company working, he even went so far as to give two or three performances without singing. Which, as you can readily understand, didn't please the audiences to any great extent. So Al returned to singing, which he shouldn't have done. A short time later, he was compelled to close the show.

Now it so happens that, as far as sudden show closings are concerned, Jolson is in a frame. He once received a vast amount of publicity when, some eight or nine years ago, he agreed to make a motion picture. It was long before the talkie era—and when Al got a flash of himself in the first reel, he promptly set out for Europe before they could start on the second.

That started the reputation. Broadway began to insert him in the frame. When, two years ago, Ruby Keeler Jolson was playing the title role in "Show Girl" and was suddenly compelled to undergo a serious operation, the arching of the eyebrows was beautiful to behold.

"Aha," cried the wiseacres, "Jolson has pulled his wife out of the show. We knew it all the time. We knew it. We knew it. We knew it. See?"

Thus you have the background. On the night the "Wonder Bar" closed, I was with Al in his apartment. The man was tired and worn out. His voice was in such bad shape that he could hardly talk.

"You're a fool," I told him, bluntly. "You know as well as I that you shouldn't have attempted to keep going when you were in no condition to stand the strain. Look at yourself now. What sense did it have?"

He shrugged his shooulders.

"Times are too tough for many of those folks in the show," he replied. "I wanted to keep going as long as I could."

I left him a short while later and strolled down Broadway. On the corner of Forty-sixth street I met a wiseacre. One of those men, you know, who can give you all the answers before you ask the questions.

He grabbed me.

"Did you hear about Jolson?" he cried, gleefully. "Closed his show. Yes, sir. Walked right out on it and threw all those people out of work."

I smiled to myself. Why argue with this man? This was real Broadway. Where the greatest joy arrives when you can throw mud in the face of the guy on the pedestal.

"Are you sure he walked out?" I asked. "How do you know he isn't really ill?"

The wiseacre winked.

"Everybody knows it," was his reply. "Hasn't he got the reputation of doing just what he's done?"

Fair? Far from it. But there you are. Once you're in the frame—

A few days ago a young lady named Agnes O'Loughlin walked into this office. She was on the verge of tears. Agnes has been known as a Ziegfeld beauty for some time. And when a Ziegfeld beauty is on the verge of tears I grow very nervous. I don't mind beauties. And I don't mind tears. But when you put them both together you spell trouble.

"Make them do something, Mark!" she cried. "Make them stop printing my name in the papers. Will you do that for me?"

I very gravely explained that Mr. Hoover, Mr. Lindbergh, Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Tammany Young, all tossed together wouldn't be equal to the task she requested. After making certain that I wasn't kidding, she went on with her complaint.

The complaint was a legitimate one. Agnes had been in the newspapers many times. She made the front pages when Mr. Jack Dempsey took a punch at Mr. Joe Benjamin because Mr. Joe Benjamin liked Agnes and so did Mr. Jack Dempsey. She made the front pages a second time when she sued Mr. Rudy Vallee, the actor. Agnes claimed that Rudy promised to join her in the bonds of holy wedlock and promptly forgot about it when he met some hussy in Hollywood. She asked much balm to soothe her aching heart—and the newspapers reported it all in expert fashion.

Concerning these two items, Miss O'Loughlin was not unduly excited. What the young lady was so nervous about is the fact that the papers persist in speaking about her in connection with Jack Diamond.

There's a reason for it. When Jack was filled with bullets in the Hotel Monticello some time back, a girl named Marion Roberts was very close to the scene. Feeling fairly certain that the police might turn up within a month or so, Marion decided to leave the hotel for some other spot.

Having worked with Agnes in two or three Ziegfeld shows, Miss Roberts proceeded to stroll to Miss O'Loughlin's home. And there she sat, talking of this and that until the police finally came and took her away. The case was of great interest to newspaper readers—and the papers very naturally used Miss O'Loughlin's name and picture in connection with the various stories.

Since that time Mr. Diamond has been staging a bullet marathon. So many shots have been fired into him without killing him that he is now looked upon as some sort of a myth. I don't know what Jack thinks about it, but it must be his opinion that a myth is as good as a mile. At any rate, the papers have never forgotten Agnes' connection with the Diamond case. And that peeves her.

"I met Jack Diamond once in my life," she said, "and just because Marion came to my house they keep talking about me in gangster stories. Was it my fault that she came to my house? Did I know anything about any shooting? Why don't the papers leave me alone? Is it fair?"

"No," I told her, wearily, "it's not. But there's nothing in the world you can do about it. Whenever your name is used in a newspaper that thing will come up. As long as you live and there are newspaper morgues in existence, reporters will picture you as a gangster girl.

"It's just one of those things, Agnes. You're in a frame—and the public will not let you out."

Agnes grew indignant.

"Who's been framed?" she cried.

"Let it go," I murmured . . .

Sometimes the individuals pick their frames and do their best to live up to them. Take Peggy Joyce. What? All right, I'll take her. Admired and liked by most men, she is cordially hated by most women. But that's all right with our Peggy. She has a part to play, and she's been playing it successfully for many years. (Well, not too many, Peggy.)

The reason why so many women dislike Peggy, I suppose, is because they envy her. She's really a dog-gone good sport at heart and can be a real pal on many occasions. It would be extremely easy for her to have women like her—but why should she? It wouldn't fit in with the role she has been enacting. Peggy's a shrewd showman. She stays in the frame . . .

Far different is the role of Francis (Two-Gun) Crowley, the cop-killer. Just a kid with the brain of a child, Crowley must die in the chair sometime in July. He started out to create a frame for himself. He wanted to be a big shot. His idea of achieving a reputation was to kill policemen.

That boy was easy to read. When the police effected his dramatic capture, I printed the thought that the boy would surely make an effort to escape at some spot during his trial. He did exactly that.

From now until his electrocution, Crowley will be thinking of something startling to say to the newspapermen as he is led to the chair. He will not find it hard to die because death will come to him as he visualizes the headlines on the statements he has just made.

He will be happy. Because he exits from life as the hero of the setting he created for himself . . .

On the other hand, consider a few people who have attempted to step from one frame to another. Mary Pickford, for instance.

For more years than seem possible, Mary was "America's Sweetheart," if you please. The public saw her with dollies and other kiddies. Times and customs changed, but Mary went right on being successful with her dollies and the neighbor's children.

The talkies arrived and Mary stepped out of her frame. She played a ruined girlie in "Coquette." It was all just one big mistake on Miss Pickford's part. She should have gone on with the old stuff. If she had, the audiences would have continued to flock to see her for many years—even if she was playing with the dollies and the neighbor's children from a wheel chair . . .

Paul Kelly, a great actor, killed Dorothy Mackaye's husband during a drunken argument on the Coast. He served his term for the deed and he has been a very penitent man since the crime. I sat with a certain picture official the other afternoon and suggested Kelly for a great role in a new picture. The official sighed.

"He's the best man in the world for the part," he told me, "but I can't use him. He was always a very sweet guy—but he stepped out of character in that fatal fight. Now the public will never forgive him." . . . . . .

Jackie Coogan, in his day, was the "Skippy" of the present time. He was just as big a rage and just as much a popular sensation.

Coogan is still in pictures, but he means very little. The public doesn't go for him to any extent. He fell from his frame as time rolled along. His great sin was in growing up . . . . . .

Thus the frame. Thus the public.

It's a game nobody can beat . . .

FALL PLANTING URGED TO GET BEST RESULTS

Bulbs, Tubers Flourish With Early Spring Start; Leaf Protection Required

By EDWARD C. VICK

Mr. Vick

TRY NEW THINGS

PROTECT WITH LEAVES

The tubers are not ... require protection ... leaves or other litter ... be placed in the spring ... is not always possible ... the tubers at that time.

Anemone coronaria ... the poppy anemone is ... referred to. The plants are about nine inches high with attractive leaves cut in narrow segments. The colors of the flowers include red, scarlet, crimson, pink, purple and violet in extraordinary shades and combinations of color.

Give them a warm deep loam in a sunny location, setting the tubers two inches deep and four inches apart. Plant anemones in good sized groups for the most wonderful effect as each plant produces as many as 50 flowers.

Make the soil fairly firm after planting as the plants are more likely to succeed in loose soil.

Before making large plantings it may be well to start with a few tubers to be sure that the proper culture may be given before venturing on a larger scale.

Mr. Hearst Discusses Causes and Cure for the Depression

Wildcat Capitalization Is One Of Reasons Advanced For Collapse

NEW YORK, June 6.

FOLLOWING is the full text of the radio address delivered by William Randolph Hearst from New York City on June 2, 1931, through Station WABC and its associated radio stations throughout the United States:

THE basis of prosperity is the ability of the public to buy, plus, of course, the willingness of the public to buy.

In other words, prosperity is based on the purchasing power of the public. When the public buys from the stores, the stores buy from the factories, the factories buy the raw materials produced by the farms and the mines.

All these forms of activity employ labor, and the money circulates with profits to all classes.

We were in the midst of such a prosperous period. Why did it not continue?

We do not have to go to the war in China and the silver situation in India to find the reason.

There may be contributing causes in those distant regions, but the real reason is right here at home.

The cause is not lack of money here, either. We have today all the money we had in the country in times of prosperity.

We have, in addition, further debt payments to us by foreign nations, and we have, in addition again, all the money that foreign investors from Europe, South America and elsewhere poured into the booming American stock market and left here when the stock collapse came and wiped them out.

What then is the cause of the collapse?

Not merely over-speculation, but over capitalization.

The people were in a speculative mood. They would buy anything. They would absorb any issue, without regard to basic values and dividends.

As a consequence, all sorts of cats-and-dogs were unloaded on the market and sold to the public, which bit at them like hungry fish at a cotton fly or a tin spoon.

Billions of dollars were taken from hard-earned hoardings of little speculators and stored away in the already bulging vaults of the big speculators.

Not only were companies formed of amalgamated cats-and-dogs and sold to the public at a hundred times their value, but investment trusts were formed, and after the public appetite for cats-and-dogs had waned, the investment trust, guided by the big speculators, absorbed the remainder of the issue of amalgamated cats-and-dogs, which the public would not knowingly buy.

In one instance, sixty million shares of amalgamated cats-and-dogs were unloaded on the public at $20 a share—$1,200,000,000 worth of worthlessness handed to the public in return for good money.

But all the capitalization that tended to bring about hard times was not over-capitalization, and certainly not all of it wildcat capitalization.

The wildcat capitalization was mainly conducted by the great firms in whose honor the public had misplaced confidence.

Mere over-capitalization, however, was conducted by many institutions with less fame and more morality, and finally a certain amount of legitimate but unwarranted capitalization was practiced by almost every institution.

The marvelous improvement of modern machinery and the wonderful advances in modern methods of mass production have caused almost everything to be produced at, to use a round figure, half its former cost.

But the sales price remained the same or was even higher.

Consequently the profits of industry were greatly increased.

Who should have had the advantage of this improvement in machinery and methods, this enormous increase in products and lower cost of production?

Obviously some reasonable part of it should have gone to the management of industry, but the greater part of it should have gone to the working masses.

In other words, the increased profits should have been distributed largely in higher wages and shorter working hours.

If this had been done, the shorter working hours would obviously have prevented any lack of employment, because a greater number of men would have been employed to fill out the working week.

And if wages had increased in proportion to the productivity of modern machinery and the consequent increase in the profits of industry, the purchasing power of the public would have been enhanced and the consumption of all kinds of goods and products would have been maintained at a high level, or raised to a still higher level.

But when profits in industry increased, let us say from six per cent to twenty-five per cent, labor got but a small and greatly grudged proportion of that increase, with practically no reduction of working hours, and all of the rest of the increased profits were transformed into increased capitalization.

If a business which was making six per cent had come, through the use of modern machinery and modern methods which decreased the cost of production, to make twenty-five per cent, the main result of that increase of profits was a four-fold issue of stock, or as large an issue of stock as would still keep the business on a six per cent basis.

When the business, despite the increased profits, had thus been reduced to a six per cent basis, through a four-fold issue of stock, on which the business now had to pay dividends, of course there was no money left to increase wages and shorten the hours of the employes.

In other words, there was no money left to build up the purchasing power of the masses and MAINTAIN THE CONDITIONS WHICH MADE FOR PROSPERITY.

Excess capitalization took money away from the masses WHEN MONEY OUGHT TO HAVE BEEN GIVEN TO THEM IN THE WAY OF INCREASED WAGES AND SHORTER HOURS.

In fact, the supply of money in the hands of the public, which creates the purchasing power of the community, was sapped by added capitalization and over-capitalization instead of having that supply of the public's money increased by a more liberal distribution of profits in wages.

If profits had been distributed in wages, prosperity would have been maintained and increased.

We would have had for the masses of the public not only a full dinner pail but a full pocketbook.

But when the money in the hands of the public was not increased by higher wages but diminished by the sale to the public of inflated securities, we created what we have now—an empty pocketbook and in many cases an empty dinner pail, and in some cases a breadline.

Gradually, very gradually, conditions such as these mend.

Eventually panic subsides. Purchasing is necessarily resumed.

The same clothes, the same gowns, the same shoes, the same automobiles, the same furnishings do not last forever.

Money is gradually withdrawn by those who have it from the savings banks to buy first necessities and then luxuries.

Confidence begins to be restored. Purchases are made at the shops, the shops order goods from the factories, the factories buy materials from the mines and the farms; labor in all these activities is employed and the cycle is resumed, which gradually restores prosperity.

A dominant question before the country today is: Can the GOVERNMENT aid in the restoration of this cycle leading to prosperity? Our great Secretary of the Treasury says the Government can do little or nothing. Obviously the Government has done little or nothing, but obviously it could be a determining factor in the situation.

Anyone who understands the meaning of prosperity and the reason why high wages tend to make prosperity can see at once HOW the Government could act and WHY the government should act.

A gigantic appropriation by the Government, not for a dole but for the employment of a vast amount of labor at the prevailing rate of prosperity wages, would not only stabilize wages but would immediately set the machinery in motion for the restoration of prosperity; provided, of course, that the Government

Employment on Large Scale Just Now Would Restore National Prosperity

EXPENDED the appropriation and did not set on it perpetually as a deluded hen on a porcelain door knob.

Mr. Hoover REALIZES how prosperity could be restored. He has discussed the situation understandingly. Still neither the procedure nor the proposals of the administration have been on a scale at all commensurate with the magnitude of the problem.

If at the late session of Congress Mr. Hoover had said not merely that Congress should NOT appropriate money for the dole but that it COULD and SHOULD appropriate as many billions as it pleased for employment, and if he had taken those billions in sufficient quantity and had hastened to put them into employing labor in sufficient quantity, we would already have prosperity well on its way.

The government has not been devoid of KNOWLEDGE. It has merely been inadequate in ACTION.

The whole nation knows that if sufficient labor were promptly employed at good wages, buying at the stores would promptly be resumed, the stores would immediately order from the factories, the factories would immediately order from the mines and the farms and the great flywheel of prosperity would be set in steady and sturdy motion.

There is only one objection raised against the Government taking action to employ labor on a great scale, and that is — where is the Government to get the money?

This, however, is not an actual objection, because the Government has shown how easily it can get money even under present conditions.

Recent Government loans have been MORE THAN THREE TIMES OVER-SUBSCRIBED.

A five-billion dollar loan would be OVER-SUBSCRIBED.

There is plenty of money in the country, plenty of money in the savings banks and the people have as much confidence in government securities as they have in the savings banks.

Five billion dollars promptly spent in the employment of labor would promptly restore prosperity.

When Mr. Hoover was a candidate for the Presidency he won many to his support by the magnificent program of public improvements which he described as the main feature of his policy.

This program was comprehensive and complete, including highways, waterways, flood control and water and power conservation.

It covered every part of the country and embraced the inland waterways of the East, the Columbia river development of the Northwest, the water and power dams of the Southwest and a gigantic plan for both flood control and water and power conservation on the Mississippi river and its tributaries.

Mr. Hoover declared that this scheme, BENEFITING all parts of the country, would secure the united SUPPORT of all parts of the country and obtain without difficulty the necessary appropriations.

What a splendid thought was this plan of national development for any time, but what a particularly glorious idea for the present moment of depression, when this tremendous scheme of construction and this immense employment of labor would not only bestow its boon upon the various sections of the country directly affected but would, through the distribution of vast wealth in wages, tend promptly to restore prosperity.

But Mr. Hoover appears since his election to have abandoned to some degree his own ideas and to have adopted an attitude more in conformity with the less liberal ideas of the international bankers.

It is perhaps narrowly natural for the international bankers to prefer to see American money go into foreign bonds, on which these bankers get a heavy commission, than into American bonds, on which they do not get such a commission.

But Mr. Hoover, as President of the United States, should realize and, of course, does patriotically realize, that the money which goes into American bonds goes into building up American interests and prosperity, while the money which goes into foreign bonds goes into building up foreign interests and institutions to COMPETE with American interests and DIMINISH American prosperity.

It is perhaps natural, or at least usual, for the international bankers to be devoid of sentiment where commissions are concerned; but it is eminently proper and patriotic for an American President to think first of American interests and American growth and development and American prosperity, as Mr. Hoover thought of these great objectives when he once outlined his splendid plan for national public improvements.

It would be inspiring if Mr. Hoover would think of these patriotic purposes NOW, regardless even of Mr. Mellon's ultraconservative plans for the conduct of the Treasury Department.

Mr. Mellon's ideas of what can NOT be done by the Government to dissipate the depression are not quite as inspiring or convincing as his ideas usually are. The distinguished Secretary of the Treasury seems to be concerned more about his record in reducing the national debt than he is about the far GREATER question of restoring prosperity.

This is not a time to reduce the national debt through burdensome taxation and thereby REDUCE prosperity.

It is a time to INCREASE the national debt and INCREASE the expenditure of the Government in public works in the employment of labor and thereby INCREASE prosperity.

Then out of prosperity to PAY OFF THE DEBT.

Prosperity means increased income for the individual, increased value of property, increased taxable national assets. Out of those increased incomes and values the Government would eventually get, even with moderate taxation, ITS increased receipts.

And if the Government desires further to increase its income, let it end this folly of prohibition which does not prohibit, but does corrupt, and substitute Government control of the manufacture and distribution of alcoholic beverages, and so secure for itself, on the basis of the figures of Canada's excise income, an additional income of a billion dollars a year.

That excise income to the United States Government of a billion dollars a year would in itself pay off in five years the five billion dollars borrowed and spent to restore prosperity.

Mr. Mellon is wrong when he says the Government cannot do anything in this emergency.

The Government could do EVERYTHING if it had the intelligence and the activity and the unselfishness and the patriotism to do it—not merely to TALK about it, but to DO it.

France belongs to the first category. Its geographical position exposes it dangerously to sudden attack. Not only has it two separate sea fronts to protect and not only must its regular communications with North Africa be maintained at all costs, but over its land frontier, innumerable invasions have passed, four of them between 1814 and 1914.

This frontier is 75 miles from the capital of an immensely centralized country. To reach Paris is to reach the very nerve root of the nation. Thus, the thundering rush on Paris remains the dream of all of those of Europe who fondle ideas of revenge and domination by violence.

Only a national army rooted in the depths of the land can offer invincible resistance to unexpected aggression; resistance in which the invasion would stick fast. A national army means conscription, trained reserves, substantial stocks of arms, munitions and provisions. The budget for such a defensive organization naturally is high.

To return to President Hoover's comparison, let us place side by side the effective forces under the flag immediately before the war and those serving today. We leave aside overseas troops, whose

Sen. Smoot Sees High Wage Scale Here Threatened by American Plants Abroad

Cites Danger to Labor If Lower Tariff Aids Foreign Competition Financed by U. S. Capital

IN THE FIRST of two articles by Senator Smoot which appeared last Sunday he presented his views on the rapid expansion in foreign countries of industrial plants financed by American capital and the potential danger to American industry at home from such enterprises. In his second article which appears herewith Senator Smoot analyzes further the trend of American financial and industrial operations abroad and the ruinous economic consequences here at home as he sees them.

By REED SMOOT

United States Senator from Utah, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and Co-Author of the Hawley-Smoot Tariff Bill.

In an Interview with Annabel Lee.

THE LATEST FIGURES from "American Investments" show that American investments in factories and businesses in foreign countries now approximate eight billions, invested chiefly in manufacturing, selling, mining, sugar production, railroads, power companies, etc.

About 1,200 branch factories valued at approximately one and a half billions of dollars have been established in foreign countries by American groups. The number and value of these foreign factories and businesses are growing so rapidly as to leave one gasping with amazement.

It is probable that 1931 and 1932 will see additional American capital invested in foreign businesses and manufactories at a rate so stupendous as to cause all previous figures to pale into insignificance. In 1930 our export of American capital abroad was much more than a billion dollars.

Now let us analyze briefly just what actual effects may be expected from the establishment of these American-financed foreign industries:

It is the broad trend of affairs underneath all these billions that are going abroad that demands attention, because the money is only the outward expression of that trend. One of the consequences is already obvious. To the extent of billions of dollars, the American worker is deprived of employment, and he not only suffers a loss but he faces a danger.

The groups who invest their money in industries abroad naturally want those industries to pay profits. To pay profits those industries must have markets. And, as has been said, of all the world's markets the American market is the greatest and the richest. It is obvious that the following effects must flow from this constantly increasing stream of American gold being sent into the establishment of foreign industries:

1. The billions thus invested are taken out of circulation in the United States and are put into circulation in foreign countries. Some of this money, of course, flows back to us in payment for our exports.

2. The taxable wealth thus created in these industries is lost to the United States and is gained for foreign countries.

3. The money paid to foreign labor to manufacture the products of those industries is taken out of circulation in the United States and is put into circulation in foreign countries.

4. Every job held by a low-wage foreign laborer means one less job at high wage for the American worker.

5. The product of these American-owned foreign industries necessarily will serve foreign markets first, thereby depriving American industries of those markets to just the extent that the foreign markets are served by these foreign-American industries which otherwise would buy in America.

Tariff Foes

Entrepreneurs Would Seek Free Trade Here

6. The American working masses, therefore, are again faced with a low-wage competition in this regard.

7. If, and when, these international industrialists succeed in breaking down our protective tariff system and invade the American market with cheaper foreign-made goods, no man may say to what extent our own industry will be paralyzed.

U. S. SENATOR JAMES J. DAVIS, former Secretary of Labor, whose industrial views Senator Smoot quotes in the accompanying article.

The American worker is thus faced with a possible competition from the lower paid foreign worker that he cannot hope to withstand.

The tariff becomes more and more the chief hope of the American laboring man, and if American money is to galvanize foreign industry to compete with American industry in the American market, then our tariff system not only becomes vastly more important, but that system itself is in serious danger.

This American money invested abroad has come from industries which in the past have been protected by the tariff, and the natural temptation of those industrialists who are now putting their money abroad will be for them to turn against that tariff and break it down.

There are definite indications that such a trend is under way now. I could cite half a dozen industries which rose to great importance because their products were protected by the tariff and were sold in the protected American market at a price which yielded a good profit to the manufacturers and good wages to their workers. But in time those industries exhausted the raw materials available here in our country and bought vast tracts of land and set up manufacturing plants in other countries.

Wage Question

Lower Standard of Living Threatens Labor

Now those groups want the tariff on their products reduced because, they say, they cannot pay the duties on their foreign-made products and sell those products at so large a profit in the American market. Some of the one-time strongest advocates of a high protective tariff have now become its most bitter enemies.

An outstanding question is, if wealthy Americans are ultimately to own or control the rest of the world, what are they going to do with and to their own America? Putting it more bluntly, are the wealthy Americans about to turn on the American workers?

Another question which requires pondering is whether or not the international financiers—consciously or unconsciously engaged in an imperialistic economic campaign—are internationally-minded to that extent that they would be willing to level all living, working and wage conditions throughout the world.

If they are so minded, then unquestionable danger threatens this country, because the standards of living and labor in America are so far above those of the masses of any other country of the world that any process of reduction to a common level, while it might in some slight degree elevate the living and working standards of other countries, would necessarily greatly lower the living and working standards of this country.

In past years we have had reason to be well satisfied with the state of our country, for in the main we have been prosperous. But it remains an indisputable fact that we have not yet learned to so distribute our wealth that each and every one can share in what he earns and deserves. While that ideal may be long in becoming a reality, we certainly can improve the present situation.

There are students of the situation, whose estimates should be accurate, who assert that if the class not sharing in our prosperity were searched out they, with their dependents, would number in normal times probably 10,000,000 persons. They would be found largely among what is termed common labor classes, and in the so-called "white collar" classes.

Many well-known economists are urging that here is a wide-open opportunity for some of this American money now going abroad to be used for the payment of better wages to American workmen. They urge such a course not as a mere humanitarian measure, but on the ground that it would be good, profitable business, because the poorly paid worker is a poor buyer in the market, and an increase in his wages means an increase in his buying capacity.

Expatriation

Emigration of Money May Denude Industries

Senator James J. Davis, former Secretary of Labor, has uttered some very poignant truths on this subject. He has this to say of the situation which now confronts America in the combined dangers of American investments in foreign industries setting up new competition for American working men, and the displacement of human labor by machinery:

"The employer of no great vision but of great selfishness may seek to increase his gains by cutting the wages of those he employs to run his automatic machinery. The steel maker who reduces wages is also reducing the ability of his employees to buy the automobiles and other articles that use his steel. This is so in every one of our industries, so closely are they all now interlocked.

"The truth is that wages should not only be kept where they are but good wages should be passed along more evenly and justly than they now are. A nation is not truly prosperous if its prosperity rests with a few great corporations at the top. And no country is safe where these great concerns tend to become fewer in number but greater in scope, and come more and more under the control of fewer and fewer big men."

It should be observed here that this danger becomes manifestly greater when the control of those industries vests in the hands of men who are engaged in establishing industries abroad because they can secure cheaper raw materials and labor.

The natural tendency for these men would be to close their less profitable plants in this country and continue the more profitable ones abroad if they could break down the tariff system, invade this market, and reap a golden harvest by so doing.

The question now is whether or not these few men would have the vision to look far enough into the future to see that by breaking down the industrial activity of this country they would inevitably break down the purchasing power of our domestic market, or whether, content to "get it all now" they would be willing to see this happen.

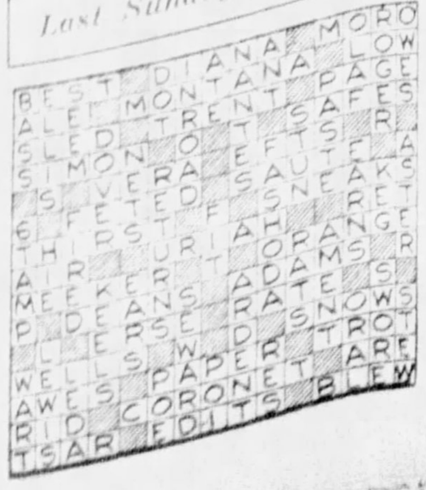
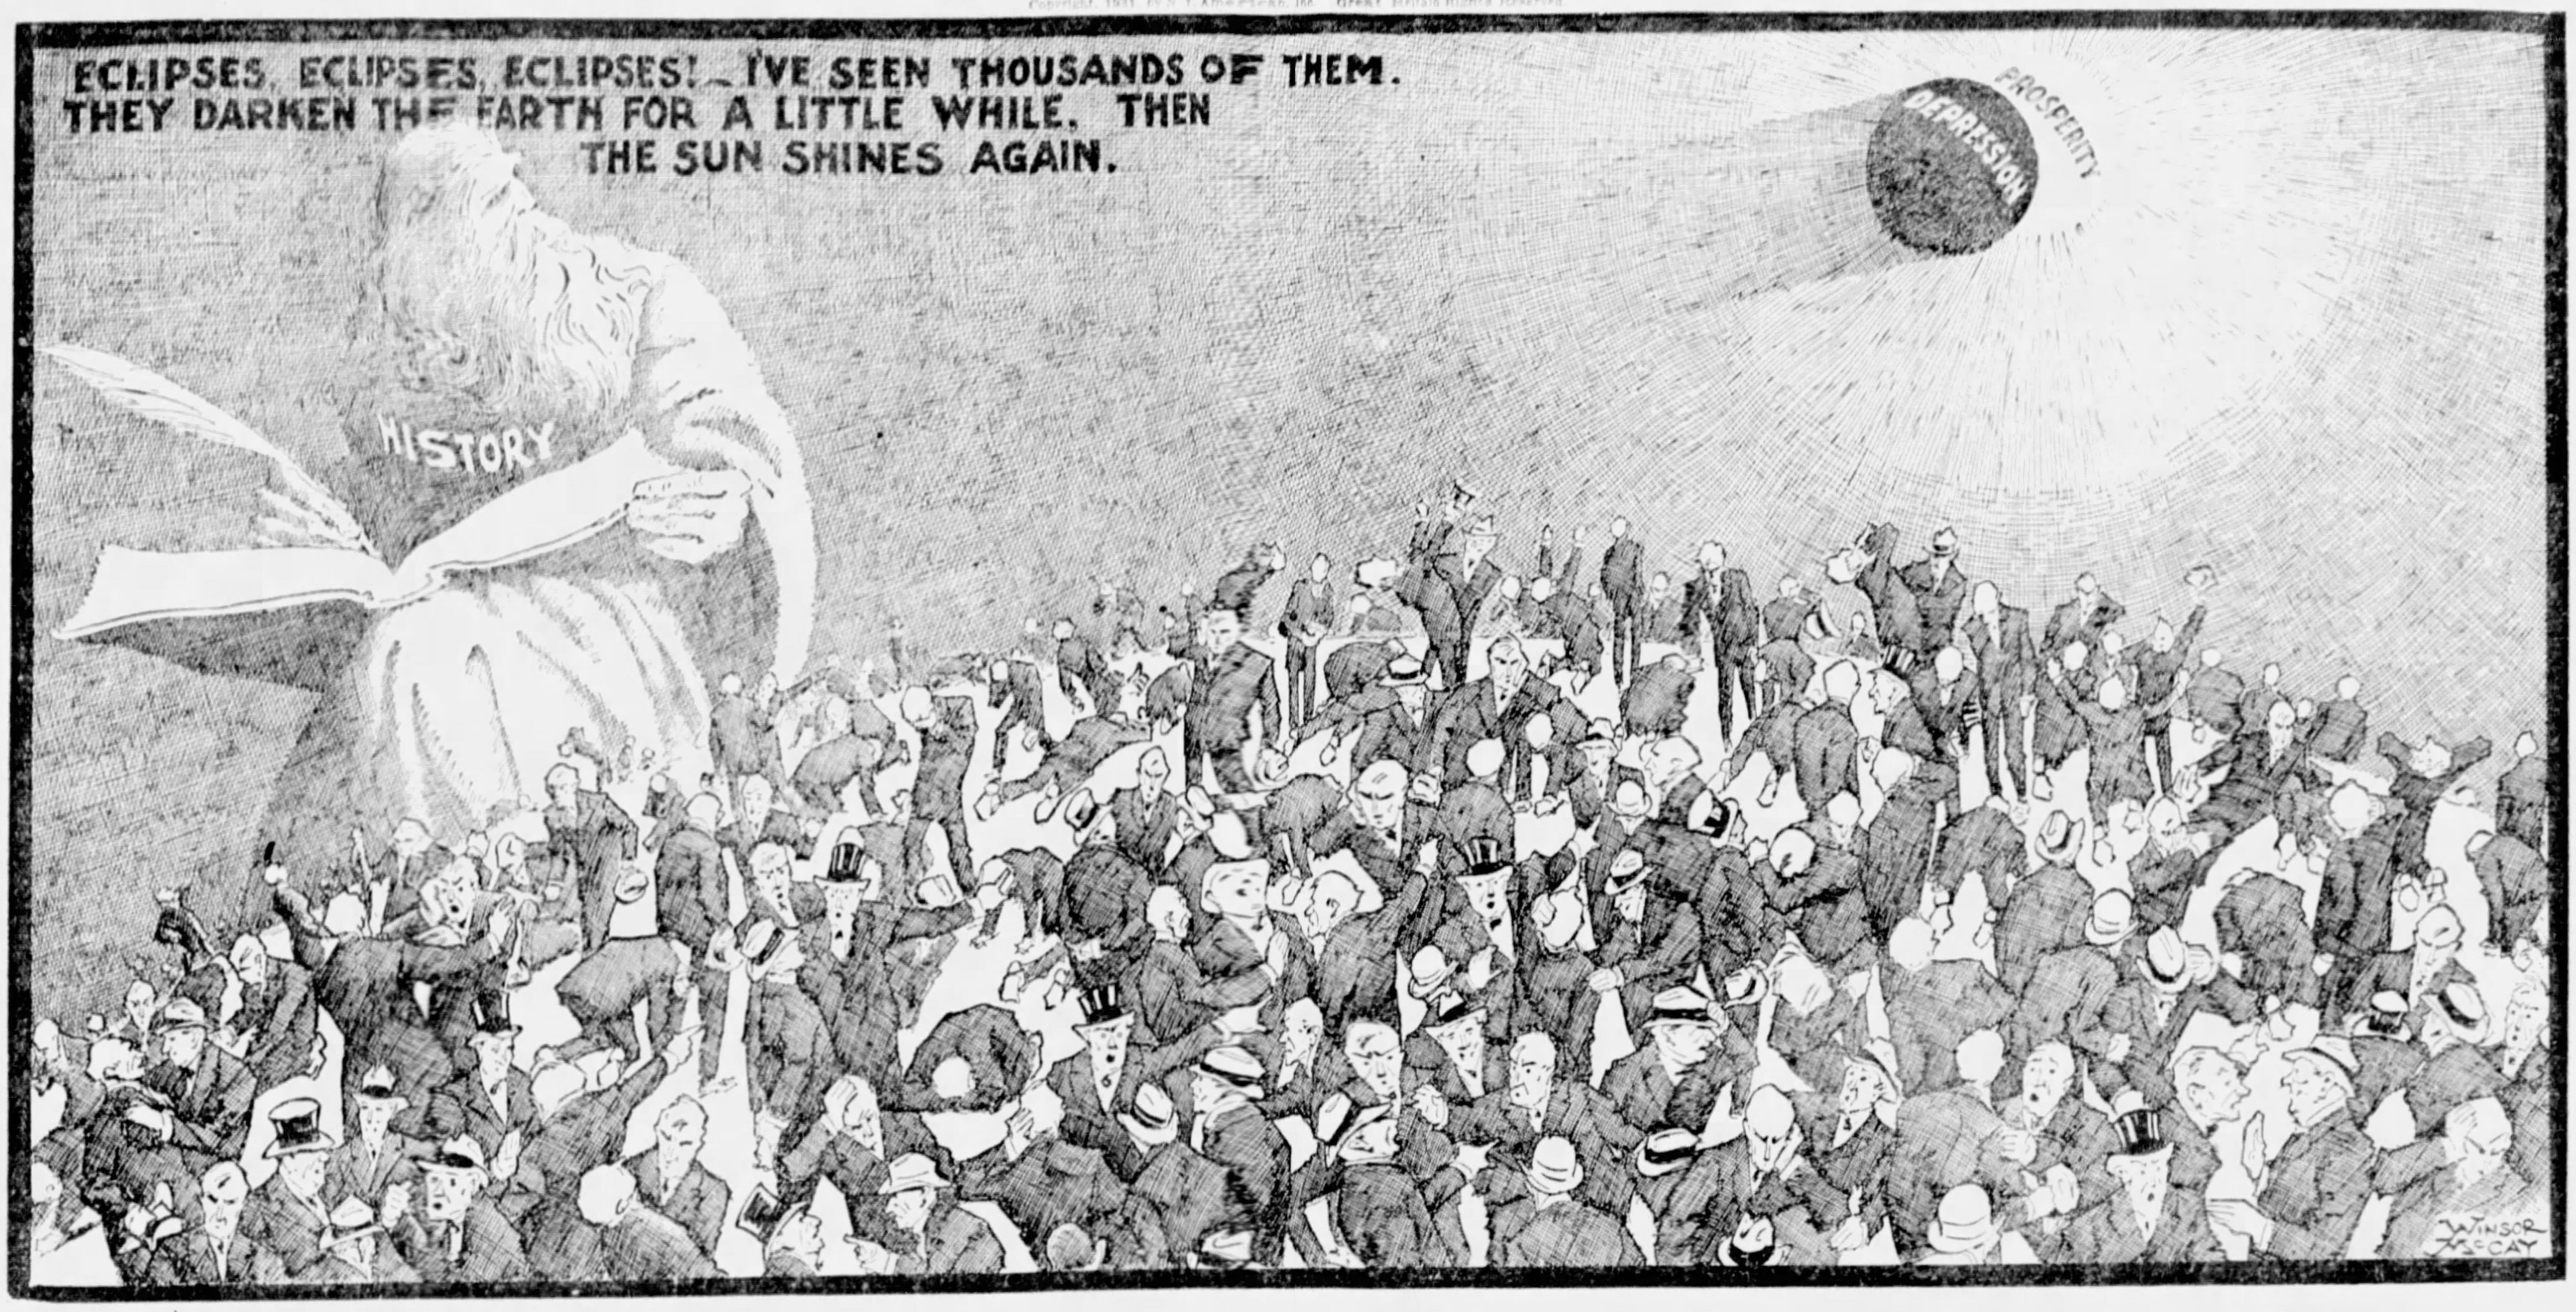
Last Sunday's Answer



THE SUN WILL SHINE AGAIN

Copyright, 1931, by N. Y. American, Inc. Great Britain Rights Reserved.



NOTHING more impressive than a total eclipse of the sun, The glorious day is interrupted by a faint dark mark, appearing round like the sun, at the sun's outer edge. It spreads gradually, relentlessly, until the sun disappears entirely, its light gone.

Chickens go to roost with nervous haste that seems to say: "How could I lose track of time in this way?"

Dogs bark, and men, although they know that it is all done by our little moon passing between the earth and the sun, have an uncomfortable feeling. "What if the light did not return, what if this darkness were to last forever?"

As with our golden sun, so it is with our golden prosperity. Eclipses come occasionally, and great minds of finance and statesmanship, unlike astronomers, are unable to tell us what causes the "eclipse."

A thousand reasons are given, many as foolish as ancient explanations of the sun's eclipse.

It is hard for us now to realize how completely frightened our ancestors were, how amazed and helpless when they saw the sun's light mysteriously disappearing.

Two great armies centuries ago faced each other, ready for battle, when suddenly a strange darkness began. Commanders and soldiers on both sides, looking up, saw something "devouring the sun." Both sides took it for an evil omen, a proof that the gods did not approve the battle. Both armies turned and went home as rapidly as possible. There was no fight that day.

Many of our industrial, financial and political generals act in the same way and activity ceases.

If one commander of the two armies that saw the eclipse beginning had possessed knowledge of cause and effect, he would have said to himself, "this is my opportunity. The darkness is temporary, means nothing, but it frightens the other army. I shall attack it in the rear and destroy it."

What we need is somebody, some idea, some organization, with energy and confidence to attack our eclipse, our "depression" front and rear and get rid of it.

Endless explanations are given of our prosperity eclipse. As a matter of fact there is no ONE explanation, no single "theory of depressions" can explain the sudden checks that interfere with prosperity.

One thing is sure, however, this country and the world at large are paying for the wholesale killing of men, the reckless squandering of billions in the great war.

Depressions are the offspring of war, just as bootlegging, racketeering and crime are the offspring of prohibition.

After war comes, first, artificial prosperity, caused by reckless issuing and squandering of money, then a reaction like that which follows a drunken debauch and severe financial headache.

This country went through a serious depression after the Civil War, and another depression after the Spanish-American War, although that was not much of a war. It is going through a serious depression now, following the greatest of all wars.

The depression was long delayed; there was an indication of it in 1921, and the real thing came in 1929. The delay was due to the gigantic spending of money in war

> With the beautiful sun of prosperity, as with the sun that lights our earth, eclipses come. They pass, and the sun shines again. Only ignorant savages now believe, when an eclipse comes, that a demon has swallowed the sun, and that it never again will light the earth.
> Only a few ignorant among "intelligent, civilized races" believe that a demon of Wall Street, High Finance, War or Over-Production has swallowed prosperity, and that we shall never see it again.
> The bright sun of prosperity will shine again, and seem brighter than ever by contrast.
> And, although many, crippled for the moment, can hardly believe it, in a few years this depression will be forgotten, as we have forgotten more serious depressions of the past. But while you hope, and believe, don't fail to WORK.

time, to postponement through the war years of necessary building and other work that suddenly made such a heavy demand for labor and materials at any price.

It was due in part also to the feeling of exultation and over-confidence that came with peace. And as for the gambling depression that followed reckless speculation in stocks, that followed quite naturally. The gambler who "pyramids," adding his winnings to his original stake, and losing all when "luck turns," is doomed to destruction, in advance.

A business depression is like a serious illness. Sometimes recovery is rapid, sometimes slow. It may depend on the doctor, largely. It depends, always, on the patient's constitution.

The pessimist will tell you "the fact that you have recovered from former depressions does not necessarily mean that you will recover from this one. The fact that a man has recovered three times from pneumonia does not mean that he will recover from a fourth attack."

The patient in this case is the world, and it has changed since the old days.

Consider the advantages of this period as compared with ancient times. Science has taught us how to conquer the plague, that once swept away whole populations. It has even taught us how to make ourselves immune to the most serious diseases, smallpox, typhoid, diphtheria, etc.

Science and industry have enabled us to produce from the earth food in quantities unlimited. For civilized peoples there is no longer a danger or possibility of famine that once swept millions.

We have had a lesson that will probably keep us from another war for some time, especially a war in which we are not concerned, and which we did not start. And the lesson taught to Europe will probably prevent any big war there for some years also.

A child does not put his hand back into the fire, while it still feels the burn.

Our worst affliction today is TOO MUCH OF ALMOST EVERYTHING. We have too much wheat, coal, oil, cotton, steel, EVEN TOO MUCH MONEY. Bankers complain that they can't lend money for more than one per cent a year, while in 1929 they were enjoying twelve, fifteen and twenty per cent.

There should be no prolonged depression among nations that have too much of life's necessities, have conquered disease, and that CAN keep away from wars that ruin prosperity, if they will make up their minds to do so.

This picture should encourage many that are depressed. This "slump" in prosperity is only a temporary eclipse. WE HAVE EVERYTHING THAT WE HAD BEFORE 1929 except courage and confidence.

And, because man is by nature optimistic and hopeful, we shall find ways to restore confidence and courage and utilize the "too much" with which we are blessed.

The remedy for this trouble as for every other is in WORK, SELF-CONTROL, WILL POWER.

Quote to your discouraged friend the story of the two toads that fell into the churn almost full of sour milk. One toad said: "This is the end. We can't climb those slippery, creamy precipices on either side of us. We can't jump, with this miserable sour milk under our feet, nothing to jump from, for you are aware, brother, that jumping consists of applying the levers called hind legs, to some solid substance.

"I am sick and tired of the sourness of this depressing milk. I always knew my life must end miserably. Goodbye, we shall meet soon in a better world where they have no churns and no sour milk."

With that, the pessimistic toad let his head sink into the milk, and soon was dead, front and hind legs hanging downward, as he floated.

The other toad wasted no breath answering his pessimistic friend, thus setting us all a good example. The best answer to a pessimist is a display of energy and confidence.

The other toad said to himself: "While there is life, I am going to keep moving." He did keep moving, thrashing around and paddling, and you can guess what happened, if you haven't heard this story before.

The sour milk acted as it does when attacked by active will power. It gradually formed little flakes of butter. These formed into a solid lump and presently the energetic toad to his intense amazement saw a solid little butter island floating near him.

With a prayer of gratitude he crawled up, gave one mighty kick with his hind legs, went into the air, three inches, over the top of the churn on his way to a long life of freedom, sunshine and prosperity.

Americans will come back to a greater prosperity than they ever knew and, taught by experience, to a greater wisdom than they ever knew, because unlike the timid toad they will not give in or give up.

Occasionally human genius, expressed in new knowledge or a new idea, can do suddenly for masses of men what they can do for themselves only slowly and painfully.

The wine growers of France were in despair, resigned to abandon the culture of grapes, because of the deadly phylloxera. Pasteur appeared, showed them how to conquer that enemy, and restored their former prosperity.

The nations of Europe now, especially England, are groaning under the weight of heavy debts. And this country, with a national income of more than a hundred billion dollars a year, has a government deficit of more than a billion, and worries about some twenty billions of debts, about one-fifth of one year's income.

But debts that seem gigantic become trifling when the right idea comes along.

After the Battle of Waterloo the nations of Europe were far worse off than they are new. Their populations were small, their resources trifling compared with present days.

Waterloo, and the end of Napoleon as a menace to Europe, found the British nation financially protrate, after financing European nations in their wars with Napoleon, preferring that to sending their own men across the Channel.

After Napoleon disappeared, the public debt seemed hopeless.

Then came the steam engine, the locomotive. Britain, leading the way industrially, created a new commercial and industrial empire built on steam and machinery.

The national debt that had seemed overwhelming became a trifle. British prosperity rose to heights never dreamed of.

The population in a short time increased a hundred per cent and then another hundred per cent because there was plenty of food and money to buy it from other nations when England did not produce enough.

The necessary idea may come to us. Co-ordinated industry and co-operative finance replacing groups of bankers, each sulking in his office, or so great invention may come to our relief as steam came to the relief of Europe and the whole world early in the last century.

Electricity may do now what steam did in the last century. The Diesel engine highly perfected, with fuel oil at ridiculously low cost, may make power on farms, and elsewhere, as plentiful as water and grass.

But the main thing is WORK plus COURAGE.

Work each of us can control and courage should be the natural possession of a man worthwhile.

Let us remember the two toads in the churn and not imitate the one that gave up.

Dictatorship in Russia Must be Ended, Stalinism Condemned, Warns Trotzky

Failure of 5-Year Plan Hidden By Dense Cloud of Deceit, He Charges

IN LAST SUNDAY'S ISSUE was published the first installment of an article by Leon Trotzky, former Red war lord and co-founder with Lenin of Soviet Russia, in which he assailed Russia's Five-Year Plan and the present Stalin regime. Trotzky's article, written at Prinkipo, Turkey, where he is now in exile, was published in Action, the Berlin organ of the Trotzky oppositionists. The second and last installment of his article follows:

By LEON TROTZKY

In an Article in "Action," Berlin

IF ONE EXAMINES RUSSIA of today, the every-day life of its working masses, its cultural development as well as the existing degree of illiteracy, and if one doesn't lie or resort to humbug or believe in the digressions of the bureaucratic demagogues, then one must honestly admit that the conditions of every-day life and the manners and customs of the overwhelming majority of the inhabitants of the country have been inherited to 95 per cent from the bourgeois-czarist Russia and that hardly 5 per cent are made up of Socialist elements.

This does not contradict the facts as represented by the dictatorship of the proletariat, the Soviet system and the huge successes attained in economics. These facts, however, are only the frame corner of the building yet to be constructed.

The half-starved bricklayers who climb up the ladder, loaded with bricks and mortar—they often stagger and plunge to the earth—say, "We can now enter the building and sit in it." But to declare that they have "entered Socialism" is to ridicule both the bricklayers and Socialism.

Great Failure
The Five-Year Plan Itself Lack Fulfillment

I will admit that if the chief issue were to catch up with and surpass the advanced capitalistic nations within the next two or three years, thereby insuring the firmness of socialist economics, then the temporary pressure upon the muscles and nerves of the workmen, though it is heavy, would not be only comprehensible but also justifiable. But we have already seen in how obscure, false and demagogic a manner the problem has been placed before the workmen for them to solve.

The continuous hammering upon their nerves threatens to produce a reaction among the masses, a reaction far more menacing than the one which cropped up toward the end of the Civil War.

This danger is more acute since not only will the problem of catching up with and surpassing the capitalistic nations, even if the Five-Year Plan is a complete success, not be solved but the Five-Year Plan itself, even by the greatest possible straining of every nerve cannot be carried out in four years.

I even venture to say that the administrative adventurism of its leaders makes the completion of the economic plan less and less probable even within five years.

An economic analysis of Russia shows that its statistics of successes cover up a whole series of profound contradictions, as:

1. Between city and country (prices as well as shortage of foodstuffs and raw materials).

2. Between the light and heavy industries (industries suffering from a shortage of raw material and the merchandise famine on the other hand).

3. Between the nominal and real purchasing power of the ruble, (inflation).

4. Between the party and the working class.

5. Contradictions within the apparatus of organization itself.

Contradictions
Socialistic Economies Vs Foreign Trading

But aside from these so-called "family" contradictions there is still another which, owing to the logic of things, is steadily growing in importance. It is the contradiction between Soviet economics and the foreign market.

The reactionary Utopia of an isolated Socialist economic unity, harmoniously developing itself under the protection of the foreign trade monopoly, constituted the cornerstone of calculations to which the whole Five-Year Plan was tuned up.

The specialists of the Five-Year Plan cleverly combined their destructive intentions with the prejudices of the authorities, willingly complying with all of their wishes. They drew up the first Five-Year Plan in accordance with the steadily declining industrial production and foreign trade.

It was taken for granted that within the next 10 to 15 years the Soviet Union would become self-supporting and no longer import anything.

But simultaneously the Five-Year Plan called for an increased harvest resulting in export possibilities. Yet it remained wholly obscure just what it was intended to do with the surplus grain and other products. Should it be dumped into the ocean?

Even before the proposed Five Year Plan was examined, as a result of the pressure brought to bear upon the authorities by the opposition, the trend of events itself tore a series of holes into the theory and practice of isolated Russia.

For every country, whether it is capitalistic or socialistic, the world market offers enormous, practically boundless, reserves. The growth of the Soviet industry creates on the one hand technical and cultural demands and on the other, continually new contradictions, thereby compelling the country in ever growing measure to turn toward the reserves offered by foreign trade.

Dependency
New Russia Must Have Foreign Outlets

At the same time the development of her industry, even, taken as a whole, before it is able to satisfy the most elementary domestic needs, creates an unproportionate demand for export (oil and wood, for instance) in accordance with natural laws.

The Soviet Union's reconstruction therefore does not lead to economic independence but, by way of various channels, to the exact contrary: to dependency upon foreign trade with which it is being linked up more and more.

The more successfully Russia develops herself, the more she will be compelled to broaden her field of foreign economic relations.

The inverted theory is even more important: only by means of being able to increase her import and export will the Soviet Union be in a position to overcome partial crises in due time.

In his report to the sixteenth party Congress, Stalin said that the quality of our production is "sometimes frightful." That is a perfect parallel to the "terrible backwardness" he mentions. With such excuses bureaucrats plug up all holes. Instead of exact facts we are offered phrases which may sound strong but are cowardly masks.

Yet two figures, two average comparisons between the party and the working masses would offer an incomparably better survey than mountains of cheap newspaper statistics which attempt to cover up lack of quality, quoting only the quantity.

But to term Russia's export as dumping that threatens to upset world economics is absurd. By saying this the Liberals and Democrats of the other countries admit that the Soviet industry is so powerful as to be able to shake the world market.

It is sufficient to say that the Soviet export today, after going through a process of important development, amounts to only one and one-half per cent of the export of the world. However decayed capitalism may be, this cannot overthrow it.

To attribute to the Soviet government the intention of creating a world revolution with the help of its one and one-half per cent foreign export is ridiculous. Only asses who, however, do not cease to be scoundrels, are capable of this.

Penetration
World Market Invading Soviet Realms

What is termed as the penetration of the Soviet Union into world economics signifies to a far higher degree the penetration by the world market into Soviet economics. This process will continue to grow more and more and will be finally converted into an economic duel between both systems.

If the "plan system" were directed properly, the workers could be justly proud of the successes they have achieved. But as it is, the direct opposite is the result.

Economic experts and workmen continually see the impossibility of carrying out the Five-Year Plan successfully. But they are not permitted to express their opinion. They work under pressure and secretly feel themselves hurt.

Honest and business like administrators do not dare to look the workers in the eye. All are dissatisfied. The reports are adjusted to the aims and the quality of production to the reports. Everything is hidden behind a dense cloud of untruthfulness. Thus the crisis is being prepared.

My advice, in conclusion, is:

1. Work out a system of comparison between Soviet production and that of the capitalistic nations, not only as a guide for the practical problems of export and import, but also as the only real guage for the problem of "catching up with and surpassing" the advanced capitalistic nations.

2. Stop throwing a cloak over things and trying to make them appear better than they are. Stop deceiving and keeping the facts secret.

3. Abandon the wrong policy of regarding economic development from a national and international viewpoint, which is an unavoidable result of the theory of Socialism in a country.

4. Renew the Party by overthrowing the bureaucratic dictatorship.

5. Condemn "Stalinism." Return to the teachings of Marx and Lenin's revolutionary methodology.

Defends French Stand

effective force of 190,000 men is hardly sufficient to maintain order in North Africa, Tunis, Algeria, Morocco, in West Africa, Equatorial Africa, Indo-China and Madagascar.

In January, 1914, the effective force of home troops exceeded 750,000 men. Today that force is less than 350,000 men.

Certain prophets today proclaim:

"Let us not enter into discussions of figures. Disarm! Disarm immediately, and security will be born of disarmament."

This is a dangerous illusion. Imagine in a wholly disarmed Europe one country endowed with chemical industries and first class aviation, and where power is in the hands of audacious partisans not yet disarmed in spirit.

These men will make war, because in a state of mutual disarmament they will believe themselves strongest. Disarmament will even facilitate immediate and more deadly use of civil airplanes and gas machines for bombardment.

The sole way to hasten reduction of armaments is to oppose the possible aggressor by not only a moral condemnation but also by a single front of powers faithful to their solemn undertaking. The day when such a result is obtained, the promise never to break by force any international litigation will find no unbelievers and no skeptics.

This would make possible adjustments both economic and territorial, and the constitution of Europe would take on quite another character, which would singularly facilitate its realization.

Then there would be an end to this general unrest which expresses itself by the clash of arms.

Organized Intelligence Must Shape Future of Mankind, Declares Fosdick

Modern Science Can Conquer Problems of Civilization, Asserts Publicist

By RAYMOND B. FOSDICK

TWENTY-THREE hundred years ago a citizen of Greece undertook a very daring enterprise. He tried to bring within the compass of a single analysis the whole sweep of human knowledge.

RAYMOND B. FOSDICK

And yet Aristotle failed in his attempt. The trouble with him was that he lived too soon. He lived in an age which was just beginning to inquire about human life and its relations. There was no store of ordered knowledge, accumulated during generations, upon which he could draw. The sciences were in their merest infancy. Of the past of mankind there was no knowledge at all. Even as regards contemporary society there was little exact information.

The question which we ought to consider is whether or not today we have overcome most of those limitations, whether or not we have filled in most of the gaps, whether or not there is presented to us in this generation an opportunity to begin the conscious building of a rational world with the tools of systematized knowledge.

I said that Aristotle failed in his attempt because of the huge gaps in human knowledge. He built his world upon unknown factors which made havoc of his plans. And those factors, many of them, remained unknown for centuries after his death.

In the realm of physical science the human race has registered an advance which distinguishes our age from all the other ages that have preceded us. After countless weary centuries, in which man was the plaything of forces that he did not understand and could not control, in our time he has suddenly risen with masterful gesture to assume command. He has started in to tap the resources of the universe for his own advantage.

Powerful Tools
Developed for Mastery of Environment

Every year that passes brings the world more completely under his subjection. With chemistry and physics as his weapons, he is wrenching from a reluctant universe the secrets of new forces.

Aristotle's dream of a great synthesis of human knowledge as a method of building a better world has, in our day, a far larger opportunity for realization than it had in his time. And the reason is, as we have seen, that we know so much more than he did and the knowledge is so much more widely diffused. We know the world geographically and socially; we have developed powerful tools for the mastery and control of our environment; and finally the problem has been simplified by the unity of a common intellectual life. While our world is infinitely larger and more complex than Aristotle's, it is also more compact and more easily surveyed.

The one great overshadowing need that faces our time and our generation is the need of an organized intelligence dedicated to the advancement of the common good. We need brains of synthetic capacity. We need a planetary consciousness. We need ability to think on a terrestrial scale and plan in world terms. We need an Aristotle.

Complex Task
No Single Brain Capable Of Leading Race

And what is the giant task that awaits this new intelligence, this encyclopaedic brain? It is briefly this: to take stock of our planetary resources in the interest of a higher quality of life; to develop the method by which the population of the globe can best be sustained in health, comfort and dignity; in other words, to organize the world for better advantage of the race.

Expressed in these general terms, or in any kind of terms, this task is obviously too great for a single brain. The world is now too vast and too complex to be grasped by a single philosopher.

In self-defense, let me hasten to disclaim any illusion as to the speed for ease with which mankind can alter its way of life. There is no royal road to the millennium, no short cut to the Promised Land. But is it preposterous to believe that man's intelligence, consciously set to the task, can be made a guide to a far more rational order?

There is more power in organized thinking toward a particular goal than many of us dream. The transcontinental telephone was not the product of a sudden flash of genius nor the gift of happy accident. It was a task definitely set to mathematicians and physicists.

The discovery of insulin for diabetes and a vaccine and serum for yellow fever did not come by chance. They were deliberately planned for over months and years of research. So in this infinitely larger field of human relationships we need technicians of persisting faith to achieve the miracle—social engineers with a capacity for sustained thinking.

Moreover, when we speak of creative intelligence, of programs drawn on a planetary scale, of proposals that embrace the common good of the whole human race, we are speaking of a technique which, while it is historically recent, has already been tried out in many fields. Mankind has already begun to see the possibilities of wide co-operation in effecting certain common ends.

World Effort
International Agreements Point the Way

The Universal Postal Union, created in 1878, substituted for the chaos of conflicting rates and routes systematized arrangements which now bind the whole letter-writing world.

The International Bureau of Weights and Measures, formed by treaty in 1875, has given us definitions by which the gram carries the same significance in Paris and Tahiti, and the meter means the same thing in Valparaiso and New York.

Our method of calculating time from an accepted prime meridian is the result of a world-wide conference held in 1884.

Similarly we have universal conventions in regard to such matters as telegraph codes, submarine cables, collision of ships, sanitary regulations, and the navigation of harbors and inland waterways.

Beginning in the middle of the last century, these multipartite treaties and conventions, dealing with the common interests of mankind, have steadily grown in number. From 1864 to 1914 228 of them had been consummated. In the decade since 1918 new impetus has been given to the movement, and 166 have been added to the list.

Perhaps it will be said that these treaties and understandings, significant as they seem, are concerned more with the convenience of mankind than with its vital problems. Men will co-operate when the objective is simple and the path to it is clearly seen. Can they co-operate on a world-wide scale in the infinitely complex difficulties of modern life?

Lessons of War
World Resources May Be Reapportioned

We have already mentioned the question of food and raw material. It seems scarcely conceivable to us today that we could ever succeed in ordering the distribution of these commodities in the general interest of all the people living on the globe.

Self-interest is so predominant a factor in human life that its manifestations and excesses can hardly be curbed. And yet, do we not recall those tragic days of 1917 and 1918, when a great common peril drew together a large section of the human race?

What did we do? We pooled our resources in the interest of a common cause. A so-called wheat executive was appointed, made up of representatives of the allied nations. Its function was a simple one: First it ascertained and divided the available supply.

In other words, where formerly the allied countries competed with each other for the world's wheat, each on behalf of its own nation, they now sat down to determine on a co-operative basis how far the wheat at their disposal could be spread. Organizing intelligence took the place of chance and circumstance.

But it was not alone in relation to food-stuffs that the allies pooled their resources and co-ordinated their control. The Allied Maritime Transport Council, formed in February 1918, took over through its subsidiaries the allocation of the raw materials of the world. The tonnage of the world was marshaled and allocated to serve humanity in distress.

A New Vision
Cosmic Intellect Needed To Guide Mankind

"But this was war," it will be said. "What works in war will scarcely work in peace." The objection may have some merit. We cannot be sure. There is little evidence to guide us in this field. Through agencies like the International Health Board, a world-wide campaign, directed from a single headquarters is being waged against a whole host of diseases to which mankind is heir. Under the impetus of this attack, yellow fever is disappearing from the face of the globe.

Similarly the campaign against hookworm is being conducted on a wide scale. The menace of this disease threatens more than half the world.

Another illustration of the application of intelligence on a world-wide scale is found in the developing co-operation of central banks of issue in matters relating to financial equilibrium. Here again the new unity of the world has outgrown parochial considerations.

With one titanic stroke modern science has obliterated the world of our fathers' generation; and the human race, obeying the same stern principle that governs the survival of all living species, is trying desperately and in part blindly to adapt itself to its new environment as a condition of escape from death.

What we need supremely at this time is something of the synthetic vision of Aristotle, an ability to break over the boundaries of parochialism and think in world terms, a willingness to plan constructively on the basis of larger loyalties. This is the only road to salvation. This is where the judgment and common sense of the race would lead us.

Londoner's 'Personal Nominations' As Received and Censored by O. O.

By O. O. McINTYRE

TOM WEBSTER, the famous cartoonist of the London Daily Mail, sends the following "personal nominations" after his visit in America:

Funniest comedian—Frank Tinney.

The best fellow—Rube Goldberg.

Prettiest flower—Texas blue bell.

Most generous gentleman—the late Jimmy Hussey.

Quietest gentleman—Bugs Baer.

Prettiest view—Arizona as the sun sinks.

Worst Americans—those around the lobby of the Hotel Savoy in London.

Best story teller—O. Henry.

Most hospitable American—W. F. Carey, of Madison Square Garden.

Favorite luncheon places—The Ritz, Colony and Marguery.

Most interesting sporting rendezvous—The Tavern.

Friendliest Americans—bartenders in the speakeasies.

Most polite cop—the traffic man at Forty-sixth and Madison avenue, New York.

Most charming theater—the Empire.

A delightful walk—Inspiration point on Riverside Drive.

Favorite American dog—the Boston.

Best dancer—Bill Robinson.

Smartest night club—Montmarte.

Best yarn spinner—Irvin Cobb.

Brightest weekly—The New Yorker.

Snappiest revue — Ziegfeld's Follies.

Most amusing clown—W. C. Fields.

Noisest corner—Twenty-third street and Broadway, New York.

Most striking building—American Radiator.

Favorite columnist — (Censored).

Favorite popular tune—"Walking My Baby Back Home."

Favorite operatic star—Jeritza.

Los Angeles Is Getting Right Up In Fast Company, Says Will Rogers

By WILL ROGERS

All I know is just what I read in the Papers. Los Angeles, which has been in the Bush League as far as Racketeers are concerned is getting right up in fast company. We pulled off a double header of a Murder here a couple of weeks ago that would do credit to a Chicago or any of the Big Timers.

The Racketeers are mixed up with phases of the City Government just like a regular Class A City. The killer walked away as usual.

In the old Wild West days, the Bandit had to back out shooting, and make his horse by the blaze of his guns. But nowadays the Robber or Killer or whatever his days work might be, why he does it all casually, just in the regular routine of things.

If the is a Bank to rob, why he just saunters in, the only way he can possibly be noticed is that he will perhaps be dressed better than the Banker. (Cause money lending is having its tough time too. They have to have something for security, and no one can think of anything outside of money to use for it, and as they have no money to put up for money why there is little borrowing done).

WELL the young man simply walks up with no mask, no western hat, no big forty five, just a little Automatic, which a Baby can shoot as well as Billy the Kid could, for all you do is point and keep the trigger pulled and you hit everything in the place, there is no possible way you can miss any part of anyone in the building, the more nervous you are the more you hit.

If there be one thing that has increased crime its been the Automatic Pistol. Its made no practice necessary to be an outlaw. Give any young Egotist two shots of dope and an Automatic and he will hold up the Government Mint.

He goes in gets his money quicker than you can get it with a boni fide Check. Out he comes. His Partner has the Car running, and away they go perhaps to their Country home, or their Golf Club.

The toughest part of robbing nowadays is to find somebody that has something. The minute a Robber gets a clue why the rest is easy.

Now thats about the routine of the modern Robbery, and the Murder is about along the same routine, course its a little more expensive on account of having to use a little ammunition.

But the fellow thats hiring the fellow to do the job has to pay so much and ammunition. The fellow that kills you nowadays why he dont have it in for you, he dont even know you. You are not even pointed out to him till just before he bumps you off. Thats all a business done through an Agency, just like any other Agency. They can furnish killers for "Singles" or "Doubles Murders" or "Groups." You get a rate if you want several put out of commission. Its cheaper to have it all done at once. Its very little more trouble to shoot down a group, than it is one.

OH WE ARE LIVING in progress. All of our boasted inventions, like the Auto and the Automatic, and our increased "Dope" output, terrible liquor, lost confidence in our Justice, Graft from top to bottom, all these have made it possible to commit anything you can think of and in about 80 per cent of the cases get away with it.

He can get away quick in a Car. He cant miss with the gun he's got. If he is caught, he knows it will be accidental. Then if he is caught, his connections with his gang will get him out, so its not a dangerous business after all, from the looks of it.

But there is no use going on with whats happening out here in our Town cause the same thing is happening in yours, so I dont want to be like all these Californians and be accused of bragging.

But goodness sake we get enough crime without writing about it, so lets see what else we got. We sent a bunch of Mayors to France, nobody knows for what reason. I think it was at the invitation of France themselves, so they got nobody to blame but themselves.

Our local Mayor from here of course you know at that time did himself proud, he won the approval of two of our local Pastors, and lost France, his Host. Thats one thing when we are foolish, we dont stop half way, we go the whole route.

RIGHT NOW in Washington the main thing is Mr. Hoover trimming down the various Departments. He did a fine job when he lopped off a lot of those old obsolete Army Posts. They are a sentimental obituary to the past, but let the States themselves keep them up.

But you know I sure did always love the looks of those old Posts, they always seemed to be located in such pretty and well watered old places, most all built around a Square, where the soldiers drilled.

And of all the unattractive and out of the way places, was Yaphank, out in an end or part of Long Island that even an Aviator cant find. Nobody had ever been there before or since the war. Another over in Jersey, and all around. No late war Soldier ever wishes to go back where he trained, in fact they cant, nobody knows where it is now.

SAY SPEAKING of Jersey, the other day out on our Movie lot I was working and come on the set with Mayor Hague, of Jersey City, you all know him, that is anybody that knows him, all Democrats. He is a big man in the Ex organization.

I tried to get something out of him for I knew he was well loaded politically. He knows both Smith and Roosevelt mighty well and I was trying to find out who was going to run, or would they draw straws for it, or what, or would they get any little difference they might have settled up. Now he could have told me, but like anybody that knows anything he wouldent tell it.

You know its people that dont know anything thats always telling it. Now I for instance will tell you anything you want to know, but if I knew anything about anything I wouldent tell you, so thats why I can tell you about everything.

Course election is over a year away, but they are commencing to send in their entry blanks. Its going to be a great election, with the twenty million unemployed voting against the twenty million that are. The slogan will be, "I believe every man should have a job, BUT not mine."

Rimes of the Road

by Dudley Glass

KING OF THE ROAD

G. Marmaduke Montgomery owned monoplanes and yachts,
He had a dozen different homes in widely-scattered spots.
The populace deferred to him, all gates stood wide ajar—
Except when down a crowded street he drove his motor car.

It vexed G. Marmaduke full sore when his imported bus
Was blocked by common people's cars in traffic clamorous.
His fame and wealth were so much dross, and he could keenly feel
That he was just another guy behind a steering wheel.

Then came the crash in stocks and bonds, the fall in land and wheat;
It wiped out houses, yachts and cars—the wreckage was complete.
But Marmaduke Montgomery was not the type to pine—
He found a job as driver of Fire Engine No. 9.

His siren clears the street ahead, the trucks flee left and right;
Sometimes he knocks one for a loop and chortles with delight.
He's happier far, he tells the world, than in those days gone past—
G. Marmaduke Montgomery has the right of way at last.

Theater in Home With Television

By GEORGE SEIBEL

One of the things the theaters have had to contend against is the radio, cheapest form of entertainment known today. You do not even have to pay carfare or put on a clean collar to hear the Prince of Wales tell how he keeps trim by smoking Fortunate Blows. You can hear "Only a Gigolo" 10 times a day without even troubling to clap for an encore. As for drama, why pay to see "Othello" played with one Moor when you can get two for nothing in the "Amos 'n' Andy" daily tragedy?

It is a fact that people are now writing playlets for the radio just as they used to do scenarios for the screen. There is a special technique for this as there was for that. Having no scenery, you have to create it by sound. And so the listener hears the roar of waters. Then "She" says:

"Darling . . . Don't you love Niagara Falls?"

There we are on "their" honeymoon.

Box at La Scala

It reminds you of a certain box in the great La Scala Opera at Milan in Italy. This box is reserved for the blind, who are brought from various institutions to the opera. An Italian can live without chianti and without spaghetti, but the opera is obligato. So charity even provides the blind with "Rigoletto" and "Traviata."

The radio listener to a play must be like those blind listeners at La Scala. He can hear but cannot see. His scenery has to be painted by voice, his ear must distinguish the costumes worn, and the light effects must impinge upon his tympana.

It's no easy task for the radio playwright.

Some Successes

Despite these difficulties there have been some well-worth-while things in the ether. It is the humor that counts most effectively. Weber and Fields are the most effective actors on the air, and the KUKU hour has been the most effective dramatization. Most of the other alleged humor is so feeble that it totters. The audience is funnier than the clowns of the air. When you're listening for something you have heard is going to be funny, you always start laughing a minute before.

With real drama the difficulties are almost insuperable. Some old-time melodramas have been put on seriously, and they turned out to be comic hits. Shakespeare has been given the air, and the results have been encouraging.

It's a Special Art

Writing drama for the air audience seems to be a special art, and there is already a textbook. Peter Dixon's "Radio Writing" (published by Century) tells how to do it.

Summer Is Only Season For Plays in Some Places

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Summer generally marks the end of the stage in most places. In some other places summer is the only season of dramatic activity. Our own Montrose is such a place, as those who made up the audiences of Cap'n Menke's floating theater, The Golden Rod, last summer, remember. The Golden Rod, which has been moored in downtown Pittsburgh since last autumn, will be towed to Montrose soon for another summer season.

Summer theaters are especially numerous in the eastern states. They are located in towns that have increased populations in the months when residents of the larger cities seek cooler climes for the heated months. Some of these already have opened and others are preparing to do so this month. No less an organization than the Theater Guild is sponsoring one group of summer players, who will devote their time to rehearsals.

Practice Ten Weeks

Directed by Miss Cheryl Crawford, Harold Clurman and Lee Strasberg, it will spend 10 weeks at Brookfield Center, Conn., rehearsing plays to try out their ideas on the theater. Two plays will be rehearsed during the summer, one of them being Paul Green's "The House of Connelly," which has been given by the Theater Guild to this group for rehearsal purposes.

The group, it is announced, has the sympathy and co-operation of the Guild, which is allowing some of its contract players to participate. Eventually, the group hopes to shape itself into a permanent company.

Miss Gish Trouper

Lawrence Langner, of the Theater Guild, has asembled a company that will play throughout the summer in Westport, Conn. It includes Dorothy Gish, Winifred Lenihan, Romney Brent and Rollo Peters. The opening play has not as yet been announced. Later in the summer Mr. Peters will join the

It is surprising how many film people are going into business. Irene Jones, the wife of Richard Jones, the director who recently died, has opened a gown shop in Hollywood. Peggy Snow, Neely Edwards and his brother, have opened a summer hotel at Riverside on Long Island.

"Finding the vaudeville situation just as heartbreaking as pictures," Peggy said. "We thought we'd try something else until the depression got over being depressing."

It has been an open Hollywood secret that James Cruze, the first husband of Peggy Snow, and Betty Compson, own an interest in Greer's shop. Dozens of other stars and directors are running some side business, independent of their picture careers.

John Murray Anderson says that we wronged him when we said he was extravagant. Says Mr. Murray:

"My attention has been called to your Sunday column, which is in error. I was not responsible for unnecessary extravagance in the Whiteman picture. It had an accumulation of nearly $400,000 on it before I was ever called in. In spite of the expenditure, I have Mr. Laemmle's authority for it that the picture has actually made money. 'Lilies of Broadway' never reached the production stage, so it was never withdrawn because of any extravagance of mine. I am at this time discussing the possibility of an arrangement with Junior Laemmle, so you can see your statement is damaging."

We are glad to print Mr. Anderson's telegram. We never like to put the blame where it doesn't belong, and if he wasn't responsible for all the money put into "The King of Jazz" we apologize for having made such a statement.

The dogs had their day last week. A dog show brought out the petted darlings of many of our movie folk. Billie Dove's Lassie won two prizes. The Zeppo Marxes' dog brought home seven ribbons for their Afghan. Clara Bow exhibited her dog and won a prize. We feel if we had put Pat Parsons in the show she would have carried off the bull pup honors, but she is so busy digging in the new yard I didn't have the heart to take her away. Evelyn Brent had planned to take her two dogs, but they jumped over the fence and ran away. The wire-haired fox terrier lost his life, but Betty managed to find the Scotty, and if he gets away again he will have to break a stout chain.

A letter from Joseph Schildkraut from London laments that he was misquoted in a British publication. He says the article states that he was not only anti-American, anti-Hollywood, but anti-pictures.

"All of this," says Mr. Schildkraut, "is untrue and I would not make any such statement."

He also says that he is now making a picture in London and will then go to Vienna to appear on the stage after an absence of 10 years.

"I appear," says Mr. Schildkraut, "at the Deutsches Volkstheatre from which the Theater Guild brought me to America. I will play there in 'Liliom,' 'Richard III' and a new play which later I will bring to America."

Certainly Ina Claire can feel flattered that Joseph Schnitzer asked her if she would like to direct a production for Radio Pictures. Ina laughed merrily at the idea, for, being one of America's foremost young comediennes, naturally, she has no idea of accepting Mr. Schnitzer's offer. Of course, she might be able to act and direct, but she would be making a lot of trouble for herself, and she is too smart to get herself into any such grief. She has studied stage direction, play-writing and costume designing, and she knows about everything connected with the stage. A good play has been written for her and the chances are Ina will go East in the fall, as soon as she finishes "Folly" for Radio Pictures.

Everyone is interested in knowing how our important stars started on their careers. Jackie Cooper was discovered by Con Conrad, the song writer, and now that Jackie is getting famous he isn't forgetting his old pal. Jackie's mother was Con Conrad's secretary and one day they needed a child to sing "That's Our Baby" in the Fox "Follies." Mrs. Cooper finally agreed to bring her small boy and he won the heart of everyone. After that he and Con Conrad became warm friends and a little later Bob McGowan, seeing Jackie, put him under contract to Hal Roach.

Milton Herbert Gropper, who was as close to David Belasco as any one of his authors, writes to say:

"It is my impression that the last member of the acting profession to be interviewed by David Belasco was Sylvia Field on the Friday preceding his death. Moreover, my play, 'Ground For Indecency,' reports to the contrary, was receiving his immediate attention. The novelized version is due for release July 8 and the play was scheduled for production before that date."

Although Mr. Gropper does not say so I am wondering if we won't see his play on the screen. He is the author of "Ladies Of The Evening," "The Big Fight" and "Wolf At The Door."

INA CLAIRE expects to return to the stage in the fall, after finishing the photoplay, "Folly."

Billie Burke Is to Make Tour in Fall

Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 6.

When Noel Coward's sophisticated comedy, "Private Lives," is sent on tour to the larger cities this fall it will have Billie Burke and Hugh Sinclair in the leading roles. These are the parts originated by Coward and Gertrude Lawrence, Otto Kruger and Madge Kennedy replacing them when the Broadway run of the play was extended.

It is expected the Kruger-Kennedy team will tour in another company of the play, being booked for towns not touched by the Burke-Sinclair duo. Kruger and Miss Kennedy also may take the play on a tour of the South and Pacific Coast.

The red-haired Miss Burke appeared as comedienne last winter in "The Truth Game." Sinclair, a young English actor who once was Ina Claire's leading man, has been playing in Shaw's "Getting Married."

Last Appearance

"David Belasco Presents" appeared in the columns of drama pages for the last time today with the closing of "Tonight or Never." With the finish of the play also came the end of the Belasco organization. Offices have been closed and the Belasco Theater will be leased to other producers. No plans have been made to take "Tonight or Never" on tour next fall.

Closings of this week leave only 15 plays and five musical shows on Broadway. Twenty attractions is a low figure for this time of year before hot weather has set in. As only a few new arrivals are booked for June, it is feared that some time this summer Broadway may offer less than a dozen shows.

Reviews Only Mild

Two revues and two plays arrived this week, the third, "Little Show," being the first entrant. It attracted mild reviews from the critics, who confined themselves to unrestrained plaudits for the performance of Beatrice Little. "The Band Wagon" is the other arrival.

"Unexpected Husband" is billed as "a comedy with 1,004 laughs," but the critics seemed to have missed several hundred of them. Glenn Hunter opened

Broadway Films Do Well, With 'Daybreak' a Leader

By REGINA CREWE

Motion Picture Editor New York American

NEW YORK, June 6.

With New York's climate being just weather, either hot or rainy, and the whole town making a week-end exit, Broadway's picture theaters showed unusual strength last week—weather or no!

At the Capitol, for instance, Ramon Novarro's "Daybreak" took in over $60,000 before leaving for the current attraction, "Never the Twain Shall Meet." The Roxy did a good $80,000 worth of business with "Women of All Nations," and the Paramount approached 60 G's with "Buddy" Rogers' "Lawyer's Secret" and Rudy Vallee on the stage. At present the Janet Gaynor new one, "Daddy Long Legs," is thronging the former playhouse, while "The Vice Squad" is the timely attraction at the Publix ace.

"Lover Come Back"

"Up for Murder," at the Globe, took $12,000, and has been succeeded by Columbia's "Lover Come Back." The Dix film, "Young Donovan's Kid," left after two weeks, and a final $17,500, at the Mayfair, for "White Shoulders." And at the Strand, "Gold Dust Gertie" dug up $10,000 and scrammed to make room for Billie Dove and "The Lady Who Dared."

The new long-runnie is Norma Shearer's "A Free Soul," at the

The Screen and Its Players

Boy Film Star Vies With Grownups for Screen Honors Here

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Childhood vies with the grownups for honors on the local screen at this time and childhood's champion is none other than Jackie Cooper, the youngster that helped make "Skippy" one of the most human and entertaining pictures our town has ever witnessed. Jackie now is featured in "Young Donovan's Kid," the current attraction in the Stanley. Richard Dix, the roaming Yancey Cravat of "Cimarron," is co-featured with the boy star.

"Young Donovan's Kid" is an adaptation of Rex Beach's novel, "Big Brother." It was directed by Fred Niblo and supporting players include Fred Kelsey, Marion Shilling, Boris Karloff and Frank Sheridan.

New Swanson Picture

The Penn screen presents Gloria Swanson in her latest picture, "Indiscreet," which is heralded as a story of tangled lives and loves. It is said to be reminiscent of Miss Swanson's former film, "The Trespasser." The star portrays a modern girl who has her own very definite ideas about the proper way to dominate men and who does not hesitate to put these ideas into practice. The cast also includes Ben Lyon, Monroe Owsley, Arthur Lake and Barbara Kent.

Bebe Daniels in "The Maltese Falcon" has replaced that grand old actress, May Robson, on the Warner screen. "The Maltese Falcon" is a mystery melodrama and it has to do with a statuette, so valuable that persons will commit murders to get it. Supporting Miss Daniels are Ricardo Cortez, Dudley Digges, Robert Elliott, Una Merkel and Dwight Frye.

Gangster Film Stays

"The Public Enemy," which still is a good gangster film in spite of some tampering by Pa Pitt's censors, continues in the Davis for a second week. James Cagney does a grand job of his acting and so, for that matter, does the entire cast.

The Harris is presenting a dual bill: "Ex-Flame," with Marian Nixon and Neil Hamilton, and "The Two Gun Man," featuring Ken Maynard.

That old melodrama and temperance preachment, "Ten Nights in a Barroom," has been revived for the talk screen, and the picture version is now current in both the Fulton and the Sheridan Square. The play had been modernized for the screen, it is stated, and it brings together again William Farnum and Tom Santschi, who way back in long ago silent days wrote screen history by their fight in the original film version of "The Spoilers."

Joe Morgan Again!

In the barroom drama, Mr. Farnum portrays Joe Morgan, the fellow who sees the snakes and who reforms after a beer bottle or something hits his little daughter. Supporting players are Robert Frazer, Rose-

Modern Day Prima Donna Much Saner

By J. FRED LISSFELT

There are many indications that the species "prima donna" is becoming extinct. With a public grown so sophisticated about music in general, and opera (the habitat of the prima donna) in particular, stars have lost much of their glamor; students no longer unhitch galloping steeds from singers' carriages and draw the heroine triumphantly to her hotel, nor do poets dedicate their lyrics to the favorite actress of the day.

Seldom does a composer write an opera with a particular singer in mind, though occasionally a manager does revive music to exploit a singer for the sake of his box office.

By-Play Bored Her

No less a star than Geraldine Farrar has recently confessed how happy she is to be rid of the by-play expected of the prima donna, of the sensational display of jewels, furs, autos and temperament that goes to make that fantastic figure in the public mind.

Now that she lives with the memories of her great successes, and occasionally comes from semi-retirement to give one of her unforgettable recitals of classic songs, she can rejoice sincerely in playing her favorite music. Her taste was unimpeachable as an artist and so she must be happy away from the footlights.

In Love With Voice

Once upon a time, a fair-haired German visited Italy to learn more of the opera. In one of the Venetian salons he fell in love with a singer on first hearing her voice. She was Faustina, the most celebrated prima donna of the day, and she followed her admirer gaily to Dresden, where for many years he was leader of the opera house. Hasse, a rival in popularity with John Sebastian Bach, was the young German composer, and as long as Faustina sang, he wrote operas to exploit her voice, greatly retarding German opera.

But Faustina must have been all powerful, for did she not once journey to Leipzig, come to the house of the pious Bach, and cause a little pang of wonder in the eyes of Anna Magdalena, who afterwards wrote that her beloved John Sebastian had found Faustina exceedingly gracious and, although he preferred another kind of music, could not help wondering too at the beauty and charm of her singing.

Amused by Melba

I was amused a year ago when I last spoke with Nellie Melba. We were neighbors during a performance of "Fidelio" at the Salzburg festival, and she asked me to rub it in on American audiences that they admired certain well known stars and ignored Lotte Lehmann who was singing that night, and who, up to that time had had no chance on our stage.

When she heard me speak of Pittsburgh, she at once gave me the greeting which all prime donne have ready for the reviewer: "Tell them I love them so!" But dear Melba had forgotten the night on Memorial Hall stage when she roundly flayed us for our stinginess, as

Peculiarity Of Dietrich

By BUSHNELL DIMOND

NEW YORK, June 6.

There can be scant quarreling, I imagine, over the blunt statement that Marlene Dietrich, of Berlin and Hollywood, is easily the most disturbing figure on our audible screens. The gifted lady's rocket-like rise is well known.

Any hat check girl or news boy can tell you how Joseph von Sternberg "caught" her in a German musical comedy and prevailed upon her to support Emil Jennings in "The Blue Angel." The phrase, "personal triumph," can be used without irony in reference to her other two talkies made in America.

Miss Dietrich's sultry witchery, her poetry, her irony are accepted by us all as easily as any natural phenomenon. She "has everything"—yet it is true that she has done almost nothing. In the entertainingly pompous "Morocco," in the emotional tinsel of "Dishonored," she has submitted—what? A formula. She has created no recognizable individual, but has hung, luminous and enticing, in a dramatic void.

The fact that she can give the formula beauty makes the void fascinating. But of the shaping of character, of the embodying of a person we might encounter in a penthouse or on the subway, she has shown no trace.

Always she is the same, a

Janet Gaynor and Farrell Together in Films Again

By MARQUIS BUSBY

Universal Service.

HOLLYWOOD, June 6.

There's good news in store for the Gaynor-Farrell fans. Janet and Charlie are screen lovers again in "Merely Mary Ann," and following that they will appear together in "Delicious." They will even sing two or three brand new song hits by George and Ira Gershwin.

I found Janet and Charlie both on the set of "Merely Mary Ann." Janet had a very dirty face, dirty hands and wore a green apron. Charlie was all dressed up in one of his new London suits.

"There's no working with him now that he has been in Europe," Janet laughed. "He's just that grand. You should have heard him call me down when I spoke of his 'tuxedo.' He said 'dinner jacket, my dear young woman.'"

Janet Gaynor

Janet's first picture since her long illness opened this week at the Carthay Circle. It is "Daddy-Long-Legs" of tender memory. Ruth Chatterton made the role famous on the stage, and it was one of Mary Pickford's most successful silent pictures. Ever since Janet has been a star she has longed to do this picture.

"I loved playing in it every moment," she told me. "I don't often say that my pictures are good, but I do think you will like 'Daddy-Long-Legs.'"

She is anxious to return to Honolulu again. Her last trip was her third to the islands and she wants to begin a new trio of journeys. Janet is almost becoming a champion commuter since she purchased a little house in Honolulu.

"It isn't much of a place," she smiled, "but it is right on the beach and a 40-minute drive from town. I've planted cocoanut palms, and I'm going to have a garden. I love it there. It's so peaceful, and the swimming, of course, is marvelous. My house isn't on Waikiki, you know. That's much too expensive."

Makes Him Shudder

The last time Janet was in Honolulu she underwent an operation for appendicitis. Lydell Peck, her husband, an associate producer at Paramount, was frantic. Honolulu is a long way from Hollywood, even as the crow flies (if the crow could fly it). He shudders when Janet even mentions the islands, but she has no intention of having an operation every time she is there.

"I go to the movies there, too," she said. "There's a little open air theater that I love."

"I went to a funny little theater in Sicily," Charlie Farrell began. "You've never smelled . . ."

"There he goes again," Janet laughed, "trying to top my Honolulu experience with his trip to Europe."

'Sky Devils' New Title

"Sky Devils" is the new title of Howard Hughes' air comedy, heretofore known as "Ground Hogs." After considering numerous recommendations, the producer of "Hell's Angels" has decided that "Sky Devils" is the logical box-office title for his new flying film.

"Sky Devils" went into production last week under direction of Edward Sedgwick, and featuring Spencer Tracy, Sidney Toler, George Cooper and Lola Lane.

The Sedgwick unit is now at March Field, Riverside, where the air scenes are being filmed with the aid and co-operation of United States Army airmen.

Richard Dix In New Film

Robert Emmett O'Connor has been added to the cast of "The Million Dollar Swindle," Richard Dix's next picture for Radio. Florence Roberts will be in the cast of "Fannie Foley Herself," to star Edna May Oliver, with Hobart Bosworth. Melville Brown directing. And Louis Brock rises up to announce that Clark and McCullough's first short comedy title for the new season will be "Beau Legs."

Voice Tutor Tells About Film Pupils

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Universal Service.

HOLLYWOOD, June 6.

Out of all the hundreds of so called voice specialists who flocked to Hollywood when talkies made it imperative for the movie stars to speak only two or three are still here. One of the most interesting of that group is Samuel Kayzer. Mr. Kayzer was not brought here by the sudden talkie rush, he came at the express invitation of Howard Hughes, well known producer.

Once here he has remained, tutoring old pupils and making new friends. His method closely approaches psychoanalysis. He discovers what is wrong with his pupil and proceeds to correct shyness, lack of self-confidence and inability to articulate.

Trained for Success

Mr. Hughes' idea in bringing Prof. Kayzer to Hollywood was to give Billie Dove a complete course in voice training. Stories of what Laura Hope Crews did for Gloria Swanson and of Mrs. Leslie Carter's success in training Norma Talmadge to speak lines reached his ears.

In looking over the field for a teacher for Billie Dove someone told Mr. Hughes of Mr. Kayzer's methods. Judges, statesmen and other prominent public men had taken the Kayzer course. A story is told that Otto Kahn, who is one of our most polished public speakers, failed when he was first called upon to speak.

Samuel Kayzer so inspired confidence in the kindly Mr. Kahn that he no longer is afraid to make a speech.

Has Many Pupils

I was interested to meet this man who has been among his pupils Ann Harding, Dolores Del Rio, Anita Louise, Helen Twelvetrees, Frederic March, Thomas Meighan, Frances Beranger, Marguerite Churchill, Charlotte Greenwood and Bessie Love.

At first he was reticent about discussing his pupils. He thought he might not be doing an ethical thing to talk out of school but after we had discussed various forms of fear he relented. Voice and personality, in his

"What they didn't know," said Mr. Kayser, "is that such a character as this uncouth Irishman has a certain esthetic side that requires an actor of Mr. Meighan's ability."

Peculiarity of Dietrich Is Ability to Fascinate

mysterious and enthralling woman who appears out of the air, becomes involved in a series of tragic adventures with several enslaved males, and vanishes via firing squad or desert trek into nothing.

After seeing a performance by Miss Dietrich you can never say that you have the dimmest grasp of the heroine's private life. To take an extreme contrast in the case of even so limited an actress as Greta Garbo, it is possible to put your finger on something tactile. You can say with some assurance that the heroine of "Anna Christie" prefers rye to burgundy, and that the heroine of "Romance" would prefer Verdi to Debussy. With Miss Dietrich (and her director) all is reduced to the base of a pretty generality. "Glamor" can be, and is, made to cover a multitude of histrionic sins.

These mournful—but tender—reflections are caused by a German silent film, now on view here, with Miss Dietrich. It is called "Three Loves," and to the initiated eye was not made to star her at all, but Fritz Kortner, the celebrated Berlin character actor. The picture is a diverting melodrama, gorgeously photographed and skillfully manipulated. But it gives the whole Dietrich show away.

West View Books Air Troubadours

The Cru-Bro Troubadours, radio performers, will be the special attraction this Sunday in West View Park, appearing on the Midway both afternoon and evening in a free presentation. WE NOW PRESENT DARRELL V. MARTIN RADIO EDITOR

What's New in Radio

[illegible]

Darrell V. Martin

[illegible]

But we can say quite that the few samples of television are the [illegible] of all eyes. Like stars they are flashing scintillating bits of [illegible] against dark blue drapes. Through a [illegible] aperture one may see actual moving forms perhaps an improvement over what we have seen in Pittsburgh, but hardly a merchandise yet to be offered for public consumption.

We might say that television as shown here today is in the same stage that radio was in Pittsburgh 10 years ago when we fooled around with catwhiskers and galena. Particularly poor when static blurs the picture like a seismograph needle.

There's much gossip about the [illegible] and pentode tubes which are expected to cause a furore on the market this fall. Just a few minutes ago we were handed a pamphlet which explains the efficiency of a new low voltage radio battery that is guaranteed 1,000 hours.

A color organ, operating on radio electrical principles, which automatically converts music into changing colors that synchronize with the moods of the music, fascinated us most tonight. F. B. Patterson, research engineer for a large eastern manufacturer, explained to us that the object of the color organ is to produce a greater emotional effect on the spectator listener than can be obtained by listening to music alone. And being esthetically-minded, we agree it's a great stunt.

We have been invited to spend Sunday with Amos 'n' Andy at their home, also a dinner engagement with Chauncey Parsons, former Pittsburgh tenor who has made good with the National Broadcasting Company. James A. Simpson, Pittsburgh's entrepreneur, is the center of home-town activities. He has arranged to have several Pittsburghers in the NBC studios Monday night during the broadcast of Ferde Grofe's Orchestra which you will hear through WCAE at 8:30.

A breeze from good old Lake Michigan has just struck our window and we're sleepy, so we bid you adieu until tomorrow.

McNamee Speaking

NICK DAWSON and Donald Hughes—you probably know them better as "Daddy and Rollo"—had just completed their afternoon rehearsal and were walking together along Madison avenue, near the New York studios. Suddenly a huckster, perched high above the traffic, shouted at them.

Mr. McNamee

"Hey, you!" he yelled at Nick. "You two look like Daddy and Rollo that I hear on the radio. I just saw your pictures in the paper."

And he held up the page of a newspaper showing a photograph of the two.

"Say, you two certainly are dead ringers for that radio team."

With which parting remark he disappeared in traffic, without realizing that he had actually been speaking to the real Daddy and Rollo.

But even most famous stars are not always recognized.

Not long ago Jessica Dragonette started to stroll up Fifth avenue after finishing a Friday night program. The night was mild and balmy, and she decided it was too pleasant to motor.

Two blocks from the studios as she was crossing a street with the green light like a dutiful pedestrian, a telegraph messenger's bicycle came tearing around the corner.

Before Miss Dragonette had even seen him, he had run right into her, full tilt. The impact was enough to throw him from his bike and he picked himself up highly abusive.

He was even going to have her arrested for allowing herself to be hit by a bicycle!

Brisbane, Jessica Dragonette Special

Arthur Brisbane, Jessica Dragonette and Vincent Lopez will be heard in special broadcasts Wednesday and Thursday nights this week from the National Electric Light Association convention in Atlantic City. WCAE will be the local station.

Transmission Of Signals Up 900 Per Cent

Wave Wobbling, Squeals Practically Defeated Under Latest Code.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 6.—Wave-wobbling and the heterodyne squeal have capitulated to the march of progress in technical radio, and a year from now they should be only a memory to radio listeners.

The Federal Radio Commission has decided that it is technically feasible for broadcasting stations to increase their operating efficiency 900 per cent, and completely eliminate heterodyne howls in their regular service areas. This week a new regulation was adopted reducing the permissable deviation or "wobble" of stations from 500 to 50 cycles on either side of their assigned wave lengths.

Decision was reached by the commission after Ellis A. Yost, its chief examiner, had made the unqualified recommendation that the regulations be tightened up in this way. His report was based on a technical hearing called by the commission last month to determine whether so drastic a reduction in the tolerance of all stations would cause undue hardship. At this hearing, over which Mr. Yost presided, the sentiment of broadcasters and leading radio authorities was decidedly in favor of such a change.

Upon receipt of the Yost report, the commission asked its legal division to draft a new regulation which would carry out the terms of the Yost recommendation. The new regulation would become effective one year from the date of its promulgation, it was explained, to give all stations ample time in which to install the new precise frequency control apparatus, or modify their present controls.

'BIG THREE' AT NBC

Amos — Freeman Gosden

Andy — Charles Correll

IT WAS A coincidence a few weeks ago that the "big three" of NBC, Amos 'n' Andy and Baby Rose Marie, should be in Pittsburgh at the same time. They are the only artists holding a five year contract in radio. Chummy, too, as we see them here in the studios of KDKA.

Dill Advises Use of Long Wavelengths

Co-Author of Radio Bill Would Adopt Plans of Foreign Countries.

By MARTIN CODEL.

Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—United States Senator [illegible] Dill, member of the Progressive bloc in Congress and perhaps the best informed man on Capitol Hill on the subject of radio, will return about June 20 from his survey of European radio conditions with a twofold conviction.

First, Senator Dill is more than ever persuaded that the American system of private initiative and competition in broadcasting, with all its faults, is superior to the European systems of government-operated monopolies, particularly in the matter of program variety and appeal.

Secondly, Senator Dill is convinced that the long wave being used in Europe for broadcasting, with their extraordinary capacity for high power and long-distance transmission, should be adopted on [illegible] on the North American continent [illegible] to reduce the domestic and international congestion that prevails on the limited number of channels now used by the United States, Canada, Mexico and Cuba.

The co-author of the radio act of 1927 under which radio is regulated in this country revealed these convictions in his recent trans-Atlantic speech over the [illegible].

Twenty-six nations broadcast in 28 different languages in Europe. The wave lengths are divided [illegible] and with good receivers the European listener can tune in any number of programs from other countries.

THE LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

Shaw's Wisdom

NEW YORK, June 6.—Even in a serious mood Shaw is an arresting earful on the loudspeakers. He serves up history with a new and sparkling sauce. The concoction is pleasant to take. It might be studied to advantage by the uplifters who would make of radio a more educational force. No pompousness, no effort to impress is apparent. Instead a leisurely, informal chat from a persistently bubbling fountain of wisdom, given more in the manner of the classroom than the public rostrum. You get a picture of a genuinely benevolent man who has found that startling wit is the most effective way to win the attention of the world.

Louis Reid

As Historian

It is strange to hear Shaw in a tribute-paying mood, even though the tributes are those of a careful historian rather than of a funeral orator. He talked 10 minutes over them, speaking extemporaneously, it seemed, just to tell the world his ideas not only of Joan of Arc, but of Russia's Trotzky and Britain's Pankhurst and of inquisitions in general.

* * *

He lighted his talk with reference to present-day civilization and, of course, there was the usual wisecrack. That's what gave suspense to his radio period—the feeling that a wisecrack was just around the corner. Sure enough it came. It came when he said that Joan, according to the standards of Hollywood, had no sex appeal. It marked the first time we have caught the phrase on the air.

Some day, and I hope it's not far off—the broadcasters will lead Shaw to the microphone when he is brimming over with wisecracks. Some day when he feels it necessary to say something about America, about politics—he classes political speakers in three groups, statesmen, orators and windbags—would in itself be worth a half hour even in the most uncomfortable of colonial chairs.

Will Rogers is our nearest approach to Shaw as a wit and philosopher. His wit is sharp and penetrating. His knowledge of human nature is profound, but he lacks the broad culture of John Bull's balloon-puncturing Irishman. His ammunition depot is not so well-stocked with barbs. And he gives the impression—on the radio, at least—that he knows that his remarks are pretty slick pieces of observation. He chuckles, he hesitates—all good technique on the stage where he must wait for laughs. On the air such technique is useless.

Will Rogers Our Wit

We have heard the cowboy sage in certain inspired moments when he sizzled and lit up the ether like a skyrocket. We have also heard him when he seemed pretty much of a dud. Like Shaw, he is at his best when he turns his shafts upon the political scene. But unlike Shaw, he must be somewhat unintelligible to foreign ears.

Yet, we can be proud of Rogers as the man with the most devastating wit in America since Mark Twain. The radio rajahs could use him oftener. He's worth their time and some of their gaudy profits.

Were Twain alive today he might, too, be an answer to broadcasters' prayers. He might be the sole figure whom Europe clamored to hear. He would have something to say and he, too, would say it startlingly. Heaven knows, Europe sends up no cry today for American talkers. There seems to be nothing we can tell them. They are not even interested in what we think about them.

YOU MUST MEET TAMEA!

Quite the most fascinating little savage that ever asked for love!

She asked for love—demanded love—with every look of her eyes; her arms, with every note of her pagan song and with every movement of her savage dances. No wonder a good-looking American boy shook off the chains of conventional civilization to follow her back to the seductive beauty of a South Sea isle. From the gilded society of San Francisco to starry nights under a tropic moon, it's all thrills!

The Real O. Henry Stands Revealed In Book of His Life

THOSE who [illegible] could write [illegible]

George Seibel

[illegible] Maurice [illegible] The [illegible] lished by Appleton.

The book [illegible] tells [illegible]

He has [illegible] than Shakespeare.

[illegible] call [illegible]

When [illegible] Porter [illegible] from a New York [illegible] that [illegible] expose [illegible] be sent [illegible] opened [illegible]

A True Picture

Having [illegible] to know O. Henry [illegible] during [illegible] summer [illegible] spent in Pittsburgh [illegible] had [illegible] this [illegible] portrait [illegible] man [illegible] are [illegible] there [illegible] haste and [illegible]

An [illegible] in the frontispiece, a half-tone [illegible] duction of the best [illegible] photograph. It is [illegible] "Vanderwerde." It [illegible] Van der Weerde. I have sat a score of times in that same chair that shows on the picture, in the studio where Porter's daughter Margaret was a frequent guest.

Aside from such minor lapses, this life of our great romancer and humorist is marvelously sympathetic as well as essentially accurate.

It now seems reasonably clear that O. Henry served in the penitentiary for a crime he never committed. There was a shortage in the books of the bank. It was one of those go-as-you-please banks where good fellows borrowed from the till and forgot to remember. Somebody had to pay for the slack system. The somebody was Porter.

Sinbad the Sailor

His wanderings began. He was a stevedore in New Orleans, unloading bananas. He became the chum of Al Jennings, bank and train robber, in Central America. He saw the world and learned to sympathize with its outcasts and outlaws.

And all the time he had as talisman the one book which was his magic lamp. It was the dictionary. There he found his power over words.

His life became a legend. After he went to New York, concealing his prison years under his nom de plume, he moved in a narrow circle. I remember that for four years I tried in vain to get a photograph of the new "Maupassant," who was as shy as the French Guy.

His life is still a legend. Much of it is like a chapter from the annals of Grub street. Bob Davis prints a score of letters asking for advances of money ranging from $15 to $125. No one knows what Porter did with the money. That's the biggest mystery about O. Henry, himself a mystery.

Manna for Posterity

If the people who knew him had only known what fascinating riches might have been preserved. "Had I even suspected," Davis writes, "that all he thought and said, his manner, his methods, his whole personality was to become manna for posterity, these [illegible] tive observations would have been completed, more intimate in detail and perforce better reading." The Boswells were caught napping.

He described himself in one of his letters as "resembling more than anything else a retail butcher who is worried about his bills. Who would have taken him for a genius?"

Will Irwin says his tales were conceived in all manner of ways. "Mostly the plots sprang into his mind in flashes generated from some remark, some picture, some slight incident of the city's work." Of course the [illegible] [illegible] processes. The [illegible] popular story, "Roads of Destiny," [illegible] "Arabian Nights" [illegible]

[illegible] manner [illegible] than an [illegible] himself [illegible] memoirs [illegible] panes [illegible] were mostly [illegible] or poetry. Davis and Maurice go as far as he could be known. They have unveiled the real O. Henry.

NEW WAR BOOKS BY EVERYBODY

[illegible] Mr. Fegenfeller [illegible] [illegible] Xenophon [illegible]

Perhaps [illegible] book is a valuable collection of documents and itself a document in military psychology. But Xenophon and Caesar needed [illegible] And [illegible] will indulge in a quiet smile.

More About the War

Capt. Will Judy gives a record of his observations as a field clerk from enlistment until the end of the war in "A Soldier's Diary," published by Judy. He tells why some of the American troops turned their guns on their comrades and what the English "Tommies" did when the Americans mentioned Bunker Hill.

Judy insists the army is founded on caste. The Regulars speak slightingly of the National Guard and the Guard calls the National Army conscripts. Even within the Regular Army is a caste of castes, the West Point group, these conspire against their fellows who have come up from the ranks.

One of the famous army jests was "A politician is a man who gives your life for his country." The book is without special significance except as a collection of raw material, some very raw.

No doubt there will be thousands of war books during the present century, but they are all getting very much alike and very dull. Let us have peace!

ANOTHER CURE FOR EVERY ILL

Labor problems have come up in all countries except among the Africans and the American Indians. "They are still asleep and have no desire to work."

[illegible] Ram Wagel's "World Economic Depression Remedies" published by Arthur Hill, points out that the economic depression of today is unlike any other preceding hard times. Overspeculation on the stock exchange "reflected and did not bring about the slump." Americans must realize that there can be no prosperity at home unless neighbors and customers are put on a sound footing. America manufactures more than 40 per cent of the goods in all the world; yet there are certain commodities which must be imported. Steel is an outstanding product; to produce this 40 other commodities have to be imported. Tariff has led to a rise in the cost of living without a proportionate rise in wages.

By regulating food production and limiting speculation overproduction may be curbed. Competition in industry characterized as "cut-throat" reveals a need for co-ordination and scientific management.

Two courses may be followed: curtail production and reduce standards of living, or seek new markets and maintain the present standards.

LIFE LESSONS IN NEW NOVELS

There is but a narrow border [illegible] dividing madness from [illegible] and it is hard to say on which side stands Brenda, heroine of "The Longer Day," published by Bobbs-Merrill, [illegible] piece of psychology by the author of "Miss [illegible]." Perhaps Brenda is meant to symbolize Poetry, or a sort of Shelleyan Skylark [illegible] London. At any rate, here [illegible] cultured society painted [illegible] shimmering lights and [illegible] shadows.

Margaret Pulsifer solves a similar problem with more dash [illegible] in "The Golden Hoof," published by Morrow. The [illegible] Paris, where her Baltic [illegible] meets death and [illegible] followed by [illegible] Nikole [illegible] one of Andersen's [illegible] and [illegible] and her Prince Charming is waiting [illegible] the [illegible] in America.

More exotic than either is the [illegible] lady of Gene Fowler's "Shoe the Wild Mare," published by Liveright. It is a de[illegible] and [illegible] story of [illegible] freaks, the prize ring and [illegible] finance. Melodrama and sex are here by the [illegible] and the spades are [illegible] shovels.

By Reason of Strength

Pioneer stories of the South are [illegible] as common as those of the West, and Gerald W. Johnson has written one that is most uncommon in "By Reason of Strength," published by Minton, Balch. An itinerant Scotch preacher and his wife come to North Carolina. He was a farmer, and when he came across as a missionary to preach the gospel to his countrymen he became a real pastor, going from place to place, marrying and burying his parishioners, while his wife raised her children and functioned as nurse and doctor.

[illegible] of the sons, a fine young lad, goes to the Mexican War and comes back minus a leg, a drunkard and good-for-nothing. Then the grandsons go to the Civil War and only one comes back. Without intending to be so, this story is another indictment of war. These Scotch settlers had worked more than half a century, they were prosperous and happy when the Civil War came along, taking away one thing after another, until in the end they had to begin all over again to redeem the soil that had gone back to wilderness. Such is war!

The book is written without bitterness, the author being far enough removed from the generation that struggled and suffered. It is a vital story of [illegible] [illegible] literally.

QUEER PEOPLE IN A QUEER BOOK

Carlisle D. Ogden's "Double Harness," published by Harrison, tells how a minister of the old school loved the daughter of a Lord, and on their wedding journey during a mountain climb the air froze, which made breathing difficult. When they returned home the young bride's actions became queer and they separated. One day he gets a letter telling him he has a daughter. This daughter's own romance is the sequel [illegible]

Antarctic Comedy

Wolcott Gibbs' "Bird Life at the Pole," published by Morrow, recounts the amazing adventures of Commander Christopher Robin. Robin is a newspaper writer sent by a syndicate to the South Pole. Ten million dollars was used in the expedition on a discarded warship. Five pianos and four electric ice-boxes were taken along. A penguin which helps the marines at their domestic duties adds to the farcical fun in this amusing take-off.

Graduates in Art Facing Hazardous Life, Poor Rewards

Within the next week approximately 110 students from the College of Fine Arts of the Carnegie Institute of Technology will be launched into a world reluctant to absorb them.

Penelope Redd

This group represents graduates from the departments of architecture, decoration, illustration, art education, music, public school music and drama.

Looking about in the exhibition rooms of the College of Fine Arts, where the students' work is assembled, one regards their debut as an extremely hazardous procedure.

Other than the students from the public school, music and art education courses where there is reasonable certainty of a teaching post, architects, decorators, illustrators and painters are thrust into an unresponsive environment.

Many of these young people have somehow managed with scholarships to secure tuition and with every sort of labor to achieve the goal of graduation. Some, of course, have had four years paid in full by parents.

Perilous Career

All, however, are now the brink of embarkation on an always perilous economic career at a time more precarious than ever.

One talks perhaps with a graduate of a year ago who has contrived to live through the past 12 months by odd jobs in the teaching world.

Possessing both undisputed talent and the capacity for concentrated application in his work, he has not been able to supplement his meager fare as a part-time teacher by occasional jobs as an illustrator.

A practical person knows that even in these depressed days illustrations are still imperative apart from those used by large advertising agencies with their own artist-staff.

At present there is no meeting-place for the young artist just graduated and his prospective patron. The one does not know where he may find the other.

And so it goes, the young artist developing with sustenance only from the free air.

Compensation Poor

In so far as worldly folk regard an economic minimum, artists rarely approximate the average.

Any surgeon, lawyer or engineer comparable in quality will receive a monetary return for his work immeasurably beyond the meager living that an artist wrests from the world.

Occasionally, an artist has some extraordinary compensation for his work as does Boardman Robinson.

Unexpectedly given an opportunity to prove that he could paint mural decorations by an imaginative patron, Edgar Kaufmann, one finds that people from all viewpoints of life are interested in them.

A year after they have been presented to the public, one happens upon comments made by men representing our city.

A. C. Robinson, a banker, remarks that "no one can estimate how far reaching the influence of such things may extend, and how they may leaven the lives and ideals of countless individuals."

Murals Praised

Dr. Goldenson, from a life dedicated to contemplation as opposed to activity, says:

"I have felt for a long time that the principal shortcoming of modern industry and commerce is in the fact that these do not sufficiently include within their purview social and cultural values.

"The mural paintings by Boardman Robinson make me feel a double thrill, one that comes from the direct appreciation of the paintings themselves and the other from the realization that this may mark a new trend in the business world."

To us the most significant compensation for Boardman Robinson's long, weary years of preparation for his chance to do the mural paintings, is in the words of Elmer A. Stephen, the Director of Art in the Pittsburgh Public Schools.

Mr. Stephen says:

"The murals depicting Art and Industry by Boardman Robinson, installed in their delightful modern setting, have created an interest among the teachers and pupils of the Pittsburgh Public Schools unsurpassed by any other artistic creation now in our city."

TIME TO BRUSH UP YOUR FRENCH

If your favorite play at the Theater Francais is "Phedre," if you want to buy a small quantity of camphorated oil, if you have a sparking plug that got mucked up and if your old man wears a flannel night-hat, you will need W. G. Harris' "Brush Up Your French," published by Brentano's, before you sail on the Ile de France. The book contains 75 conversations on these and equally profound themes. Incidentally, you can also learn how they talk of these matters in dear old London.

Has several nick names: Mollie and [illegible] likes [illegible] makes her grind her teeth.

Hates shopping [illegible] likes to buy [illegible] furniture. [illegible] the first thing she notices about a man is [illegible] and next his smile.

Admits she is a terrible business woman, but [illegible] a typewriter. [illegible] a typewriter [illegible] like appearance to her correspondence.

Has always wanted to play the cello in the [illegible]. Aside from these musical yearnings, her other ambition was to be a dancer.

She walks in her sleep. Is reputed to have the most gorgeous collection of pajamas in radio. One pair she describes as [illegible] Lavender and black with white cuffs. Has brown eyes but [illegible] the impression of being a blonde. This annoys her.

One of her favorite recollections is singing for Mme. Schumann-Heink when she was 14 years old. It happened in Lebanon, Pa., her home town. Schumann-Heink told her to study. Which she did. The great diva saw Mary not so long ago in the N.B.C. studios. Then came another great moment. Schumann-Heink remembered her. Schumann-Heink is her ideal, incidentally.

Mary Hopple

Has a huge collie dog at her home in Pennsylvania that loves to hear Mary sing to him and [illegible] him. Which she does.

Likes [illegible] with a [illegible] pig knuckles and sauerkraut. Also corned beef and cabbage and [illegible] alligator pears and salad.

Gets moods and refuses to see anyone but it doesn't last long.

Collects china and metal dogs and has about 30 in her collection [illegible]

She doesn't smoke.

In addition to her radio work she has been broadcasting more than two years. She sings in concerts and in churches. Came to New York four years ago. Worked as a file clerk in a book store for more than a year while studying. Her big break was an audition at NBC and she has been busy ever since.

Plays tennis and likes to cook. Goes home for vacation every summer and has an orgy of canoeing.

Comes of English and German ancestry but looks Irish.

Does all her own housework but it isn't a big apartment.

Once had to come to the studio for rehearsal in a dress borrowed from a neighbor. An ambitious burglar made a clean sweep of her apartment.

Plays golf. Likes to paint furniture green.

She made her New York debut in the Hall of Fame . . . but her statue isn't in its niche there yet. Just give her time.

Society's Interest Again Turns to June Nuptials

Elizabeth Wells Weds Tomorrow, Deb Betrothed

By PATRICIA PITT

Now that that all absorbing event, the Sewickley Horse Show, is over, society folks can devote their undivided attention to the long procession of June brides. Of course late in the month June debutantes will vie with them for the social spotlight.

But in the meantime we'll talk and talk and talk about our June brides. There'll be one tomorrow, distinctive Elizabeth Dewey Wells, daughter of Mrs. Benjamin Glyde Wells, of the Schenley Apartments. She will be given in marriage to Rowland Erving, son of Mrs. Rowland H. Erving, of Cathedral Mansions, tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the Third Presbyterian Church.

I've already told you about a number of parties honoring her, and Friday Mrs. Charles Holmes Wolfe entertained with a small luncheon in her honor in the Pittsburgh Golf Club.

Among those from out-of-town attending the wedding will be the Raymond G. Scarletts, of Baltimore; the Lawrence Ockenlanders, of Atlantic City; Mrs. Samuel E. Ewing, Elizabeth Dewey, the John Kennedy Ewings, Samuel Ewing, Jr., and the Joseph Ewings, all of Bryn Mawr, Pa., and the Walter J. Phillipses, of Endeavor, Pa.

Before I talk about any more brides I must tell you about an engagement.

Adding glamor to the romantic month of June is the announcement today of a betrothal of one of the most popular members of the social set, Nancy Allderdice. Her father and mother, the Taylor Allderdices, are announcing her engagement to Leonard S. Mudge, son of the E. W. Mudges.

And I have some more news about Carolyn McKee's plans for her wedding. She's going to be married, you know, on Thursday, June 25, to Dr. A. Boyd Miller, Jr., of Erie, in Christ Methodist Episcopal Church.

A few Sundays ago I named the girls in the bridal party, and today I can announce the men. Wilbur Miller, of Corning, N. Y., will be his brother's best man. And the ushers will be Dr. John Leech,

Summer Garb Forecast at Horse Show

Because smart things worn at the Sewickley horse show, which ended yesterday, will be copied, and worn by fashionable folks during the summer, everyone's interested in what the spectators wore.

First of all, the smartest thing for rainy weather is the white slicker. Mrs. Lewis A. Park wore a notably smart one, and so did Mrs. J. O. Burgwin.

Knitted or crocheted hats were much in vogue, with panamas next in favor. Some of the members of the younger set wore floppy-brimmed hats of starched cotton fabrics. Louise Reed chose a smart little hat of black knitted fabric, fitting snugly to the head, and Mrs. W. Terrell Johnson chose a crocheted chartreuse green and white wool hat.

Pastel crepes were favorites for sports dresses, and mesh knits were popular, too. And all sorts of smart, contrasting jackets were seen.

Anne and Margaret Rose chose shell-pink mesh-knit frocks with which they wore beige straw hats. Pink accented with shades of beige and brown, by the way, was most popular. Of course boucle frocks are always popular with society folks. Mrs. H. N. Van Voorhis chose a one of brown and white.

All the spectators wore sturdy sport shoes. White in combination with black was notably popular, and brown and beige was a favored color scheme for oxfords and pumps. Gloves in white or beige shades, wrinkling at the wrist, were smartly chosen.

Bridal Party Announced by Grace Clarke

One of the most interesting weddings of late June will be that of Grace Isabella Clarke, daughter of Charles Marshel Clarke, of Sewickley, who has just named her bridal party.

Her marriage to Thomas Gorden Murdough, of Chicago, will take place on Saturday, June 20, at 8 o'clock in the evening in the Sewickley Presbyterian Church. Officiating will be the Rev. Walter Brooke Stabler, of New York. A small reception in the Clarke home will follow.

Dr. Catharine Murdoch Clarke, of Sewickley, will be her sister's maid of honor, and Mrs. Wiley N. Caldwell, of Beverly Hills, Cal., will be her sister's matron of honor.

Serving as bridesmaids will be Harriet Crutchfield, Barbara White and Mrs. George B. Barrett, of Sewickley; Mrs. Walter Brooke Stabler, of New York; Mrs. James S. Parkhill, Jr., of Buffalo, N. Y.; Mrs. Hobart R. Avery, of Batavia, N. Y., and Mrs. Alan K. Shaw, of New York.

Norman W. Martin, of New York, will be best man, and Robert R. Reed, cousin of the bride-elect; Daniel Pratt Clarke, her brother; Wiley N. Caldwell, her brother-in-law; Carlton H. Gilbert, of New York; William B. Sleigh, Jr., of Boston; William W. Clarke, of Utica;; Milton G. Kendrick, of Havre de Grace, Md.; Prentice Carnell, Jr., of Albany, and H. Donald Norstrand, of Plattsburg, N. Y., will be ushers.

Charles A. Woods, Jr., will play the music at the wedding, to take place in the Presbyterian Church of Sewickley. Before the wedding night there will be a series of entertainments given for the bride-to-be and the bridal party and the guests.

Bellevue Women to Discuss Kings and Democracy

Club to Enter on 26th Year With Drama Program On President's Day, Oct. 6

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG
Club Editor.

Another new year book is in the hands of the club members. This time it is the Woman's Literary Club of Bellevue that has issued a program of compelling interest for the 1931-32 season under the euphonious caption, "The Passing of Kings and the Progress of Democracy."

The club will begin its twenty-sixth year with president's day, honoring the new executive head, Mrs. W. D. Reid, on October 6, in Mrs. Elmer L. Kidney's home, Orchard and Union avenues. The program will consist of a play by the drama committee.

To View Paintings

The next meeting day will take the women to Carnegie Institute where they will view the international exhibition of paintings, have luncheon in the cafeteria and later begin their program study, Mrs. Kidney and Mrs. B. H. Snyvers building its foundation with papers on "What Is Democracy" and "The New World."

November 3 brings Germany as the study topic with "Germany Under the Kaiser" and "The Republic," as the discussion subjects. A guest day in charge of the music and social committees on November 17 will break into the study program, but it will be picked up again on December 2 with a comparative study of "The King of England," "The President of France," "The President of the United States" and "The President of Switzerland."

"Christmas Customs" and "The Spirit of Peace" are appropriate subjects for the two papers to be presented at the Christmas party, for which the president will be hostess on December 16.

Apt Quotations

Not the least interesting part of the year book are the apt quotations which accompany the calendared programs. "Peace hath her victories" is placed under "India," which is the study subject for the first meeting of the new year, India from both the English and Indian points of view.

Ancient and modern Egypt are to be discussed at the January 19 session, then comes Russia with "Pre-War Russia," "Last of the Czars" and "The U. S. S. R." scheduled for the day. Under "Italy" papers on "Fascism" and "The Vatican City" will be the mental food, then a short history of Spain, a description of the country as it is today and a sketch of Alphonso XIII; next "China's New Day," "Modern Turkey" and "Hungary" and March 29 will introduce something a little different, a lecture, the speaker for which is unannounced in the year books.

Election April 5

Election of officers makes April 5 an important date on the club calendar and in addition there is to be a discussion of "South America and Its Revolutions" that day. Mexico and Central America—"Our Neighbors to the South" and after that "Our Colonial Responsibilities"—Porto Rico, Hawaiian Islands and the Philippines—are slated and for the very last meeting of the season, "Our Seven Wonders of Modern Construction," which will be given consideration by seven members of the club.

Mrs. Reid's official staff includes the vice presidents, Mrs. I. I. Knox and Mrs. G. W. Seaman, the recording and corresponding secretaries, Mrs. W. H. Gorman and Mrs. J. L. Rodrigues, and the treasurer, Mrs. R. J. Gibson.

INCIDENTALLY—

At almost every club meeting now one hears the candidacy of Judge Sara Soffel indorsed.

A change in the club calendar has been adopted by the Crafton Woman's Club and next season only one meeting will be held each month.

The care of four little girls assumed by the Leech Farm committee of the Health Colony Club last season will be carried on through the summer.

Do you remember the gargoyle fountain head in the Unitarian Woman's Alliance at the art-in-industry contest? It was modeled by one of the members to cover a refrigerator outlet in her home.

The "sign over the door" at the Alliance's gift shop exhibit was done in cross stitch by Mrs. George Stebbins from a Christmas card of the Edward B. Lees. This is to be taken to the L. Walter Mason Memorial room which the First Church has furnished at the Unitarian House, Star Island, N. H.

Tourist Club Lunch Closes 44th Season

"Gateways to Romance, Adventure, History and Promise" is the subject chosen for next year's study by the Tourists. The club closed its forty-fourth year with a luncheon at the Pines on Monday, a business meeting supplementing the luncheon. The club indorsed the candidacy of Judge Sara Soffel.

While the Tourists' Club is mainly a study organization, it has always been active in charitable work, assisting the Needlework Guild, distributing flowers, fruits, jellies and canned foods to the hospitals on Rose Day and doing work for the blind. Reports from all these committees were heard on Monday.

Mrs. Porter Brace, retiring president, introduced her successor, Mrs. H. K. Gowdy, who, in her inaugural address, pointed out that the Tourists had furnished the last two presidents of the Congress of Clubs. Mrs. Neva Morris gave two readings and a musical program was furnished by Mrs. Henrietta K. Hibbard, contralto; Mrs. Lena Powell Walkinshaw, soprano, and Mrs. William H. Patterson, accompanist.

Wilkinsburg Civic Club Gives Lunch

The annual luncheon of the Women's Civic Club of Wilkinsburg will be held in the Penn-Lincoln Hotel Thursday afternoon. The social committee, which includes Mrs. John E. Dean, Mrs. Stanley Johnston, Mrs. Edwin Pitzer, Mrs. D. P. Lutz, Mrs. Eugene Pryor and Mrs. E. R. Wenrich, met with Mrs. H. E. Robinson, chairman of the ways and means committee, and Mrs. Lettie Ege, president of the club, at the home of Mrs. Dean last Monday afternoon to complete plans for the luncheon. The luncheon will be supplemented by bridge.

Breidert, chairman; Mrs. Arthur Neale, vice chairman; Mrs. Lloyd Almy, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. A. L. Schiel, press secretary. Home department, Mrs. W. R. Cuthbert, chairman; Mrs. W. C. O'Reilly, vice chairman; Mrs. W. A. Blair, secretary-treasurer. Literature department, Mrs. H. S. Hopkins, chairman; Miss Lucy Schmitz, vice chairman; Mrs. L. L. Cooper, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. E. N. Zern, press secretary; Mrs. J. L. Cox, program chairman. Department of drama, Mrs. F. H. Larimer, chairman; Mrs. D. S. Taylor, vice chairman and director; Mrs. J. R. Barclay, program chairman. Junior section, Miss Mary Florence Taylor, president; Mrs. William Lehew, vice president; Mrs. Mildred Stewart, recording secretary; Mrs. Amos Hardie, assistant recording secretary; Miss Betty Coulter, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Rody Patterson, press secretary; Mrs. George Bauman, treasurer.

Ingram Club Visited by Former Head

Mrs. Roy E. Kohn, of St. Louis, a former president, was a guest at the Ingram Woman's Club luncheon on Monday in the Congress of Clubs. Mrs. C. H. Tufts, as toastmistress, introduced the retiring president, Mrs. L. C. Hess, and her successor, Mrs. C. W. Biggs.

The club choral sang two groups and Mrs. F. C. Rex gave a solo, Miss Jeannette Miller completing the program with readings. The reading of the year's history, a custom with the Ingram club, was done by Miss Adda Hainer. Later a reception for new members was held.

Card Party To Be Given By Consumers

Mrs. William R. Gardner, president of the Consumer's League, heads the list of patronesses for the card party with which the League will close its season on Friday. The affair will be held at the Mayflower roof garden.

The annual meeting and luncheon of the organization is scheduled for June 19 at the Congress clubhouse. A. P. Huckestein, supervising inspector of the Department of Labor and Industry, will speak, as will also Mrs. T. M. Stahlman, president of the Congress of Clubs, and Mrs. Ralph W. Johnston, her predecessor in office. Reservations for both the luncheon and the card party are being taken at league headquarters in the Nixon Building.

Kappa Delta Alumnae to Hold Picnic

Members of Xi Chapter at the University of Pittsburgh will be guests of the Pittsburgh Alumnae Association of Kappa Delta National Sorority at a picnic Saturday, June 20. On Monday evening, June 15, the local alumnae will hold a songfest at the home of Miss Lucille O'Donnell, Keystone street, in preparation for the annual convention which is to take place in Washington the last week of June.

Pittsburgh alumnae have elected these new officers: President, Miss M. Elizabeth Keifer; vice president, Miss Florence Hazlett; secretary, Miss Hannah Ambramsen; treasurer, Miss Thelma Helm, and editor, Miss Lysle McMillin.

Hampton Club Plans Benefit Garden Party

For the benefit of its civic and charitable work, the Hampton Woman's Club will have a luncheon, garden party and bridge on Saturday afternoon at the home of the president, Mrs. H. G. Taylor, Oak Hill Farms, Mt. Royal boulevard.

Mrs. John D. Ritchey is chairman of the entertainment committee and has as her aides, Mrs. Eugene Whitcomb, Mrs. George Wittmer III and Mrs. Frank Hunter. Mrs. George Wittmer, Jr., and Mrs. Will Hyett are on the prize committee and Mrs. George Campbell, luncheon chairman, is being assisted by Mrs. Samuel Brown, Mrs. Joseph M. Taylor and Mrs. Harry Keil.

Mission Society To Hear Miss Bane

Before the What-So-Ever Missionary Society, in the Community House, Union avenue, North Side, tomorrow evening, Miss Edith Bane, Pittsburgh musician, will tell of the trip which she made around the world last year. The slides with which Miss Bane illustrates her talks were made from photographs which she herself took and which have been colored with unusual skill.

Heads to Be Named For Babies Home

Officers and directors will be elected and annual reports made at the annual meeting of the Pittsburgh Home for Babies, scheduled for 10:30 o'clock Thursday morning in the Woman's City Club.

East Liberty Club Outing Tomorrow

The June outing of the East Liberty Woman's Club, which will take the form of a garden party, will be held tomorrow at the home of Mrs. K. E. Sarver, in Cheswick.

Outing Ends Season for Club Women

The Woman's Club of Pittsburgh ended its year with an outing at the St. Clair Country Club in charge of Mrs. S. A. Hunter, social chairman, on Tuesday.

Mrs. Sigmond Stingel, the retiring president, gave a short talk in which she introduced her successor, Mrs. S. J. Schriener, and presented her with the gavel. In her response, Mrs. Schriener outlined the work for the next year. The club had three guests, Mrs. T. M. Stahlman, president of the Congress of Clubs; Mrs. Ada Null, a member of the West Newton Woman's Club, and Miss Mary Agnes Smith.

Mrs. Stahlman spoke briefly, and Miss Smith gave two groups of solos, accompanied by Mrs. George Herwig. Mrs. Edmond Englert, a past president, presented Mrs. Stingle with the two bars for her past president's pin. Bridge followed luncheon.

Ingomar Club Women To Elect Officers

The Woman's Club of Ingomar will meet at the home of Mrs. A. D. Johnson on Thursday afternoon for its annual election of officers. Judge D. Paulson Foster, of Juvenile Court, will talk of the work of the court. Assisting Mrs. Johnson will be Mrs. C. P. Wynn, Mrs. Howard Donaldson, Mrs. J. A. Geltz, Mrs. Carl Vander-Voort and Mrs. Charles Dornbush.

Scholarship Group To Give Luncheon

The scholarship committee of the Homewood Woman's Club, Mrs. J. H. Messner, chairman, is in charge of the luncheon and benefit card party to be held Wednesday in the home of Mrs. R. H. M. MacKenzie, South Graham street. The proceeds will be used for the club's scholarship fund.

League Heads Are Renamed By Lutherans

At the closing meeting of the season held in the First Lutheran Church on Tuesday, the Lutheran Women's League re-elected the present officers. They are: Mrs. R. B. Purkiss, president; Mrs. J. H. White and Mrs. Kathryn Frasch, vice presidents; Mrs. Louis Bohn, treasurer; Mrs. Harry Dreher, recording secretary; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. J. Probst; financial secretary, Miss Estella Beilstein; historian, Mrs. S. C. Michelfelder; membership chairman, Miss Mary Metz.

Mrs. Josephine E. Stearns, executive secretary of the women's division of the Pittsburgh Council of Chruches, addressed the meeting. Mrs. Stearns was formerly general secretary of the National Council of Church Women. Miss Miriam Harris spoke concerning the recently dedicated John Legum Memorial.

Tri-Borough Club To Give Luncheon

Mrs. Frank Morrison, of Kimball avenue, is taking reservations for the luncheon which the Tri-Borough Women's Club of New Kensington will give Thursday in the Alcoma Country Club. A program is being planned for the afternoon.

Guest Day To End Year At Ben Avon

With guest day tomorrow the Been Avon Heights Community Club will close its season. The program will consist of a talk by Florence Fisher Parry, columnist, and music by Elizabeth Lloyd Kirkpatrick, soprano, and Mrs. William A. Reger, pianist. The club's election resulted in the choice of Mrs. T. L. Reger as president; Mrs. Homer Neely, vice president; Mrs. W. A. Lowrie, recording secretary; Mrs. S. E. Bowman, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. J. E. Moore, treasurer.

Edgewood Cot Club Luncheon Tuesday

The annual luncheon of the Edgewood Cot Club is scheduled to be held at the Edgewood Country Club Tuesday. Mrs. Alexander M. Cadman, hostess, will be assisted by Mrs. T. R. Kennedy, Mrs. H. H. Sargent, Mrs. E. C. Bothwell, Mrs. C. S. Koch, Mrs. Joseph Price, Mrs. Edward McCrady, Mrs. Jasper C. Ackerman, Mrs. Wyn B. Morris, Mrs. Joseph B. Smith and Mrs. R. A. Rundle.

Expose Made Of Society In Article

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER

Universal Service Society Editor

NEW YORK, June 6. A suspicion lurks in my mind that there was a merry perhaps, wicked twinkle in Charles Hansen Towne's eye when he accepted for publication the article from Mary Borden's vitriolic pen labeled "This Thing Called Society," which appears in the June issue of Harper's Bazar.

Having been slightly horrified at some earlier anonymous paragraphs written by Mary Borden, and which were so thinly veiled everyone realized they were directed at the Rotund Elsa Maxwell, ring master of international society's new "circus set," I was prepared to peruse a bitter and searching expose of Mayfair.

Explodes Bombshells

And, Mary has not disappointed!

She explodes bombshell after bombshell and I warn her she probably never again will find "welcome" emblazoned at the portals of the great and costly houses in Palm Beach and on Long Island.

The only hope Miss Borden sees for the American social registerites is for them to emulate the country gentry of England, put on old clothes and go out in the garden and dig—possibly for worms.

Really, Miss Borden, you cannot actually want our well turned out ladies to get closer to nature and turn farmerettes.

It is unthinkable.

Astors to Sail

The Vincent Astors will not occupy "Beechwood," their villa in Newport, during the season that will officially open a fortnight hence.

Mr. and Mrs. Astor will embark, this month, on an extended European cruise in their yacht "Nourmahal," and if they adhere to present plans will spend much time in Scandinavian waters.

Mrs. Phipps Angler

While it is not generally known, the venerable Mrs. Henry Phipps, widow of the steel magnate who was, at one time, a partner of the late Andrew Carnegie and the departed Henry Clay Frick, is an ardent angler.

Mrs. Phipps journeys each year to the wilds of Canada and makes her headquarters at the Cascapedia Club, near the Rostigouche River. While at Cascapedia she spend many hours each day fishing for salmon.

Society has not interested Mrs. Phipps for a number of years, and she divides her time between Palm Beach and the far-from-ostentatious estate she has occupied, at Great Neck, L. I.

Engaged to Wed

Celia Randolph Robinson is engaged!

The other day I learned that the attractive Celia is the promised bride of William Durant Campbell—one of the great "catches" of New York.

Alliance Porch Party Dates Set

June 10 and 24, July 8 and 22, August 5 and September 9 are the dates selected for the annual porch parties of the Woman's Alliance of the First Unitarian Church. Mrs. Mary M. Keenoy, Mrs. W. B. Spellmire, Mrs. George E. Stebbins, Mrs. Roswell H. Johnson, Mrs. H. B. Wilson and Mrs. H. F. Phillips will be in charge.

SOCIALITES NO. LXVI

Drawn from life by William R. Shulgold.

ONE OF THE most likeable members of the social set is bronzed Mrs. T. J. Hilliard, of Aylesboro avenue. She's the enthusiastic chairman of woman's golf at the Fox Chapel Golf Club and plays all summer long in tournament after tournament.

Besides golf and horse shows, she's interested in the theater, in music and, most of all, in her attractive family. She has two little girls, Mary Jones Hilliard and Elsie Mead Hilliard, and three sons, Thomas Jones Hilliard, Jr., Harry Talbot Hilliard and William R. Hilliard.

of Ebensburg, and Dr. Willard Cannehill, Dr. Chester Beall, Robert McKee, brother of the bride-to-be, Dr. John Silvis, Harold Milliken and Gerald Prather.

Garden Party

Now just a few words about a garden party, the one that the Civic Club of Allegheny County will give on Saturday, June 20, from 2 to 6 o'clock, on the beautiful estate of Mrs. William Thaw, Jr., Sewickley Heights. There'll be a tour of the gardens, abloom with roses and peonies, bridge and music. Mrs. J. G. Pontefract is chairman of the bridge, and Mrs. Clark Hammond is in charge of refreshments.

Club Opening

I hear that Saturday will be a gala day for many members of the smart set, for it is planned to hold the formal opening of the new addition to the Fox Chapel Golf Club that day.

Thurston Wright is chairman of the house committee, which will decide in just what form the opening will be made.

Mary Childs Engaged

A betrothal that has just created a furore in Pittsburgh society is that of attractive Mary Childs, daughter of the James H. Childses, of Albermarle street, and William T. King, son of the Tarrant P. Kings, of Milton, Mass.

Mary is a graduate of Miss Porter's School, Farmington, Conn., and her fiance of Harvard University.

Debut Date Set

December 22 is the date chosen by the William B. Todds, of Park Mansions, to present their daughter, Lucille.

She will make her bow that evening at a supper-dance in the University Club.

Elizabeth Women To End Club Year

The Elizabeth Woman's Club has chosen Pleasant Hill Farm as the place for its annual luncheon, which will take place Saturday. This event closes the year for the club.

Miss Harwood Sets June 24 For Wedding

June 24 is the date selected by Catherine Harwood, daughter of the Paul Henry Harwoods, for her marriage to Charles Lockhart, son of the James H. Lockharts, of Fifth avenue. The ceremony will take place in the Lake Placid Club Chapel, New York, and the Rev. Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr, of the Shadyside Presbyterian Church, will officiate.

The maid of honor will be Marion Fernie, of Milwaukee, and Catherine Aurelia Harwood, of Pasadena, cousin of the bride-elect, and Lydia Maxwell, of Villa Nova, Pa., will be bridesmaids.

Serving as his brother's best man will be George D. Lockhart, and the ushers will include another brother, James H. Lockhart, Jr.; Paul H. Harwood, Jr., brother of the bride-to-be; John Stinson, of Baltimore; Paul De Forest Hicks, of Pittsburgh, and Frank S. Katzenbach, of Trenton, N. J.

Anne Crosby Weds In Schiller Home

On Tuesday, Anne Crosby, of Belfast, Me., a sister of Mrs. William Bacon Schiller, of Follyfotte Farm, Sewickley Heights, became the bride of Ralph Miller Johnson, of New York, in the Schiller home. The ceremony took place at 12:30 o'clock in the drawing room.

The bride wore a gown of aquamarine blue chiffon with hat and slippers of India brown. Davis, of New York, served as best man. The Johnsons left by motor for White Sulphur Springs after the wedding breakfast.

Carrick Auxiliary Bridge Saturday

Miss Ruth Collins, president-elect of the Girls' Auxiliary to the Mothers' Club of Carrick, is chairman for the auxiliary's annual bridge benefit which is set for next Saturday. It will be held in the Congress of Clubs.

Madelon's Mirror of Feminine Fancy

LIKE the Lady of Shalott we've been peering into our faithful mirror watching the colorful passing show . . . and we've caught a glimpse of a gay caravan of gypsies . . . seen the tea leaves spilled . . . heard the fortune-teller's voice weaving a spell over his charmed listeners. You, too, may take a trip into "to-be-or-not-to-be" land! Make a luncheon date with a friend for the Gypsy Tea Shop, 207 Fifth Avenue . . . have a dainty meal . . . and watch your tea leaves form into a wonderful fortune! It will add a fillip of interest to the most jaded imagination . . . and the food's delicious! One trip . . . and you'll be a devotee of gypsies as we are! Try it tomorrow for luncheon or supper.

. . . Silver Roosters

SILVER roosters . . . one on each of the little cocktail cups and canape plates that Sipe's are featuring as the "piece de resistance" for June brides and all such! What party wouldn't be a success with such gay company! The plates are black glass . . . the cups lacquer red glass . . . and the roosters and bandings are sterling silver deposit on the glass. And if you want to feel absolutely complete about it . . . you may have a cocktail shaker to match! A gift that will stand out as the most unique of the day. At Sam E. Sipe, 424 Wood Street, at Diamond.

. . . Climbing Up

WE'RE all on the "qui vive" these days to find a good steady rung or two on this old ladder of success we hear so much about. And Mrs. Cornelius of the Grace Martin Secretarial School is just the person who can furnish one rung at least. A good foundation in business training will do a lot for most of us . . . and becomes doubly valuable when Mrs. Cornelius has been our guiding star as it were. Her school is a big airy place, where efficient instructors make one's "daily dozen" an inspiration to bigger and better things later. And as there is a special typing class this summer from July 6th to August 14th . . . we think it would do us all a lot of good to enroll right away. Why not start on your "climb" this Summer? The Grace Martin Secretarial School, 18th Floor, Keenan Building.

. . . Precious Gift

CLOTHES may not "make the man," but figures do undoubtedly go a long way toward making a woman attractive in the present fashions. And that is the very reason why so many women include Mrs. Lasner in their prayers. She is a corsetiere with the precious gift of being able to take the most awkward figure and remodel it into one of grace and charm. Why? Because she Understands . . . she is an artist in her own right. Having a graceful figure doesn't consist of being stuffed into just any kind of corset that holds one together. Mrs. Lasner personally supervises the making of her patrons' garments, and the miracles she works account for the place she holds in all our hearts. Mrs. Lasner is at 604 Clark Building.

. . . And Spectators

FOR those of us who aren't so ambitious as our athletic sisters, Parisian's new spectator sports pump is a gift from the gods. This particular model appears in fine white buckskin with calf trimmings of black or brown. And best of all, it's really comfortable . . . with leather heel . . . and reasonably sturdy to bear all the gadding about that is expected of it as a good spectator. The kind of shoe that will rate cheers from the sidelines in any fashionable group. Personally, we wouldn't be without at least one pair of these . . . especially so when Parisian produces them for their modest price of $6.95. At Parisian, Roosevelt Hotel, corner of Penn and Sixth Street.

. . . 'Way Down

IT'S "make or break" right now with our lawns and gardens! Whether they flourish this Summer depends on us . . . and with Beckert's marking things down the way they are, there's no good alibi for us if our various premises aren't all they should be! From fertilizer to wire porch baskets . . . hoes to cabbage plants . . . and grass clippers to bean poles—everything has experienced a notable cut in price. Better get out your pad and pencil, make notations of your garden needs, and Beckert's will do the rest. At 101 Federal Street, just over the Sixth Street bridge.

. . . About Furs

THERE seems to have been a great amount of hoop-la concerning fur prices this season . . . so we are going to add our "say" to the rest. It's true . . . furs ARE lower-priced now than they've been in a dozen years or more. Right now, Mr. Connolly can show you the smartest, finest furs for the Autumn at prices that will simply astound you. Or if you want your old coat remodeled into a style that will be the envy of all your set . . . have him do it now. As to cleaning and repairing, Mr. Connolly does them in the true method of a fine furrier . . . thoroughly, safely, and well . . . storing your coat for you for very small charge. If you're up on your toes . . . you can't afford not to look ahead to the Autumn . . . you'll have your furs attended to immediately. Connolly Fur Shop, Third Floor, 207 Fifth Avenue, Atlantic 9404.

. . . Here's Your Chance

THIS is the week that the Tri-State Beauty Trades Exposition and Convention is being held in our town . . . and there among the foremost ranks we find the Maison Frederic School of Beauty Culture. They've a booth on the first floor of the Davis Theatre (where the exposition is). Now gather 'round, you lassies who long to brandish curling irons and practice the art of beautifying . . . for, during this week anyone visiting the booth can save just $20 on her tuition in this Beauty School. The attendant in charge of the booth will give you the complete details as to how, where, when and why. It's quite an opportunity, as you see . . . and if you don't jump at the chance, you're not the girls we thought you were. For the shop itself, call Maison Frederic, 207 Fifth Avenue, Atlantic 0884.

. . . "Taster" Time

WE'LL never cease oh-ing and ah-ing over Dimling's "Taster Box"—more so now than ever when we realize that this week (and it's the last), the same "Taster" that we usually buy for 80c a pound is marked to 56c as a gala feature for their Anniversary! This just means that for 56c you may revel in rich chocolates, nut clusters, chewy caramels, and all the dainty bon-bons that make the "Taster" the joy it is to the sweet-toothed mortals. No wonder it walks away with all honors. In 1, 2, 3 or 5-pound boxes—fresh each day at any of the seven Dimling stores . . . or direct from the factory, 801 Liberty Avenue. (15c postage for any size box anywhere in the United States).

. . . Just Returned

NOT long ago Gilbert's went "to market, to market" and now they've returned with simply oodles of brand new furniture and objets d'art that will give you a thrill when you walk into their shop. Now maybe you're to be a June bride . . . or maybe merely a guest at the wedding, or even just one of us who needs some new things to sort of refresh our homes . . . but whatever the case, you'll find the furnishings of your heart's desire down at Gilbert's this second week of their Anniversary! Then, too, you'll remember that Gilbert's is the place where you choose a piece of furniture and they make it up for you in any upholstery you prefer. In other words, you get a real custom-built piece for exactly the price you'd pay for an ordinary one. We like that . . . it's so individual. Gilbert's Fine Furniture at 632 Smithfield Street.

On the Boardwalk not long ago we noticed a pea-green sports outfit! Sounds rather queer we know, but it was simply a knock-out! Remember this, that when wearing odd shades of this type, the simpler the lines of the frock, the better!

. . . Getting Dressy

THESE are the days when we're liable to be called upon to appear at most all sorts of informal party occasions, from a bride's shower on through to an after-the-game tea at the Country Club. And where would we be but for shoes of this type that Petty's is showing this week for $7.50! They're those openwork sandals that we all adopt as our own when Summer arrives. In natural linen, white kid, and black patent. Trimly neat, and just dressy enough for various and sundry events. Make tomorrow your day to trot in for your pair. Petty Shoe Company, main floor of the Jenkins Arcade—call Atlantic 1444.

. . . For "Land Lubbers"

ARE you one of those people that have always said, "Oh, no, I don't swim. I'm just a 'landlubber'?" No need to be in that class any longer! The Natatorium is specializing on private swimming instruction for women every Tuesday and Thursday with Friday morning as well. There are both men and women instructors . . . take your choice . . . and if you don't begin "crawling" in short order, you'll be the first to fall down on the job! Incidentally, if you're looking for a novel kind of party, try a Swim Party. The pool may be chartered from 9:30 to 11:00 . . . and we hear these are going over in a large way. For information, call the Natatorium, Grant 9376, or stop in at 540 Duquesne Way.

. . . This Comfort

TWO sides to this story — Smart Tailoring and Comfort! We women who do a lot of standing 'round will welcome these new shoes the Menihan Arch-Aid people are showing at Ritter & Morrison's this week. They're that full-toed, specially constructed arch type with military heels—a boon to nurses and those of us who are constantly "on the go." In white kid, black, and brown—very smart, very comfortable, and only $9! And if you're wise, you'll make it a point of getting in the first thing in the morning for the "unhurried service" for which Ritter & Morrison is noted. 501 Liberty Avenue.

. . . Car Perfection

ONE glance at it . . . and you will be under its spell just as we were. Of course, being a woman, we can't be expected to go poking about into its insides, discussing the technical details with all the assurance of a man . . . but we do know this—that for appearance, speed, quality, and actual service, it will come out first from a large group of finer cars. Naturally we'd expect it to—it's had the best "upbringing" skilled mechanics can give it and that money can buy. And last, but not least, it's built by Ford. Treat yourself to a look at least. Linford Motor Company, 5124 Liberty Avenue, distributors of the Lincoln automobile in Pittsburgh.

. . . Wedding Cake

WE know you're all flustered and flurried over the grand event that's to happen soon . . . but just take time out to remember that no wedding is complete without a really splendid cake! And that's right where Rhea's shine! They've a special decorator who spends his days doing nothing but plan new designs in wedding cakes, and who will be glad to follow out any of your own ideas on the subject. For a very elaborate one, just give him two days' notice . . . and you'll be delighted with the result we know. Prices $5 and up. At Rhea's Bakeries, downtown at 441 Market Street, Atlantic 6561.

. . . Good for Fifty Cents

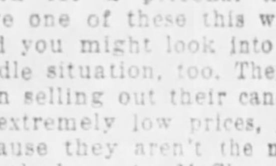
TAKE the gypsy trail and peep into the future! We all know that Romany ways are fortune-telling ways, and now they're here on our very doorstep as it were! During the next two weeks the Gypsy Tea Shop is making a special drive for new guests, SO tear out this write-up, bring with you a friend who has never been there . . . then use this coupon and $1 for two of the regular 75c meals—with fortunes told from tea leaves free, as usual. Good from 11 to 8 every week day except Saturday . . . and from 2:30 to 8 o'clock on Saturday. But it must be used not later than June 22nd. At the Gypsy Tea Shop, 207 Fifth Avenue, third floor (elevator service).

A letter from a friend in Paris tells us that all smart Parisiennes are wearing black marocain skirts with vividly colored velvet jackets. She is particularly enthusiastic over emerald green . . . and with it wears a silver fox and shiny black sailor. And merely incidentally, the Empress Eugenie hat is going over with a bang at the Colonial Exposition.

. . . It's "My-Te-Good"

WE'RE all coffee drinkers—we admit it . . . and that's where Donahoe's have the jump on us! It's like this . . . their My-Te-Good coffee that used to sell 3 pounds for $1.25 (that is, before prices fell by the wayside) is now selling 3 pounds for 50c. That's something, isn't it . . . especially when we realize that every pound of My-Te-Good is a fine Brazilian coffee that will turn almost any one of us into what is generally known as a coffee "toper." And as a final suggestion—see the demonstration of the Drip-O-Lator . . . a coffee maker that does all sorts of things toward preserving the fragrant oils that make My-Te-Good the success it is—at Donahoe's "on the Avenue."

. . . Au Revoir



THIS seems to be the time when Mr. and Mrs. Vacationist are about to "flit" and custom demands that their exodus be recognized in some appropriate manner, doesn't it? McClements have stepped into the breach with a special $2 basket of fresh fruits and goodies . . . that seem designed to make "absence make the heart grow fonder" if possible. Every basket is a cluster of delectable fruits . . . beautifully arranged and interspersed with packages of unexpected delights in the form of cakes, candies and other tid-bits. If you have a departing guest, or if you yearn for a personal treat, have one of these this week. And you might look into the candle situation, too. They've been selling out their candles at extremely low prices, just because they aren't the newest shades. At McClements, 535 Wood Street.

. . . Anchors A-Weigh

WELCOME news for those of us who can't make the grade for long vacations this Summer. We can take a lake trip . . . on Lake Erie . . . for one day, up to 10 days . . . and still not deflate the family exchequer. This means we have chances to see the Peace Bridge, Niagara Falls, Saguenay, Put-in-Bay, and various cities in Canada—all depending on the amount of time we have, of course. Imagine spending a day, or days, out on the lake on a wonderful boat with all comfortable modern features of a fine hotel. We suggest you make plans early for these trips, as they're so popular reservations are sure to be grabbed up right away. Get in touch with Mr. John Miller, Travel Department, Union Savings Bank, Frick Building—he'll be able to give you an outline of the very trip you want.

REAL ESTATE and BUILDING

REALTORS SEE UPWARD TREND IN REAL ESTATE

Investors Urged to Place Money in Real Property; Building Costs Decline.

Pittsburgh realtors and builders are almost unanimous in the belief that the best time to invest in property and build homes is the present.

Those who buy or build now, when building materials are down, the realtors insist, will be certain to profit when the upward swing of general business begins. Many of the city's most prominent real estate men are of the opinion that prices of real estate will show an upward trend as early as October.

COSTS FALL OFF

Builders and contractors point out that the average cost of dwellings per family in 257 cities of more than 25,000 population was $4,385 in 1930, the lowest since 1924. This figure was supplied by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Department of Labor. Although no further statistics have been supplied since 1930, it is said that costs have went lower.

A definite reason for the decline in the cost per family for dwellings was not given out by the bureau. The type of construction and the building of cheaper homes, some say, may have been factors, yet wholesale prices of building materials in 1930 were nearly 12 per cent lower than in 1924 and more than 7 per cent under the 1921 levels.

Union wage rates per hour in the building trades in 1930 were, on the other hand, more than 21 per cent higher than in 1924 and more than 36 per cent above the 1921 figure, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics' report. Although the bureau has no data on the trend of wage rates of non-union labor in the building trades, it is believed that it follows that of union wages.

APARTMENT COST DOWN

The curve per family cost in the erection of apartment houses has been more broken than that of other classes of dwellings. The average per family cost of the multi-family dwellings for permits granted in 1921 was $4,019. It fell slightly in 1922, rose for each of the years 1923 and 1924 and fell again in 1925 and 1926, slightly increased in 1927, dropped a bit in 1928 and rose sharply in 1929, falling off again last year.

The average cost of all classes of dwellings for which permits were granted, the bureau's report reveals, was $3,947 in 1921 and $4,464 in the peak year of 1926.

BREAK GROUND FOR NEW PLAN

Ground has been broken for the first home in Southern Hilands, the fifth of a series of subdivisions planned, developed and offered by the Stevenson-Williams Company, South Hills realtors.

The Hilands, adjoining the St. Clair Country Club property, is a fully improved country estates development in Upper St. Clair Township.

The first home in the tract, featuring French architectural lines, is being built by Caste Brothers on a lot measuring 155x200 feet. The designer of the house is P. Howard Sterling.

Officials of the Stevenson-Williams Company are of the opinion that this development will surpass those they have promoted in the past.

One feature of interest in Southern Hilands is the large building lots allowing for extensive landscaping and giving residents more privacy. The Stevenson-Williams Company believes that many of the prospective residents will purchase two lots, thus acquiring still more space for gardens.

L. T. Stevenson, president of the company and president-elect of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, forecasts a buying and building spurt in the South Hills district this fall. He says that the Hilands will doubtless be benefited by any increase in home buying.

WELLINGTON HEIGHTS HOME SOLD

$23,000 This English design home, with six rooms and two baths, 216 Montclair avenue, Wellington Heights, has been sold by H. C. Holmes, contractor, to F. C. Beckert for $23,000. Porter & MacDowell, agents for the Heights, believe this sale one of the most important made in the development since it was opened.

HOME, FARMS FIND BUYERS

A modern eight-room home on a 10 acre tract in Perry highway, Fairview, has been purchased by Scott Minner from Mrs. Marie Amaden through the offices of the Rodgers Realty Company, Slippery Rock.

The same realtors report that they have sold for H. P. Everett a 60-acre farm in Findley Township, Mercer County, to George Bobarick, of McKeesport.

A 162-acre farm in Irwin Township, Venango County, has been conveyed by Frank Porter to T. A. Rowand, II., of Wilkinsburg, according to the Rodgers Realty Company. Rowand gave in part payment a six-room house in Wilkinsburg.

Sewers Contract Let by E. B. Hulley

E. B. Hulley, president of Frankstown Estates, Penn Township subdivision, reports that the contract for laying sewer lines in the Estates has been let.

The contractor, A. Diulus, has ordered four car loads of sewer tile and will begin the project as soon as possible, Hulley says. The same contractor is now laying the curbing and sidewalks in the development.

Steady progress is being made on the four homes under construction in the Estates. Two of these homes are practically finished and are now open for inspection. Plans for five more houses to be started shortly are finished.

Conestoga Building Fully Occupied

For the first time in its history all floor space in the Conestoga Building is rented, Porter & MacDowell, agents, announced yesterday.

The latest tenant to acquire space in the building is R. C. A. Photophones, Inc. That organization has rented space for the establishment of a sales and service department.

Building Lot Sold In Lynnehaven Road

A building lot in the exclusive Lynnehaven road, Fourteenth Ward, has been sold by Carl J. Jacobsen to Robert B. Heppenstall for a private consideration. Arthur B. Kline and Company, represented by Kenneth N. Downs, were the brokers.

Cabinet Street Sale Made by Gribbin

A brick home on lot 20x130 feet, 4055 Cabinet street, has been sold by Joseph Zabka to Bernard Postreich for $9,100, according to the Gribbin Company, brokers.

Two North Side Properties Sold By W. B. Dawson

A home at 2422 Wilson avenue, North Side, has been sold for Clement J. Miller to Thelma M. Callahan by W. B. Dawson & Co., for a private consideration. The purchaser is occupying the property.

The same brokers have sold for the Schwerd estate to Dr. F. W. Buetzow a building lot in McClure avenue, near Davis avenue. Dr. Buetzow will erect a home on the site, according to the brokers.

ISSUE REPORT ON MORTGAGES

The weekly mortgages report of C. C. C. Stotler, secretary-treasurer of the Title Guaranty Company, shows that a total of 318 mortgages valued at $1,445,913.03 were placed on record from May 28 to, and including, June 3.

Two hundred and ninety-eight of the 318 were straight mortgages with a valuation of $1,356,099.03. The remaining 20, valued at $89,814 were purchase money mortgages.

A hundred and four of the straight mortgages were to corporations, 106 to building and loan associations and 88 to individuals.

Ben Avon House Figures in Sale

A brick and shingle home, 408 Dickson avenue, Ben Avon, has been sold by Alice H. Dusenberry to George M. Eaton through the offices of the Porter and MacDowell Company, downtown realtors.

The house is on a large lot extensively landscaped and planted. According to Porter and MacDowell, the asking price for the property was $14,000.

Realtors to Hear Dunn Speak Tuesday

Thomas A. Dunn, president of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, will speak Tuesday at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board in the William Penn Hotel. Dunn's subject will be "Foundation of Real Estate." In his talk Dunn is expected to compare the stability of real estate as compared with other commodities.

East Liberty Hotel Will Be Remodeled

S. M. Lewinter has filed plans with the Bureau of Building Inspection to change a hotel building at 5700-10 Penn avenue, East Liberty, to a 26-family apartment. The work will cost approximately $25,000.

LARGE GARAGE MAY BE SOLD

An effort to acquire the Clearview garage, 678 Washington road, Mt. Lebanon, is being made by Charles E. and Peter Walker, prominent South Hills builder, it was learned yesterday.

Although the deal is not closed, Charles E. Walker is confident that the owner, William A. Schwartz, will release the property shortly at a price approximating $200,000. If Walker's predictions become fact the deal will prove one of the largest made in Mt. Lebanon within recent months.

The building, of fireproof construction, has two floors and a basement with sufficient floor space to house 175 cars. Located in the heart of the Mt. Lebanon business section, the property is considered one of the most important in that section. The lot has a frontage of 120 feet on Washington road and a depth of 125 feet.

Walker says that the deal should go far in creating confidence in Mt. Lebanon real estate.

Membership Drive Proving Success

Twenty-five new members have been added to the roster of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board as the result of a membership drive scheduled to close September 1.

J. F. McClurg, chairman of the board's membership committee, plans to invite every authorized real estate broker in Allegheny County who is not already a member of the board to join. McClug is confident that 100 or more new members will be added when the drive concludes. Prizes will be awarded to the three realtors enlisting the greatest number of "recruits."

Pittsburgh Shows Gain in Building

Pittsburgh made one of the best showings in the state in its building report for April, according to a survey from the Department of Labor and Industry.

The city issued 504 permits for work valued at $2,694,708 compared with 560 permits for $1,340,201 in April, 1930. Gains over last year were registered by 11 other municipalities but were outweighed by losses in 28 cities.

Building Material Quotations Lower

Further declines in prices of building materials were seen in April, according to the United States Department of Labor. Lumber, brick, cement and paint materials were cheaper. Furniture was unchanged. An index number of wholesale prices including 550 commodities, declined from 74.5 in March, to 73.3 in April.

Realty Sales Index Has Small Increase

A slight increase in the index of real estate sales activity in 64 cities has been reported for April by the National Association of Real Estate Boards. The April figure is 62 compared with 61.7 in March. The figures are based on a normal of 100 recorded in 1926.

Realtors Licensed In Many Districts

Real estate brokers' license acts, compelling dealers to follow ethical practices in their sales activities, are now in effect in 27 states and four Canadian provinces.

Improved Property Bought for $6,000

An improved property in Belonda street, Nineteenth Ward, has been conveyed by Edwin W. Smith to Phillip H. Fagley for a consideration of $6,000. The lot measures 30x110 feet.

Open to School Children in Grammar and High School Grades in the Public, Private and Parochial Schools of Pittsburgh and the Reading Area of This Newspaper.

Read the Rules

1—The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph is offering $500 in cash prizes to Grammar Grade and High School pupils who send in the most interesting and accurate essays on the Wilkins-Eckener Expeditions to the North Pole.

2—All Grammar Grade and High School pupils in public, private and parochial schools are eligible to enter the contest, except pupils, members of whose families are employed by the Sun-Telegraph. High School and Grammar Grade pupils will be divided into separate classifications, with separate prizes.

3—After the Wilkins and Eckener Expeditions have met at the North Pole, contestants will be allowed twenty days to prepare their essays. In case the two expeditions fail to meet, contestants will be allowed twenty days after public announcement of the fact.

4—Title of the essay will be "The Meeting at the Pole." Included in each essay must be answers to ten questions published in this announcement. These answers are not to be given in question and answer form, but as part of the information contained in the essay.

5—Essays may be brought to the Sun-Telegraph office, Telegraph Square, or sent by first-class mail, postage prepaid. They should be addressed to the "Meeting at the Pole" Editor.

6—Name and address of each contestant and the classification under which he is competing must appear twice on each entry—on the essay itself and on the outside of the envelope or package in which the essay is contained.

7—No manuscripts will be returned and no changes can be made after the essays have been sent to the Sun-Telegraph.

8—Interest, accuracy, completeness, brevity and neatness all will be taken into account by the judges in awarding the prizes.

Read the Questions

The following questions are based on the adventurous and daring of the Wilkins-Eckener Expeditions to the North Pole, complete news accounts of which are being published exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

Answers to these questions are to be incorporated in the essays to be written by contestant in "The Meeting at the North Pole" contest. The answers are not to be given in regular question and answer form, but the data which form the answers to these questions are to be written into the essay.

1—What were the points of departure of the Graf Zeppelin and Nautilus?

2—What was the date of departure of each craft?

3—What was the number of persons aboard each craft?

4—What was the general route taken by each?

5—What stops were made by each craft?

6—On what date did the two craft first sight or contact each other?

7—What were the weather conditions encountered at the Pole?

8—What dramatic statements were made by Wilkins or Eckener or both?

9—On what date did the two craft meet at the North Pole, if they succeeded? If they failed, what was the cause of failure?

10—What was the number of miles traversed by each craft from its port of departure to the North Pole or the point nearest the Pole?

Contract Bridge Beginner Inclined to Overrate His Possibilities for Slams

By ERNEST H. HEINRICHS
Sun-Telegraph Bridge Expert

Many auction bridge players who have taken up contract bridge appear to have a notion that in the newer game slam hands are of ordinary occurrence, and they bid up their hands into the slam zone with the very least encouragement or no encouragement whatever. This conception of contract bridge is obviously quite erroneous.

While it is true that in the newer game more slam declarations are contracted for than in auction bridge the reason is not because there are more slam hands dealt in contract bridge but because the incentive for high bids is greater than it was in auction bridge. In the latter form of bridge the player is satisfied to buy the declaration as cheaply as possible on account of the fact that no matter how many more tricks he makes above the contract he receives the same benefits in his score as if he had bid for the high score in the first place.

Too Venturesome

It is this point which forms the most important difference between the two games. In as much as the player may score in contract bridge only for those points in tricks which his declaration calls for, the beginner will often take a chance on a bid that is not justified by the cards he holds, and the result is that the expected high score and corresponding premiums are turned into severe penalties and serious losses.

One of the leading authorities on the game of bridge says:

"The auction bridge player who wants to go in for contract should at first try to forget that there ever was such a game as auction bridge, and his progress with the newer game will be much faster and more satisfactory."

While both games are based on the same fundamental principles, these principles have attained a degree of development in contract bridge which makes the latter so much superior that in comparison auction bridge is slow and commonplace.

In bidding for the declaration especially, the contract bridge student very soon realizes the vast difference, and he quickly obtains a conception of the new game which in auction he had never heard of, as these possibilities were not known.

Opponent's Suit

G. W. R., Munhall: Bidding opponent's suit is a conventional practice used in contract bridge as a "slam signal." It is not entirely new, as even in the days of auction bridge it was used by players to inform their partners that they held no losing cards in the suit bid by one of the opponents. Many of the foremost players of today do not recommend the convention because they are of the opinion that it gives too much information to the other side.

But on the other hand, the advocates of this practice of "bidding opponent's suit" contend that such information is small comfort to the opponents, but it may be of great value to partner. In a general way it is used in this manner: South deals and bids one heart.

West follows with a bid of one spade. North, whose hand is either void of spades or who holds the ace of that suit but is strong in other suits besides having support for his partner's which may warrant a possible slam declaration, bids two spades. With this information the original heart bidder may continue the contracting towards a slam, or, if his hand does not lend itself to such a procedure, may bid for game in the suit bid by him originally.

Used Twice

The other day we saw this convention of "Bidding opponent's suit" used twice in the hand below. The game was played at contract bridge and the contracting proceeded in this manner:

South, who had dealt, opened the contracting with a bid of one spade. West followed with two clubs, a defensive bid. North, with strong support for spades, a heart bid of his own and the singleton ace of opponent's suit, bid three clubs, a slam signal to his partner. East, holding eight diamonds with four honors, jumped to four diamonds. South, with the information received from the preceding bids, had no difficulty in reading the hand of his partner, who, he concluded, must be strong in hearts, as well as spades. And, as he held five hearts himself, he bid five diamonds, repeating his partner's slam signal. After West's pass, North bid five hearts. To this bid South responded with six hearts, which North later converted into a bid for seven spades. This declaration was played by South, who made his contract easily. West opened with leading the king of clubs.

Here are the four hands:

NORTH
Spades—Q-10-8-5.
Hearts—A-K-J-9-7.
Clubs—A.
Diamonds—J-8-5.

WEST
Spades—3-2.
Hearts—Q-5.
Clubs—K-Q-J-10-9-8-6.
Diamonds—6-2.

EAST
Spades—J.
Hearts—10.
Clubs—7-4-3.
Diamonds—A-K-Q-10-9-7-4-3.

SOUTH
Spades—A-K-9-7-6-4.
Hearts—8-6-4-3-2.
Clubs—5-2.
Diamonds—0.

Bridge Notes

After you have dealt, count your cards and estimate the trick-taking value of your hand. If you hold the requirements for an original bid, do not hem and hah, cough or whistle, or stall about. Such habits annoy the other players, and they may also convey a wrong impression to your partner. Either you have a bid or you have not. If you have bid; if you have not, pass.

* * *

F. W. B., Hawkins: Yes, there is quite a difference between trump values and defensive values. For example spades are trump and you hold A K Q J. Obviously those four cards are worth four tricks. But supposing you hold those four cards and you are playing against a heart declaration. In that case those four cards are counted as two tricks only because if you lead the queen for the third round it may be trumped.

Contract bridge may be called a sparring of wits and the joy of victory is realized in outwitting the other fellow.

It is absurd to say that contract bridge differs very little from auction bridge. While it is true that both games are based upon the same principles, there is a vast difference in the bidding, in the valuation of your cards and finally in the scoring. Contract bridge is a progressive development of the older game.

* * *

O. J. B., Beaver: With a good biddable suit in your hand, especially if that suit is a major (spades or hearts), do not bid no trump for an original bid.

* * *

W. W. H., Shady avenue: Never bid against your partner. You may change his bid provided you can improve it, but otherwise, you should pass.

Where To Go ... What To See ... What To Wear

CANADA MECCA OF AMERICANS; AND VICE VERSA

More Canadians Visit Here Than Visit All Other Countries of World, Claim.

By reason of their geographical relation to each other, their trade interests, language and common racial origin, the people of the United States and Canada are more closely allied than those of any other two nations on the face of the earth. For almost a century and a quarter the people of these two countries have existed as friendly neighbors with no issue raising its head between them which has not been settled by peaceful arbitration.

It is natural, therefore, that there should be a continuous desire by the people of both countries to know more intimately each other. As a result, more Canadians visit the United States annually than visit all other countries combined and similarly more Americans spend their holidays in Canada than anywhere else.

For those who wish something more substantial there have been established throughout the country many fine hotels and summer resorts, particularly along the lines of the Canadian National Railways, whose tracks reach from the Atlantic to the Pacific in Canada and touch every place of importance within the Dominion.

This company itself operates a chain of hotels and summer resorts of its own. Among these are Pictou Lodge in Nova Scotia, a beautiful bungalow resort within sight and sound of the sea; Minaki Lodge, in the northern part of the Lake-of-the-Woods district of northern Ontario, a summer hotel that has been acclaimed by many travelers as the finest east of the Rocky Mountains.

In the Canadian Rockies, the finest alpine playground in the world, the company operates Jasper Park Lodge, a picturesquely beautiful summer resort in the heart of a valley formed by some of the highest mountain peaks in North America. Over its rails luxurious trains operate daily to bring all these attractive resorts close to civilization.

Northern Pacific Reports Increase

Reservations for Alaska trips this year are in excess of those of a year ago, according to passenger traffic officers of the Northern Pacific Railway. The Alaska Steamship Company and the Pacific Steamship Company are making preparations for an unusually attractive season. Already bookings between July 1 and August 10 virtually take up all of the space, but earlier and later space still is available, according to the company. The low cost of the steamship voyage compared with other tours is having an appeal this year to persons particularly of the East and Middle West, the traffic men said.

Furness-Red Cross Line Opens Season

The Furness-Red Cross Line has opened its 1931 summer cruise season with the sailing of the Rosalind from New York for Halifax, Nova Scotia, and St. Johns, Newfoundland. She will be followed Saturday, June 13, by the Nerissa and the Rosalind, which will make a third sailing June 20, and then be replaced by the Fort St. George, which, together with the Nerissa, will alternate in mainaining Saturday sailings from this port until September.

Forest Preserve Camps Popular

Last year 267,886 persons registered at the Adirondack Forest Preserve camp sites, double the number who registered in the preceding year, when more than twice as many were registered as in 1928.

The 17 camp sites in operation last year had a daily capacity of 30,000 persons, which will be increased this year.

JUST SPRINGIN' ALONG

BEACH FAD—These young ladies at Virginia Beach, Va., have adopted the latest wrinkle in beach sports. The sandals with springs attached give the wearer almost a jumping gait.

SHIPS CALL AT HALIFAX

It is a pleasant and leisurely voyage between Boston and Liverpool, both eastbound and westbound, on the comfortable cabin steamships Newfoundland and Nova Scotia, of the Furness Withy Line, which sail every three weeks from their terminal ports. The quality of a pleasure cruise is given to the trans-Atlantic voyage by the calls in each direction at Halifax, Nova Scotia and St. Johns, Newfoundland.

These steamers sail from Boston at noon on their regular sailing days. They arrive at Halifax in midafternoon the next day, and remain in that port two days and two nights. This gives to passengers an excellent opportunity for rather extended shore visits in a most interesting country. The voyage then is resumed, with the next call being made at St. Johns, Newfoundland, two days away. Here there is a stop of two days and one night, which makes possible a rather extended trip into the interior for fishing or other sports, or ample leisure for sightseeing and motor trips in and about the city.

Canada Marks Historic Sites

During 1930 19 historic sites in Canada were suitably marked by either cairns or tablets and a number of other sites acquired according to a recent statement of the Department of the Interior. The work of commemorating national historic events and the services of important personages is carried out by the National Parks of Canada branch of the Department of the Interior in cooperation with the Historic Sites and Monuments Board.

Oysters Whisper At Virginia Beach

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va., June 6.—Strange as it may seem oysters do whisper—at least they do at this Atlantic Ocean resort. When vacationists gather around the open beach hearths preparing to feast on the roasting oysters from nearby Lynnhaven Bay the crisp salty sea air receives weird thin sounds that some vow are the parting voicings of the expiring bivalves.

WEST INDIES CRUISE LURES

It is only within the last few years that the glamorous beauty of the West Indies has come within the personal knowledge of the American people, and that these tropical islands have become the objectives of pleasure cruises and ideal vacation trips for relaxation and recreation. The development of all-expense tour and cruise plans embracing the West Indies by the West Indies service of the Furness Bermuda Line has opened a new world of delight to great numbers fo people living on the mainland who have been charmed and fascinated by the strange beauty of these historic islands.

Sailing from New York on the cruise steamer Dominica at stated intervals, a series of summer cruises of three weeks each will leave New York City on June 11, July 9, August 6 and September 3 of this year at all-inclusive rates. Abundant opportunity is given on these cruises for leisurely visits to many of the important islands, all of which have played big parts in the history of the discovery and development of the western hemisphere.

BRIG NIAGARA OFTEN VISITED

The brig Niagara, 20 guns, a ship almost as famous as Old Ironsides in the annals of the American Navy, is visited annually in her safe harbor at Erie, Pa., by hundreds of tourists from the inland states who come to the Great Lakes for a summer outing, according to E. H. McCracken, passenger traffic manager of the Detroit and Cleveland Navigation Company.

The Niagara was the flagship of Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry at the battle of Lake Erie in the War of 1812 and after the lapse of 119 years the old fighting ship needs to be thoroughly reconditioned. A movement is now on foot in Pennsylvania and Ohio to raise $60,000 to rebuild the old ship. The brig was built at Erie for Perry's fleet and returned there after the battle. Later it sank in Misery Bay, but was raised and rebuilt by the state of Pennsylvania in the year 1913 for the Perry centennial, when it made a triumphant tour of the Great Lakes. It was then given to the city of Erie by the state and since that time has been maintained as a free museum, visited every year by hundreds of patriotic pilgrims.

VIRIGNIA BEACH IN FULL SWING

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va., June 6.—Virgina Beach's gayest summer season broke into full swing last Saturday with the opening of the smart Cavalier Beach Club, rendezvous of the socially elite and show place of Virginia Beach. Thousands of dollars have been spent this spring to make this one of the smartest summer beach clubs on the Atlantic Coast. The largest crowd in the club's three year existence was present at the opening climaxing the final touch to a master's handicraft in smart resort atmosphere.

The new Atlantic University opened last fall at Virginia Beach has brought to this resort a collegiate atmosphere concurrent with the life and gayety of youthful patronage. Every Virginia Beach hostelery is aware of this and anticipates a splendid season. Renovations have been under way at a fast pace during the past forty days and early season arrivals have been so numerous that one bus line from Norfolk, 20 miles west of here has stepped up its schedule of runs to every half hour for the balance of the season instead of every hour.

ATLANTIC CITY AGAIN OFFERS SEASON OUTING

Famous Ocean Resort Opens Summer Activities; Is Still Paramount in East.

The ever-popular Atlantic City again opens its portals to the American public. America's most prominent ocean resort offers a list of attractions never before equaled in its history as a leading resort. The ocean bathing, of course, always takes first place in the activities of the resort. The salt water, with its own inimitable tang, cannot be duplicated. Visitors by the millions, from every part of the United States and Canada, are enthralled by its surf and matchless beach, and enraptured by the boardwalk and summer fiesta.

Of all the vast throngs who visit Atlantic City in summer, none seems ever to tire of ocean and beach. Many visitors "go in" both mornings and afternoons, and the bathing hours, in this modern day, are not fixed by decree of fashion, but are altogether a personal matter of preference and enjoyment.

FRENCH LINE HAS LAW CRUISE

A special "Post Graduate Course Aboard and Abroad" for members of the bar and law students, has been organized by the French Line, sailing from New York on the France July 6, with a distinguished faculty of outstanding legal practitioners and educators. The faculty will deliver lectures en route; special official receptions, visits to places of special significance to lawyers, inspections of rare historical documents bearing on the law and other exceptional opportunities and facilities have been arranged.

Irrigation Project To Cost $11,000,000

SAN BENITO, Tex., June 6.—Construction of new irrigation districts under way in the lower Rio Grande Valley at the present time will cost approximately $11,000,000, a survey of the three counties of Cameron, Hidalgo and Willacy has revealed.

PREPARE WEST FOR LA FIESTA CELEBRATION

Los Angeles Commemorates Sesquicentennial With Ceremonies Sept. 4 to 13.

LOS ANGELES, June 6.—Every resident of this city lives on a rancho granted to some favorite by the King of Spain or by the Government of Mexico, a bit of interesting history to be given impressive portrayal in La Fiesta de Los Angeles, a civic celebration, September 4 to 13.

Realistic impersonations of the great ranch owners, or haciendados, as they were called, will be provided in the fiesta, which commemorates the 150th anniversary of the city's foundling under Spanish rule. Floats will depict life on each of the 26 grants lying within the present corporate limits.

STUDIOS SHINE

Hollywood picture studios, which occupy land in what was the La Brea Rancho, will furnish a dazzling night pageant of jewels, with stars of the screen shining from the floats of baubles.

La Fiesta's opening event will be a reproduction of the city's founding on September 4, 1781. Then will follow a magnificent historical parade and pageant in which a century and a half of progress will be colorfully told. This will move to the Olympic Stadium, where a queen of La Fiesta will be crowned.

PAGEANTRY FEATURES

An "Epic of Transportation," another pageant, will take this subject from ox-drawn caretta to the latest type airplane.

A western congress of riders at the stadium will bring out the greatest horsemen of many nations, a wild west rodeo concluding this feature.

A 14-day itinerary plan completed by the All-Year Club of Southern California for summer visitors to the California Southland will give a comprehensive day by day schedule for a two-week stay in Southern California, taking in every point of interest in the territory between Santa Maria and San Diego.

Cape Henry Rife with Historical Interest

CAPE HENRY, Va., June 6.—An interesting historical fact which is little recognized is that the first landing of the English Cavaliers in America was made in 1607, under the leadership of Capt. John Smith, near the old Cape Henry lighthouse, five miles north of Virginia Beach, and not at Jamestown, as is popularly supposed. Cape Henry is visited each year by pilgrims from all over the country coming to celebrate the landing of English colonists there. President Hoover took part in this year's ceremonies held on April 26, last.

Houseparty Tours To Yellowstone

Four unusually complete and comprehensive Western Wonder Houseparty Tours will leave New York City during the summer vacation season over the Lackawanna Railroad, with Yellowstone National Park as their objective, and including in their itineraries visits to many others of the great natural scenic wonders of the Rocky Mountain West. These tours, organized on the Lackawanna's all-expense basis, will leave New York on Saturday afternoons, July 4 and July 18, August 1 and August 15, returning to New York on Sundays two weeks later.

Many Golf Links Now Dot Havana

Golf, for which Havana is noted in Latin America, owes its existence to a small group of American business men who introduced it there during the second American intervention in 1906-07. The first course they built was a three-hole unit which little resembled the four magnificent courses that now jot Havana.

DE LUXE PASSENGER BUS

GREYHOUND—One of the de luxe 33-passenger Greyhound buses, one of the type that serves the entire nation-wide network of the company. The bus is complete in every detail for luxurious, commodious travel through the country.

SPANISH TRIP HAS SCENERY

The remarkable thing about the 12-day cruise to La Ceiba, Spanish Honduras, by the steamers of the Di Giorgio Line, agents for the Standard Fruit and Steamship Company, is the unspoiled tropical scenery that is viewed by the summer vacationist in search of a voyage to new scenes and strange localities.

Surrounded by the comforts of a trim cruise steamer, the tourist sails through storied seas where once the pirates plied their merciless trade. Touching the shore of the Caribbean, the cruise party skirts the fringe of civilization, sees the magical, unsullied beauty of Spanish Honduras, and gets a fleeting glimpse of primitive people.

The entire cruise is made in 12 days—10 days at sea and two days of unusual sightseeing, with the strange little town of La Ceiba, Spanish Honduras, as its base. The cruise provides rest, relaxation and diversion, with an abundance of shipboard sports and games to make the hours fly. The steamship Gatun and Granada, alternating in sailings from New York for this unusual cruise, are oil burning vessels, especially designed for comfortable cruising in tropical waters. They fly the flag of Honduras, which assures their passengers the hospitality and good cheer always so pleasantly associated with the Spanish Americas.

Old Gun Booms Time Nightly in Havana

Although time is never important to tourists in Havana, there will be no opportunity to lose count of the hours. Each night at 9 o'clock "the town clock" booms the hour, in a thundering rumble that commands attention. It can be heard in any part of the city or its suburbs. It is on old Spanish gun at Cabanas Fortress which fires a charge out over the harbor.

Luggage Should Be at Pier Day Prior to Sailing

The experienced tourist does not need this warning, but it may prove a boon to those who, for the first time, are embarking for foreign shores. It is well to have your luggage at the pier a day ahead of sailing time. This becomes important, as one can readily realize when he watches the unwary scurrying about for their baggage just before sailing time.

The purser will take care of small matters which occur at the last minute, but it is well not to face him with the necessity of seeing that baggage gets aboard at the last minute.

Canada Makes Fine Offer to Fisherman

For the fisherman every part of Canada has something to offer, even the prairies, but Northern Ontario and Northern Quebec are especially desirable and accessible to the resident of the eastern and central states. Quebec is a paradise for the trout and salmon fisherman. In the Gaspe Peninsula and on the little known island of Anticosti in the Gulf of St. Lawrence the salmon fisherman can secure excellent sport at a moderate cost. Nova Scotia and New Brunswick also have much to offer the salmon fisherman.

BRITISH SCHOOL HEADS TO VISIT

Arrangements are being completed in England for a group of teachers, the first of its kind ever to be organized in Great Britain, to come to the United States this summer and study American methods of instruction and to get an insight into American industry by visiting the more important industrial centers of the country. The party will leave Southampton on the America, July 30, and will arrive in New York Saturday, August 8. The party will spend three days in New York, visiting Columbia University, the Berkeley Irving School and other educational institutions. The members will then visit Philadelphia, Scranton, Pittsburgh, Niagara Falls and Buffalo, and will make a short excursion into Canada.

Norfolk Is Gateway For Yorktown Fete

Norfolk has been named one of the gateways for the Yorktown sesquicentennial, which is to be celebrated at Yorktown, about 35 miles from Norfolk, October 16-19 this year, and summer visitors at Norfolk will have many opportunities to see what is being done at Yorktown to prepare for the sesquicentennial.

FIRST HAMBURG SHIP SAILED 75 YEARS AGO

Hamburg-American Marks Date of First Sailing To Harbor of New York.

Seventy-five years ago, on June 1, 1856, the Port of Hamburg, Germany, witnessed the departure for New York of a ship which inaugurated a new era in the history of the Hamburg-American Line. Until then, this company, founded but nine years previous to that date, had limited its small fleet to the sailing vessel. The Borussia, which started on her maiden voyage to New York on that day, was the first steamer bearing the Hapag flag.

Although the steamship was not unknown in those days when a group of Hamburg merchants, under the leadership of Adolf Godeffroy and August Bolten, organized the Hamburg-Amerikanische Packetfahrt-Actien Gesellschaft, yet the founders considered the steam-driven vessel as still being too much in the experimental stage; besides, this new company did not enjoy any governmental or other subsidies, and the men at its helm were staid and conservative merchants, satisfied to await further development of the new mode of propulsion, and relying in the meantime on the sailing vessel.

Those who witnessed the first departure of the Borussia, in command of Capt. Schwensen, saw a ship rigged as a three-mast bark, whose single stack belched forth a cloud of smoke. Compared with the modern ocean steamers, this ship, with her 2,130 gross register tons and the 1,400 horsepower of her engines, was actually a dwarf.

PREPARATION WORK DONE ON FLORAL FETE

Cape May Hydrangea Show Nears Readiness; Plans Forecast Greatest Show

CAPE MAY, N. J., June 6.—The preliminary work in connection with the Cape May hydrangea festival has been started by a committee of the women's club, headed by Mrs. L. F. Fow. The particular work of this committee covers the garden contest.

The rules and regulations together with entry blanks for the various classes of gardens, will be issued next week, and it is believed that somewhere in the neighborhood of 200 gardens will be entered in the contest.

With the return of F. F. Rockwell, director-general of the flower festival, from a lecturing tour on the Pacific coast and around New York, other phases of the preliminary work will be undertaken.

Pre-season activities are apparent at all the hotels. The former Cape May Hotel, now the Admiral, is undergoing new furnishings, addition of a solarium and a large outdoor swimming pool. George M. Boughton, formerly of the President Hotel of Atlantic City, will be the manager of the Admiral, with an opening date tentatively set for June 20.

John V. Scott, who this year will manage Congress Hall, arrived in town to supervise the work of refurbishing of this hostelry.

The Halpins, who conduct the Windsor Hotel, are busily engaged in preparing the main part of the hotel for their summer guests. The annex has been open for some time.

At the Lafayette, Harry Needles and Ralph Stevens, co-proprietors, are preparing for the season.

Manager Ray Fite, of the Colonial Hotel, is expected this week, and the Macrays have the work of renovating the Columbia and star villa well in hand.

Mackinac Island Ready for Summer

Mackinac Island, popular Michigan summer resort located in the Straits of Mackinac, near the junction of three great lakes, Superior, Huron and Michigan, is looking forward to one of the best seasons in recent years, according to E. H. McCracken, passenger traffic manager of the Detroit and Cleveland Navigation Company.

A number of important conventions will hold their sessions in the Grand Hotel, and a large number of Detroit and Chicago residents have already booked accommodations for the summer. All of the hotels on Mackinac Island and those in the Les Cheneaux Island district report excellent prospects for a delightful social season.

Canadian Liner Sets Fuel Record

MONTREAL, June 6.—A new world record for economy in oil fuel consumption while developing great power and speed at sea was made by the new Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of Britain" during her recent exacting tests on the Clyde "measured mile," and on the open sea. Using only 0.57 pounds of fuel per shaft horsepower per hour, the giant liner developed a speed of 25.52 knots, and 22.6 knots under cruising conditions with only two of her four engines working.

Veendam Continues In Bermuda Run

Capt. C. M. Armstrong, passengen traffic manager of the Furness-Bermuda Lines, has announced that the Veendam will remain in the Bermuda run until the company's new turbo-electric 28,000-ton liner Monarch of Bermuda, now under construction abroad, enters service in November. He added that the entry of the new flagship in the New York Bermuda run will also witness the formal opening of the new Castle Harbor Hotel in Bermuda.

SUMMER TOURS ARE PLANNED

A series of particularly attractive all-expense southern summer vacation tours at reasonable rates, providing maximum luxury with minimum cost, has been perfected by the Clyde-Mallory Lines from New York to the great summer playgrounds of the Carolinas, Florida, Texas and return.

These summer vacation tours are from 6 days to 13 days' duration, falling conveniently within the usual one-week or two-week vacation period. The cost is so low that it may conveniently be absorbed by even a moderate vacation budget.

The tours include in the quoted rates, all necessary expenses from beginning to end. Transportation is aboard the speedy and beautifully appointed passenger steamers of the Clyde-Mallory Lines to Charleston, S. C.; Jacksonville and Miami, Fla., and Galveston, Tex., and where indicated, from these ports to inland points by motor coach or electric train to designated cities. Hotel room with bath and meals, meals en route, and transportation on shore by motor coach or electric train is included in the rate. Also included are comprehensive sightseeing trips by motor coach, in various cities where designated.

Excellent Highways To Seaside Resort

Lace Gains Favor For Travel Attire

Lace has gained favor as the fabric of at least one of the evening gowns of the voyager since the introduction of the non-crushable laces in the bold, smart patterns that look almost as if worked in linen threads. The lace dress need be neither black nor white, those two standbys of the unimaginative, since there is every shade imaginable in these new laces.

SWITZERLAND OFFERS SCHOOL OF LANGUAGES

Courses in French Language And Customs Offered To Visitors in Country.

To combine pleasure with study has long been the privilege of visitors to Switzerland, known throughout the universe for her incomparable scenery and exceptional educational advantages. At the universities of Geneva, Lausanne and Neuchatel, interesting courses are available for the particular benefit of visitors from foreign lands who desire to improve their knowledge of the French language and French literature.

ARRANGE COURSES

Two parallel sets of courses in French language and literature will be held at Geneva from July 6 to October 10. Both courses are divided into three series each.

The first set of courses is intended for those who already possess a fair knowledge of French. It includes phonetics, practical exercises with diction and translation lessons, lectures covering French stylistics and analytic lectures, also French literature generally. Some of the most eminent men of letters will lecture.

The second set of courses is offered to beginners and persons who possess only an elementary knowledge of French. It includes practical phonetics and pronunciation, correction of foreign accent, practical vocabulary, grammar, oral and written work and conversation.

COURSES DIVIDED

The summer vacation courses at the University of Lausanne are divided into four series of three weeks each. They comprise practical instruction in French stylistics, phoenetics, pronounciation, romance and contemporary literature. Illustrated lectures and diction recitals will be regular features.

Geneva, Lausanne and Neuchatel make it their pleasure to provide extensively for the intellectual and social entertainment of the foreign students. Excursions to points of interest are arranged frequently, and social gatherings, concerts, theatricals and illustrated lectures are evening features.

Researches Lend Interest to France

As fine weather becomes established in France for the 1931 season and as the legions of foreign visitors respond to its call, the attractions for tourists in various parts of the country are being enhanced by further discoveries of the archeologists. They find a rich field for their work in French soil. Few regions of Europe have been inhabited by mankind for so many aeons. Archeological researches are being carried out in many parts of France, and serve to aid in the interest which the tourist finds in visiting the country.

Gives Information For Fishermen

MONTREAL, June 6.—For the benefit of prospective anglers visiting Canada during the forthcoming season, the Canadian Pacific Railway has just issued a folder entitled "Open Seasons for Fishing in Canada, Maine and Newfoundland." This pamphlet gives angling limits for the various species of game fish, the methods by which they may lawfully be taken, resident and non-resident lincese fees, dates of open seasons and other useful information.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS OPEN

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., June 6.—Few more beautiful spots could be chosen for a summer holiday than White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

Situated at an altitude of 2,500 feet in the foothills of the Alleghenies, the air is vitalizing and the nights cool, while the Greenbrier Hotel, rebuilt and refurnished during the past year in early American style, and accommodating 1,000 guests, provides a country home luxuriously equipped in every detail. A group of delightful cottages surrounds the hotel, looking out on wide shaded lawns and, beside the famous baths, the resort offers the finest facilities for golf on three splendid courses, horseback riding, swimming in the pool, tennis and archery. The Dixie Flying Service, in operation since the construction of the new Greenbrier Airport, takes passengers to and from Washington, where connection is made with an hourly flying service to eastern and western points, in two hours' time.

VACATIONISTS INVADE SOUTH

Summer vacations in the Carolinas and Florida are proving most enjoyable and attractive this year to pleasure-seekers from the North. The friendliness of the southern summer climate, the beauty of beaches and shore resorts, the incomparable golf available on great numbers of courses in these states are among the attractions.

SOUTHERN GOLF CLUBS MERGE

ASHEVILLE, N. C., June 6.—The recently announced merger of the Asheville Country Club with the nearby Lake View Country Club provides golfers in Asheville with a 36-hole layout of the consolidated courses, and gives the Asheville Country Club ample space for the entertainment of national championship tournaments. A bid for the national amateur tournament will be made, and it is believed that this tournament will be held in Asheville at some time during the next few years, according to S. N. Sutter, manager of the combined clubs.

The two 18-hole courses, which have been combined under the direction of the Asheville Country Club, are among the finest of their kind in the South. Only three other clubs, at Birmingham, Atlanta and Richmond, it is understood, offer 36-hole courses on grass greens. The combination is expected to appeal to many golfers who enjoy variety in their golf, as the two courses, both designed by Donald Ross, are essentially different in character.

NEARBY RESORT TO BE FAVORED

More vacationists than ever before will, this year, patronize resorts within a 400-mile radius of their homes and offices, according to preliminary records. This may be attributed to the fact that fluctuations in market conditions have made it imperative for the businessman to remain near his office, where he can be reached in the event of an emergency.

GENEVA OFFERS NEW PLEASURE TO CITY-TIRED

Aero Instruction Is Added To List of Diversions At Lake Erie Resort.

For many years, or since the advent of the automobile, vacationists have sought resorts that would be within easy driving distances of their homes and offices. Hundreds of such vacationists have found Geneva-on-the-Lake, Ohio, to offer just what they were looking for.

Geneva, situated on Lake Erie, offers to the vacationist almost everything for which he could hope in the moderately-priced resort. A leisurely drive of four hours from the Pittsburgh district will bring the vacationists to one of Lake Erie's most inviting spots.

FAMILY PLAYGROUND

It has been called the playground for the family and rightly so. Diversions are offered for the convenience of the tiniest child, and for the recreation of the retired citizen. Practically every form of vacation pleasure known to vacationists throughout the country is offered at the Lake Erie resort.

Golfing, fishing, tennis, swimming and a myriad of other diversions are offered for those who wish to spend their vacation period within easy distance of their homes and offices.

NEW THRILLS

For those who have tired of the commonplace in diversion, Geneva comes to the foreground with its facilities in aviation. Here even the beginner may feel at ease in the safe, swift planes, and, for those who seek greater thrills, instruction is offered in aviation, under the guidance of experienced and capable pilots.

Geneva offers cottages at moderate rentals for the season or for the duration of the vacationist's visit. The resort offers the maximum of enjoyment at minimum cost to any family who is seeking a restful, recreational vacation.

SOUTH READY FOR FESTIVAL

ASHEVILLE, N. C., June 6—The 1931 Rhododendron Festival, fourth in the series of annual celebrations of the colorful floral fete, will be staged June 24, 25 and 26, at the height of the blossoming period of the rhododendron, in the mountains near Asheville. The program of the gala event, this year, includes a parade of floral floats, the annual Rhododendron Ball, the Rhododendron Pageant, in which 1,000 people will take part, the Jester's Revel, a mardi gras event, speedboat races on Beaver Lake and other activities.

Staged for the first time in 1928, the Rhododendron Festival has increased each season, in the color and brilliance of the various events of the program. Over 40,000 people gathered from many parts of the United States to witness the principal events of the fete last year. The attendance this year is expected to exceed previous records established, for the festival.

NEW CAR FERRY IS LAUNCHED

MONTREAL, Quebec, June 6—A new car and passenger ferry for service between Cape Tormentine, New Brunswick, and Borden, Prince Edward Island, has been launched at Lauzon, on the St. Lawrence River, opposite the city of Quebec. The Charlottetown, as the ship is known, will be operated by the Canadian National Railways as a supplement to the fleet of ferries at present operating between the same points. It will carry in railway cars, 50 automobiles and 750 passengers.

The INDIANS

called it ALGONQUIN LAND and then..

Uncle Sam followed the old trail with a ribbon of concrete, skirting the shores from Lake Erie on the Southern border and north along the Detroit River, Lake St. Clair, St. Clair River up into the Thumb on Lake Huron. • No miniature scenic route this — the most majestic chain of lakes and rivers in the world — breath-taking in its grandeur — unequalled for the beauty and color of its panorama. • Every town and city along this trail contains points of historic interest, and of a newer note which includes hotels and taverns for your comfort — excellent golf courses for your amusement, and conveniently near are inland lakes by the score where you may obtain comfortable cottages for a sojourn of days or months and have a try at the perch, bass, blue gill and pike fishing, or pack your days full of other glorious out-of-door sports. • Words are inadequate to describe this living, happy hunting ground which the Indians called Algonquin Land.

HIGHLIGHTS

Monroe—World famed nurseries. Magnificent beach with cottages on Lake Erie a short distance from town.

Detroit—Both International Bridge and Vehicular Tunnel to Canada—the only international tunnel in the world. Belle Isle, the most beautiful and largest island park in the world, and hundreds of other interesting features.

Mount Clemens—For half a century its mineral waters have been known the world over. Selfridge Field, Uncle Sam's most important Flying Field is near-by.

Algonac—A quaint town built over the water from where bass fishermen start for the big ones.

Marine City—Where people reside for the pure joy of living near water.

St. Clair—The home of a great salt mine and of one of the most delightful waterfront taverns in all Algonquin Land—golf course near-by.

Port Huron—Five minutes ferry ride from Canada. Fine hotels—golf courses—fishing—swimming. Cottages by the hundreds on the wonderful beaches a short distance from the city.

Lexington, Harbor Beach and Point Aux Barques—All on the shore of great lake Huron with its sandy coves, rocky cliffs and densely wooded areas. Bathing, boating, fishing to your heart's content.

Ann Arbor—The beautiful shaded home of a great university and Pontiac, an intensely industrial city, are each situated in the very heart of the greatest inland lake area on the continent.

MOTOR TRAVEL UP 50 PER CENT

FREDERICK, N. B., June 6.—Motor tourist travel to New Brunswick from the United States was almost 50 per cent greater in 1930 than in the previous year, according to a statement by the Canadian Customs Commissioner covering the last calendar year.

The official figures sent out from Ottawa show an even larger percentage of increase than had been indicated in the preliminary reports of Collectors of Customs as compiled by the New Brunswick Government Bureau of Information and Tourist Travel covering 11 months of the year and released for year-end publication.

Motor tourist travel to New Brunswick in 1930 increased 49½ per cent over 1929 and the total number of American tourists who entered Canada via New Brunswick ports of entry in automobiles for stays of more than 24 hours in 1930 is placed at more than 194,939.

The Commissioner of Customs' report shows that permits for stays of more than 24 hours were issued by Collectors of Customs in New Brunswick for 55,697 automobiles owned by American tourists for periods up to 60 days and that 38 of that number had their permits extended to six months.

The percentage of increase of New Brunswick's tourist trade in 1930 exceeds that of any other Province in Canada.

SHOWS VALUES IN LAKE CRUISE

The season for vacation cruising on the Great Lakes is comparatively short extending over a period of not much more than 70 days, beginning in earnest when the public schools close for the summer vacation and ending in mid-September, although the line boats continue to run until November, according to E. H. McCracken, passenger traffic manager of the Detroit and Cleveland Navigation Company, operating steamboat lines between Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, Mackinac Island and Chicago.

McCracken said:

"The educational value of a summer outing in the lake region attracts thousands of tourists of this old section of the country for all of the romance of the early exploration of the great Northwest centers in the vast basin of the Great Lakes, which constitutes the largest body of fresh water in the world.

TOURISTS MAY DEPEND UPON THE CONCIERGE

Affable Gentleman at All Hotels Will Take Care Of All Travelers' Needs.

In France your best friend is the concierge. Put your trust in him and lean on him in times of tribulation. He is the very distinguished gentleman, dressed in semi-uniform, often with brilliant ribbons of war-service on his breast, who greets you at the door of your hotel. Nearly always the concierge speaks English—even in small French cities; that makes him at once valuable to the average tourist.

It is the concierge who will send your cables and telegrams—saving you a journey to the office. He will telephone for you; he will see about your laundry. Theater or opera tickets? The concierge will buy them much better than you ever could.

If you run out of money on a shopping orgy have the packages sent up and the concierge will pay for them. He will cash your travelers' checks at a fair rate of exchange; he will sell you stamps. He is a mine of information—he will tell you anything—where to go and how. He will buy you railroad tickets and hire a car.

Ask the concierge! Then, when you leave the hotel, don't forget him. Remember the concierge! Remember the concierge is not a salaried employe of the hotel, but pays for the concession and depends for a livelihood entirely upon your generous recompense for his thousand-and-one services.

FORMAL GOWNS FOR SHIP WEAR

Trans-Atlantic voyages may be made most comfortably by carrying only two evening gowns, although it is desirable to have three as well as one in-between dress consisting of one very informal evening gown or a dress that Americans refer to as a formal afternoon dress. With a little jacket to wear with this ensemble, the wearer will find use for this costume, especially if crossing is made on one of the smaller boats, where it will be worn on Sunday night and perhaps the night before the ship docks, when most of the packing is done by the efficient traveler.

SHIP BAGGAGE SPACE LIMITED

Special attention should be paid by the trans-Atlantic tourist to the bulk of baggage which he carries. As there is a limit to the amount of space which a tourist's trunk can occupy in his stateroom, occasioned by the size of the compartment into which his trunk must fit, it is necessary to give this detail thorough consideration.

Two or three handbags should be able to hold all the tourist wishes to take with him with the exception of formal wear or heavy clothes.

Each Thursday at noon one of the new passenger steamers of the Porto Rico Line sails from New York City for an 11-day all-expense West Indies cruise to the Islands of Enchantment, Porto Rico and Santo Domingo. Eight days are spent at sea, four days in each direction, with three magic-filled days of sightseeing and entertainment ashore in the islands.

Shortly after dawn on the fourth day after sailing out of New York, the ships enter the harbor of San Juan, capital of Porto Rico. Members of the cruise party go ashore here to see at close range the indescribable loveliness and the strange, romantic scenes of this tropical paradise.

The celebrated loop trip by automobile over the old Spanish military highway brings to view historic Spanish fortresses and palaces built 400 years ago. Tropical vegetation, masses of brilliant flowers, great, graceful palm trees and fields of sugar cane and coffee and tobacco are among the sights strange to northern eyes. There are majestic volcanic peaks, valleys like the Garden of Eden, and lovely little towns along the route, each town with its central church and plaza, and its friendly, curious children who follow the visitors in droves, and who contribute no little to the pleasure of the day.

Yellowstone Park Gets Improvements

More than $250,000 will be expended in Yellowstone Park this year by Federal national park service for road and trail improvements, according to E. E. Nelson, passenger traffic manager of the Northern Pacific Railway. This is an expansion of the road construction program as compared with other years, Nelson said. Other extensive improvements have been made in the park, including that of the Yellowstone Park Hotel Company. Extensive preparations are being made for the opening of the park June 20.

Increase Shown In Tourist Third Class Passage

The increase in tourist third class has in many instances offset the losses received by steamship companies in their first-class business. While the revenue from the first-class pasages is greater per capita, agents report that the number of passengers booking in tourist third class has offset the the monetary value of the first-class losses.

DENIES REPORT OF CABIN SHIPS

Denial of the report that the Atlantic Transport liners Minnetonka and Minnewaska would be converted to cabin carriers on July 1 was made by P. V. G. Mitchell, vice president of the International Mercantile Marine Company, in an address on board the Red Star liner Lapland at an inspection and dinner.

Mitchell said his company had no intention of operating these two liners as anything but first-class ships. He said that the Minnetonka and Minnewaska, because of their unusual breadth of beam, have always caried first-class passengers exclusively, in the midship section of the vessels. He stated that the Atlantic Transport Line has no intention of departing from this practice.

SILK COAT BEST IN RAIL COACH

Train travel in summer requires a different type of coat, and for this purpose a long dark silk coat is suggested as being the best.

It is a good idea to have two or three dresses that look as if they were meant to go with this coat, one the same color as the coat, another of printed silk, because it has some of the same qualities as the coat suggested above, and a third dress of pastel colored silk. Eggshell color is smart, with a dark coat, and may be worked with blue, brown or black. The latter frock should be of fairly heavy silk, and tailored. If made to look like an afternoon dress it loses its smartness in the traveler's wardrobe.

Tourist Third Cabin Class Development Makes Ocean Trip Possible for Many.

The development of low cost travel has not stopped with the introduction of the now well-known tourist third class, according to J. S. Mahool, passenger traffic manager of the International Mercantile Marine Company, who considers this branch of the passenger business one of the healthiest of all, and distinctly worth while developing for the future.

The phenomenal growth of tourist third cabin from small beginnings in 1924, when the entire number carried in this class by all the trans-Atlantic lines, both east and westbound, totaled only 15,431, down to the present, when the total for 1930 comes within a score of being 300,000, has certainly demonstrated the soundness of catering to this type of business.

The International Mercantile Marine Company, which has maintained leadership in this field for seven successive years, has now taken another step toward furnishing still lower cost accommodations for a white collar clientele that will meet their standard of living and yet come within their means, and has announced a series of three-week tours of Europe, including all expenses on sea and ashore for less than $200.

This step has been made possible by the fact that the modern third-class quarters in the ships selected for the tours are such as to meet the high standard of living of the average American family today, Mr. Mahool said yesterday:

"Moderate cost travel becomes more important every year, and not even our far-sighted executives, who were the first to discern the new pastures in 1923, foresaw the extent of the development that would follow their pioneering."

ALPINE CLUB CLIMB JULY 20

BANFF, Alta., June 6.—In the flower-clad alplands watered by sparkling Tokumm Creek, 6,600 feet above sea-level, in the Kootenay Park section of the Canadian Rockies, the Alpine Club of Canada will hold its twenty-sixth annual camp from July 20 to August 3, 1931.

Founded in 1909, the club is affiliated with the Alpine Club of England and is one of the best-known mountaineering organizations in the world, with members in all corners of the earth.

A camp is held each summer to allow members to make ascents in new territory and to supply those not yet qualified for full membership with opportunities for doing the work necessary for their graduation, under the approval of the climbing committee.

Reached through Banff (4,625 feet), on the main trans-Canada line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, this year's location offers the combined advantages of true alpine conditions, coupled with ready access to civilization.

Hotel Rates Drop Survey Indicates

Hotel rates this year will be lower than in many years, according to a preliminary survey, which has been conducted throughout the country. Many hotels are removing the charges which they formerly affixed, such as cover charges, playground fees, golf fees and swimming pool rates. A greater bid is being made for hotel business this year than ever before, according to hotel managers.

WONDER WEEK TOURS POPULAR

The Wonder Week Tours of the Lackawanna Railroad are no ordinary vacation, but tours de luxe, covering full seven days to many of the most beautiful and noted scenic spots of the East and nearby Canada. Personally escorted and on an all-expense basis, the vacationist has not a worry nor a responsibility, and has nothing to do but enjoy himself.

The Wonder Week Tours include Delaware Water Gap, the Pocono Mountains, Syracuse, the Thousand Islands, Lake Ontario, Niagara Falls and Buffalo. First class accomodations are provided throughout. Nights are spent in leading hotels, with the exception of one night when the glorious sail across Lake Ontario is made. Every item of expense is covered by the rate, including transportation, pullman, meals, hotels, sightseeing trips and transfers. Hotel accommodations are on the basis of two persons to a room, and private bath is included at Syracuse and Buffalo. A limited number of rooms with baths at Alexandria Bay and Toronto will be assigned in the order of application. The entire tour is under personal direction of an experienced Lackawanna tour escort who helps to make it a wonder week indeed.

ROTARIANS SET TO GO ABROAD

During the next 10 days about 1,500 American business men, members of the Rotary International, will sail for Europe to attend the annual convention of that organization in Vienna from June 20 to 26. It is estimated that 50,000 members from all over the world will be present, making this convention one of the largest of its type to be held in Europe this year.

See All in the World; See Your Own Country

Man was not made to stick in one spot. Nature gave him legs. It gives him the locomotive, automobile, flying machine and steamboat, and he should use all of these things gratefully and regularly.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

An oyster is born, attaches itself to a rock, and stays in one spot forever.

DON'T DO THAT. Don't be an oyster.

A turtle crawls slowly, content to withdraw inside of its shell and meditate there. A 20-acre lot is all of the world that it needs.

DON'T BE A TURTLE.

See the world, as much of it as you can, and travel as often as you can, and as far.

Above all, SEE YOUR OWN COUNTRY.

Kind Providence, from the beginning, has plainly had in mind the fact that man, for the benefit of his soul and mind, should travel.

In the beginning Nature gives us legs, and the first struggle of a little child is to walk, TO MOVE. That is even more important than talking. No use in talking, if you can't GO anywhere.

Our intelligence trained the animals; we rode them. Our ancestors of thousands of years ago traveled all over the earth on horses, mules, camels, elephants, drawn by oxen, dragged by other human beings, or driven in boats, by oars or the winds.

The brain of man has worked ceaselessly to achieve CONQUEST OF GRAVITATION. Today his victory over the power that would hold him down to the earth is practically complete.

Science has given us railroad trains, automobiles, flying machines, steamboats and submarines.

If we don't explore this little globe, which is our inheritance, it is our own fault.

Travel is in the blood, the brain and the desire of man.

Time is our only possession. With time plus a good automobile, railroad, steamship ticket, or flying machine ticket, you can see whatever you want to see anywhere.

All these means of locomotion add to your use of time, and multiply its value.

In a small car, you can see in a week what your great-grandfather couldn't possibly have seen in six months.

With a swift airplane you can cross, in two hours, the desert in which poor old Moses wandered for 40 years.

Travel has been the great thing to creatures of all kinds, from the beginning.

Birds, animals and fishes migrate. Even Satan himself was a traveler. You remember it, in the first chapter of Job:

"Now there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord, and Satan came also among them.

"And the Lord said unto Satan, Whence comest thou? Then Satan answered the Lord and said, From walking to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it."

It is a comfort to reflect that Satan had to walk, having no automobile, flying machine or steam car. He did enough mischief without those advantages.

See this earth. You need no longer "walk up and down in it." You can motor up and down in it, fly over it, or travel through it by rail or boat.

You can learn to know your country, see opportunity, seize it, if you have energy.

Whatever else you do, travel.

A vacation, wisely planned, with destination well selected, will rest, refresh, strengthen you, add to your efficiency.

Don't be an oyster, don't be a turtle; be an American, and know your country.

U. S. SPENDING OVER BILLION FOR HIGHWAYS

A. A. A. Convention Informed 48 States Will Build 60,000 Miles of Roads

WEST BADEN, Ind., June 6.—Approximately $1,500,000,000 is being spent for road-building in the 48 states during the current year, according to a report submitted to the twenty-ninth annual convention of the American Automobile Association here. This program calls for improvement of approximately 60,000 miles of new highways.

The report, based on a survey made by the A. A. A. National Good Roads Committee, showed that 35 states have enlarged their 1931 road programs, as compared with 1930, from both the standpoint of expenditures and mileage to be improved.

SPEED CONSTRUCTION

A significant development is the speeding up of construction in a number of southern states, notably Louisiana, which has a $65,000,000 program; Georgia, South Carolina and Texas. The western states are also joining the movement and, under the stimulus of federal assistance in building roads across the public domain, are pressing for early improvement of the main arteries of travel.

The increase in Federal-Aid appropriations from $75,000,000 to $125,000,000 annually and the emergency appropriation of $80,000,000 made available for 1931 in the form of loans to the states, has been a vital factor in stimulating the states to take advantage of the business lull to meet the demand for more highways, declared the A. A. A. committee. Its report continued:

HALF COMPLETED

"The Federal-Aid system, which now comprises 193,049 miles of important interstate highways, is now nearly half completed. There were 89,568 miles improved, as of March 31, 1931, while 10,388 miles were under construction and 5,679 miles had been approved for construction.

"In addition to this national program, Congressional appropriations and authority for federal assistance in building roads across the public domain and approach roads to the national forests, has had a desirable effect on road-building in the West."

NEWFOUNDLAND IS PLAYGROUND

Nova Scotia and Newfoundland retain all their popularity as ideal vacation resorts and as playgrounds for the sportsman. These natural recreation empires in the not-so-far North have just about everything that should command the admiration of those who go for pleasure. They are ideal for the pleasure-seeker and the vacationist with but a limited time at his disposal, while their fame as great hunting and fishing grounds is known around the world.

Scenic and climatic attractions in summer are of an unusual character in Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. The days are pleasantly warm and the nights are cool and invigorating. Rugged hills rise almost precepitately from a raggedly indented coast; these hills attain elevations of 2,700 feet. There are countless lakes and ponds which reflect the images of the forests that sweep right down to their banks. Rivers and brooks wind among the trees and between the hills, and everywhere outside the cities and the towns is an amazing abundance of wild life.

CELEBRATED CATHEDRAL

NOTRE DAME—The cathedral, in Paris, is one of the world's most beautiful structures. It stands as one of France's most prominent buildings and is visited by thousands of tourists.

BANFF PLANS MUSIC FEST

BANFF, Alberta, June 6—The coming Labor Day week-end will again see the highlands of Scotland transplanted to the Canadian Rockies. This mountain resort has just sounded the call for its fifth annual highland gathering and Scottish music festival, scheduled to last from August 29 to September 1, with headquarters at the Banff Springs Hotel. Arranged as before by the Canadian Pacific Railway, under the patronage of the Prince of Wales, the festival will offer in review the gems of Scottish minstrelsy, together with dances and pipers' lays which have survived the turmoil of clan warfare in Scotland as well as through 300 years of Scottish settlement in Canada.

Seventeen Canadian highland regiments have entered their best pipers to compete in the piping contests for valuable trophies. Lads and lassies dressed in flashing kilt will perform reels, sword dances and highland flings, competing for prizes in classes grouped according to age. In addition, the leading Scottish athletes of the dominion will compete in traditional Caledonian games like "putting the stane" and tossing the caber, as well as track and field events.

Sparton Scholarship Winners to Sail

Winners of the Sparton scholarship award contest, including a group of Americans representing every section of the country, will start on a 10,000-mile tour of Europe with the departure of the Leviathan, flagship of the United States Lines' fleet, July 4.

The members will arrive in Paris, July 11, and will go from there to Avignon, Nice, Genoa, Rome, Florence, Venice, Stressa, Interlaken, Lucerne, Meidelberg, Weisbaden, Cologne, Amsterdam and London Sparton distributors and dealers will accompany the scholarship winners, many of whom are college boys and girls. The tour will be entirely educational and experienced instructors and lecturers will be with the party.

NOVA SCOTIA IS POPULAR

DIGBY, N. S., June.—Nova Scotia, the Land of Evangeline, is now nearer New York and Boston because of the steamers Evangeline and Yarmouth. By the Evangeline Nova Scotia is only a day's sail from New York, and even less than that by the Yarmouth from the Hub. The steamers land at the picturesque port of Yarmouth and visitors proceed over the Dominion Atlantic Railway to Digby, Annapolis Royal, founded by Champlain in 1604; Kentville, Wolfeville, Grand Pre, whence Evangeline and her compartriots were expatriated in 1755; and Halifax, the North Gate of the Dominion of Canada.

Nova Scotia left the dry column in 1929, the only Canadian province now remaining arid being little Prince Edward Island.

Within the past few years the Canadian Pacific Railway has built a chain of hotels in Nova Scotia for the accommodation of tourists, including the new Lakeside Inn at Yarmouth; the New Pines Hotel, Digby; the New Cornwallis Inn, Kentville, and the Lord Nelson, Halifax. Nova Scotia has fine motor roads, good railroads and many historical shrines dating back to the first white settlements on this continent.

ALL-EXPENSE TOURS
to Saguenay River in Old French-Canada
$130.00
Sailings June to September

THE 9-day tour starts from Cleveland, although ships may be boarded at any stopping point, and takes you down the great St. Lawrence River that flows through picturesque, historic French-Canada. First you visit Niagara Falls and then steam across the Lake to Toronto, Queen City of Canada. Leaving Toronto you sail among the jewelled Thousand Islands and shoot in perfect safety the series of eight roaring rapids to Montreal. Here you sightsee for a day with hotel accommodation.

On to Quebec by night, down the best-lighted waterway in the world. Dawn finds you docked beneath the mist-wreathed ramparts of this fortress city. You spend a day on the return trip exploring its quaint, winding streets and promenading its famous Dufferin Terrace, which overlooks from on high the beautiful harbour. You visit the celebrated Shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupré. Miraculous cures are reported here and pilgrims journey from the four corners of the earth to worship at this hallowed spot.

Away down the widening reaches of the St. Lawrence to Murray Bay and peaceful Tadoussac. This little village, dreaming beneath its mountain background, is the last port of call before the awe-inspiring sail up the mysterious Saguenay River, guarded by its stupendous capes. A cruise into an old world that lies close at hand. See it before this corner of natural grandeur becomes part of all that is modern. Accommodation, both ship and hotel, is on the most luxurious scale.

Remember, every expense on this enjoyable cruise has been foreseen and included in the figure quoted above, as well as stop-overs at important hotels en route. A courteous escort relieves you of every travel worry.

NEW CUNARDER WILL EMBODY INNOVATIONS

$22,500,000 Liner, Under Construction in England, Will Have New Features.

LONDON, June 6.—The new $22,500,000 Cunard liner—a giant now building under the shipyard title of "No. 534"—will embody some entirely new features in Atlantic speed hotels.

With her 200,000 h. p. engines, the great bulk of the new competitor for the blue ribbon of the Atlantic, will be driven at top speed, and with the maximum of comfort.

MANY INNOVATIONS

Externally, the most remarkable innovation in her construction will lie in the form of her bows, the height of her funnels, and the arrangement of her decks.

The bows are a development of the new bulbous pattern not only to give greater speed and to prevent rolling in heavy seas, but to turn aside giant waves without the possibility of the upper decks being drenched.

Each of the three funnels will be of a different height. The first will be the tallest, and the next two will grade downward in height. This plan was evolved after many tests to insure that the smoke will not fall on the decks, even in the worst winds.

TO HAVE NINE DECKS

There will be nine decks in all. The effect of this towering white terrace, particularly from the stern, where hitherto unknown areas will be available for passengers, will be nearer than anything so far attained to the futuristic idea of a great transatlantic ship.

On each side of the top deck, 70 feet above the water, will be a row of 14 large and powerful motor life-boats. These will be capable of being quickly swung clear of the deck on huge crane-like davits.

The new Cunarder is due for launching about a year hence.

First Lighthouse Opened to Public

The first lighthouse constructed in America, the Cape Henry lighthouse erected by the federal government in 1702, has recently been declared a National Monument by the War Department, and has been thrown open to the public. On this approximate site, which is a few miles north of the Cavalier Hotel grounds, Capt. John Smith and his three ships—Godspeed, Sarah Constant and the Discovery—first set foot on the North American continent, April 26, 1607. President Hoover and Mrs. Hoover visited here last April commemorating the three hundred and twenty-fourth anniversary.

So whatever may be the desire of the Virginia Beach bound vacationist, bathing, fishing, flying, golf, motoring, riding or dancing, he will find it here to the queen's taste.

Frankfort Springs Opens for Season

Frankfort Mineral Springs, in Beaver County, offers to the vacationist the maximum in healthful recreation. The mineral water at the resort has been recommended by physicians, and the resort itself is attractive as a recreational center for those who tire of the city during the summer months. The grounds contain in the neighborhood of 150 acres and have been cleared to a great extent. The old hotel, opened in 1790 has been brought back to its original state, and its dining room and dance floor have been opened for the season.

Jasper National Park Lures Climbers

The great attraction of Jasper National Park in Alberta to alpine climbers is no doubt the opportunity it affords for first ascents. There are many important peaks still unconquered and even unnamed, and whole regions waiting to be explored.

SOUTH AMERICA GROWS RAPIDLY

The amazing wonders of South America are attracting many tourists and pleasure seekers from the United States. So rapidly has the continent to the south of us grown in popular favor that within a little time no one will consider himself well traveled unless he has visited the great republics south of the Panama Canal. The unrivaled scenic splendors, the astounding wealth and culture and the vast diversity of interests that will appeal to the visitor from the North, make South America of paramount interest to many classes of residents in the United States.

In the past there were inconveniences of travel which deterred many from visiting the southern half of the new world. But these have been eliminated by the establishment of a de luxe passenger service by the Furness Prince Line with its four superb motor liners, "The Four Princes," in regular fortnightly service between New York City, Rio de Janeiro, Santos, Montevideo and Buenos Aires.

THE NEW VOGUE IN LUGGAGE

Wardrobe cases for men and women in convenient sizes to accommodate all needed wearing apparel for a two weeks' journey are filling a long-felt want. So designed to carry 3 men's suits or 10 ladies' dresses in a wrinkle-proof packing arrangement which permits selection of any one garment without disturbing the others. No need of pressing or cleaning before wearing. Moderately priced as low as $5. Others of more elegant leather, elaborately fitted and designed to give years of service. They are a light weight, handy traveling need.

All the new ideas in luggage and a most complete assortment on display for your selection.

Greyhound Lines Offer Large Scope

As a means of vacation travel, the motor coaches have enjoyed steadily growing popularity. Their flexibility, economy and convenience have given them a wide following amongst those who hanker for something different in travel. Heads of America's bus companies estimate that nearly a third of their passenger traffic comes from vacationists. The Greyhound Lines, the only one in America of international scope, serving both Canada and Mexico as well as the United States, gives service to 46 of the 48 states as serves practically all of the great resort areas, National Parks, and summer playgrounds.

Cape May Offers Ideal Vacation

In making a list of all the desirable qualities in your ideal city, the kind of a place where you would like to live, to bring your family or to enjoy a vacation, and before making a total, add to this list the song of the sea, the tang of salt air, the sunrise greeting the morn and the sunset at rest in the sea, and the brilliant color of beautiful summer flowers, the sum total presents to you a good picture of Cape May City, N. J. The charm of Cape May is that of a quaint and historic village filled with friendly people, a truly beautiful country, of shady woods and winding rivers, of seas, beaches and ideal climate.

Set New Schedule For Yellowstone

Through a change in schedule of the Northern Pacific's Yellowstone Comet, a through Yellowstone Park train from Chicago, it will now be possible for Pittsburghers and tourists from adjacent territory to start from home in the morning and be in Yellowstone Park before noon of the third day, according to rail officials.

The Comet will leave Chicago at 10:30 p. m. and is scheduled to arrive at Cody at 11 a. m. the second day and at Gardiner at 11:30 a. m. of that day. The new arrangement will save a whole day for visitors to Yellowstone from the East, officials said.

AUTOMOBILES AID TO RESORT REVENUE TOTAL

Four Hundred Billion to Be Expended This Year, Say Auto Association Heads.

By ROBERT M. ROSS
Universal Service

DETROIT, Mich., June 6.—America is literally on wheels today. Out of 26,500,000 automobiles in this country, touring agencies estimate that more than 20,000,000 have taken to the road in an unprecedented movement of trade.

The changed character of automobile travel and the fact that a Saturday holiday gave workers an extra day's grace accounts for the heavy volume of travel. Whereas in previous years motorists have favored long drives, it is indicated from early inquiries at tourist bureaus that vacationists will concentrate on shorter although perhaps more frequent trips.

Ed Matheson, head of the travel bureau of the Automobile Club of Michigan, chief disseminator of highway information in this section, said:

"We have found the majority of our inquiries concern directions to resort cities within a 400-mile radius. Last summer and in the winter this was not true. In fact, we recorded the heaviest Florida and California business in our history. Perhaps this was because many, out of work, sought to evade the burdens of coal bills."

While the amount American tourists will spend the year remains a trifle vague, it will undoubtedly run into billions. The American Automobile Association estimates the figures at four hundred billions and although this estimate seems exhorbitant, undoubtedly the true figure assured travel of retaining its position as the world's greatest industry.

FRANCE OPENS FOOD CONTEST

PARIS, June 7.—Resolved that the gastronomic renown of the historic French provinces shall be preserved, the Touring Club of France is organizing again for this year its prize competition for restaurant or hotel keeper offering "the best national repast." The competition this year will cover the region of the chateau country along the Loire, a region visited annually by many thousands of American and other tourists.

Probably no other part of France is as renowned, both for historical associations many centuries old and for present-day scenic beauties. Food specialties of the locality are again to count heavily in the decision of the winner of the competition, which will be open from July 11 to September 20, or during the height of the tourist season.

Northern Resorts Always Attractive

Just a day from New York and little more than half a day from Boston gleams a foreign land that is a kind of miniature Europe. Kilted Highlanders with bagpipes, living scenes from France and England, fishing villages and memorials of Evangeline flash and sparkle in a frame of lakes, mountains, forests and gay recreation centers. For the benefit of the traveler eager to cruise to this fascinating country the Eastern Steamship Lines have prepared special cruises which will run at convenient dates throughout the season.

Fox Hunts Popular At Virginia Beach

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va., June 6.—Fox and drag hunts afford a thrilling spectacle to vacationists here. The chases are run over courses that probably cover a greater variety of country than any other courses in the United States. Pine forests, deserts, beaches and open fields are included in the hunting grounds.

A TINY TROPICAL ISLAND

All-Year Club Photo.

SANTA CATALINA—This small tropical island, two hours' sail from the mainland of Southern California, offers the finest of vacation pleasures. Catalina is famous for its beach, the scene of many championship swimming competitions.

CHANGE RUN OF VESSELS

The splendid new oil-burning, turbine-electric steamships Mohawk and Seminole, which during the winter season were employed in the New York-Jacksonville service of the Clyde-Mallory Lines, now are in service in the New York-Miami-Galveston service, replacing the steamship H. R. Mallory. Sailings from New York and from Galveston are on Saturdays, with calls in each direction at Miami on Tuesdays, and with arrival at New York and at Galveston on Fridays.

This service now provides a weekly express passenger run between the North and the South, to Florida and Texas, which will be particularly pleasing to summer vacationists as well as to business people. It makes possible a cool and comfortable sea trip throughout the warm season on ships that are rated among the finest and the most comfortable in the American merchant marine's coastwise services.

Saguenay River Cruise Inviting

The Saguenay River cruise again beckons to vacationists. From the roaring rapids of the Niagara River, across Lake Ontario to Toronto, to the Thousand Islands is a delightful voyage. Between the still waters of Lake Ontario and the head of ocean navigation at Montreal, lies a series of seven rapids. Voyagers in their birch canoes once shot these rapids at the risk of life and limb. Indians headed for the trading post at Montreal would brave the roaring torrents at the gathering of dusk, rather than sleep with the fear of facing it at dawn. The voyage is replete with scenes of the romantic past, not as picturesque, but as a country still in actual use.

Canada Famous For Its Maples

The natural range of the sugar maple in Canada extends from the maritime provinces to the Lake of the Woods in Ontario. In the forest it may reach a height of over 100 feet, but ordinarily does not average more than 75 to 80 feet in height, and two to three feet in diameter. It occurs either in pure stands or is found associated with other hardwoods.

Few Shoes, But Many Gloves Is Rule for Travel

Elimination is important in considering the number of pairs of shoes the traveler will carry with him, but the reverse is true of the number of pairs of gloves.

Choose each pair of shoes with the idea in mind of having them serve as many purposes as possible, and take fewer than you think you will need. Most of your gloves should be washable.

One shop is showing some smart 8 and 12-button kid gloves that are washed as easily as you wash your hands. Washable pigskin gloves are for rougher wear, and in between are the suede and, if you like them, the fabric gloves, so well done that they look like doeskin.

PLANS CAMP IN NORMANDY

Chateau de Champthierry, in the heart of picturesque Normandy, the garden spot of France, will be the home in July and August of "Camp Adventure Abroad," a boys' camp which offers something unusual and different in summer camps for young Americans.

Camp Adventure has been organized with the co-operation of the United States Lines, by Arthur J. Barry, Jr., and Ralph Marshall Anspach, for boys from 10 to 18 years of age. On July 4, Camp Adventure Abroad will sail from New York under the American flag on the Leviathan, of the United States Lines, to begin seven weeks rarely duplicated in other boys' camps. The tour is planned on the all-expense basis by the United States Lines.

Canadian Forests Have Great Extent

According to the Forest Service of the Department of the Interior, commercial forests can be grown on 555,000,000 acres of Canada's domain, and that on 182,000,000 acres the forests are either at present inaccessible or are of value mainly for their ameliorating effect on climate, the control of water flow, prevention of erosion or their scenic attractions.

WESTERN TRIP IS DIVERSION

Trans-continental travel in North America today is little less than a miracle compared with that of a quarter of a century ago, and a journey from Chicago to the North Pacific Coast over the Northern Pacific Railway is an experience of travel service that is rarely surpassed. There are few routes of greater scenic beauty and historic interest anywhere.

Those eastern travelers who wisely plan their trips west during the Yellowstone Park season, June 20 to September 15, may easily include in their itineraries five days of sightseeing within the world's most unique and interesting outdoor playground. There is hardly a better way for city-tired folks to return home from a summer's outing robust in body and renewed in spirit than to register at one of the Montana-Wyoming "Dude Ranches."

OPERA TO OPEN AT STEEL PIER

The fourth season of grand opera in English at Atlantic City will open Sunday, June 21, according to Jukes Falk, director of music of the Steel Pier. Bizet's "Carmen" will open the season and will include stars from the Metropolitan, Chicago Civic, Philadelphia Grand and San Carlo Opera Companies. The company will be known during the season as the Steel Pier Grand Opera Company. A new stage and equipment has been constructed and changes made to the ballroom so as to accommodate 3,000. These performances are included in the general admission to the Steel Pier and no reservation of seats is made.

VIRGINIA SHORE COMMUNITIES OPEN ACTIVITY

Amusement Parks Prepare For Influx of Summer Visitors: Varied Plans

The resort communities which line the 25 miles of smooth white sand beach at Virginia seashore are spic and span and bright as a result of the spring activities of painters and contractors, and offer more to the tourist and vacationist for the season of 1931 than ever before in their history.

Virginia Beach, Ocean View, Cape Henry and other beach resorts in the vicinity of Norfolk and Portsmouth at the Virginia seashore all have new and improved facilities for the thousands who take advantage of their recreational attractions. These attractions include surf bathing and all the other normal beach sports, as well as golf, tennis, horseback riding, fishing and other unexpected allurements.

SPACIOUS BALLROOMS

Virginia Beach has two first-class amusement parks, both with beautiful and spacious ballrooms where many hundreds of couples dance every night during the resort season. They also offer open air salt water swimming pools and many amusement devices, as well as sea food restaurants and other delightful facilities.

And with the sporting and recreational attractions at Virginia seashore is combined a historic interest which is rare. For the Virginia seashore is the cradle of the nation. Cape Henry is the spot where the first permanent English settlers made their first landing in America, and where they stayed for a short period before proceeding up the James River to Jamestown. And close by are Jamestown itself, as well as Williamsburg and Yorktown, in which so many significant events in the early history of colonial and national America took place.

NUMEROUS HOTELS

Virginia Beach on the Atlantic Ocean offers to the visitors numerous attractive hotels, cottages, boarding houses and apartments. Among the hotels is the famous Cavalier, already a popular rendezvous of the elite.

Much of the atmosphere of the Lido is reproduced at the Cavalier by the series of cabanas and the beach club. Inside the hotel there is a salt water swimming pool for those who like diving and indoor water sports. And there is also the new Cavalier Country Club, which has a new 18-hole golf course which is among the most beautiful and sportiest in the United States.

GOLFERS' PARADISE

The Princess Anne Country Club golf course at Virginia Beach also is well known to golfers. Many of the finest golf professionals and amateurs have engaged in tournaments on this course and have expressed delight with it.

These golf courses are cut through pine woods which at Virginia Beach come down almost to the edge of the sea. These same woods provide excellent woodland trails for horseback riding and hiking and are skirted on their western border by a beautiful chain of fresh water lakes, where outboard and motor boat racing and cruising and surf boarding are becoming popular sports.

At Ocean View the best of accommodations are offered by the new Nansemond Hotel, situated on the shore of Chesapeake Bay. Here is to be found also one of the finest amusement parks in the South, with all sorts of rides and entertainment devices for children and grown-ups. The City of Norfolk maintains at Ocean View, an 18-hole municipal golf course which is a paradise for golfers.

Had First Trace Of Coal in Canada

The first reference to coal in Alberta is contained in a map of Aaron Arrowsmith. It is that of Edgecoal Creek, known today as Rosebud River. Concerning this stream Arrowsmith says "great quantity of coal in this creek."

Fashion Decrees Dusky Tones of Sunburnt Things

Travelers this summer will have a brown appearance. In the absence of deep sun-tanned complexions no longer desirable from a fashion point of view, the dusky hues of sunburnt things are seen in clothes. They enhance the Victorian pallor of the newly fashionable type of outdoor girl, who has kept her peaches and cream complexion under a hat of colossal breadth while she sunned

LAKE AND RIVER TRAVEL GROWS

Lake and river passenger travel has increased perceptibly during the past few years, according to federal reports. The lakes, rivers and streams of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan and New York have been the most favored of the lot. More and more vacationists are realizing the beauty of the small lakes and rivers and are giving them preference over the more extended trips by ocean.

Tourists Visit Powder Magazine In Charleston

Tourists visit, among the especially interesting buildings in Charleston, S. C., the Powder Magazine, built in 1703 and used many years prior to the American Revolution for the storing of powder.

Although it was condemned as too old for further use more than 30 years before the American Revolution, it is still in use as a museum and meeting place of the South Carolina Society of Colonial Dames.

SHORT OCEAN TRIPS FAVORED

The desire of the American public for short sea trips has led many lines of international scope to adopt a policy of short ocean trips throughout the summer. Many of these trips are of six days' duration, while some of them are of longer time. "Trips to Nowhere" and "Trips to Somewhere" are being featured by many lines. Several cruises of this type which have already been run have been well booked, according to steamship officials.

It Had to be a Good Tire to Succeed Like This—

Five years ago the ALLSTATE Tire was unborn. Today one out of every ten tires sold at retail is an ALLSTATE. An achievement unmatched in tire history.

Of course, ALLSTATE is priced unbelievably low—dollars lower than any comparable tire. Sears' economical method of distribution takes care of that. But price alone could not account for such success. IT HAD TO BE A GOOD TIRE.

It is easy to understand why ALLSTATE is so good. It was designed especially for Sears by the country's foremost engineers and tire designers. Every worthwhile tire has been torn shred from shred to find out its strengths and weaknesses, and the benefit of that knowledge has gone into ALLSTATE. It is made especially for Sears by the country's foremost tire manufacturer—and the only tire that can compare with it is the one made by that manufacturer under his own name. It is more than a coincidence that the two tires that have had the most outstanding sales records during the past few years, have been products of the same engineering and manufacturing genius.

Private Life of the Ancient Egyptians

A Spirited Wall Painting from the Tomb of Nakht at Thebes (2000 B. C.), Showing Three Female Musicians Who Amused the Ancient Egyptians. There Is a Harpist, a Player Upon the Instrument Called the Reeds and One Playing a Long-Handled and Fretted String Instrument.

Curious and Interesting Customs Revealed by Remarkable Tomb Paintings

5—How They Amused Themselves.

THE ancient Egyptians managed to enjoy life, even though they had no radios, motion pictures or automobiles, no circuses, night clubs, theatres, newspapers or novels, and no outdoor sports except fishing and hunting. The parades connected with the numerous feasts of the gods and other temple ceremonies provided them with plenty of spectacular amusement. The occasional funeral of a Pharaoh or some of his family or a high noble always had highly entertaining features. Then there were public executions, whippings and similar happenings to divert the mind. Life was seldom dull.

Dice throwing was one of the favorite indoor sports. This pastime is frequently referred to today as "African golf," and the slang phrase is not inapt. It is likely that the first dice were invented in Egypt. At any rate, every one from Pharaoh and high priest to the lowliest peasant threw dice, and no doubt they had the equivalent of "crap." They also played a form of checkers, chess, dominoes and backgammon. Cards were unknown, and that was perhaps fortunate, because if there had been cards the Egyptians would probably have invented bridge, a game which sometimes brings out the worst in human nature, and which has been responsible for innumerable quarrels, assaults and even murders. It is disconcerting to think of the consequences if bridge had been invented at a time when human life was held far more cheaply than now.

The ancient Egyptians had plenty of good cheap wine and excellent beer, which they brewed from barley. In the cool of the evening they would sit around and drink and listen to the story-tellers recite the myths and legends of a still more ancient past. They especially liked fairy tales, in which speaking animals, gods in disguise, ghosts and magic played a part. Aesop's Fables are thought to have originated in Egypt, having been brought to Greece by an African slave.

The women, as a rule, had a better time than the men. There never was a country in which she had more freedom. In the earliest days marriage was quite promiscuous, and for that reason for many centuries the line of descent and inheritance came only through the mother—since there was so much doubt as to the identity of the father. Every woman had her own house, which she received from either her father or her husband.

Herodotus, a Greek historian of about 490 to 409 B. C., called "The Father of History," has much to say about this freedom of Egyptian women. Among others, he tells a story of a Pharaoh who became blind. The gods promised to restore his sight when he found a woman who loved only her husband. The Pharaoh immediately summoned the Queen, then the ladies of the court, then those of the towns, those of the country, slaves—and still he was blind as a bat. He had to call in women from abroad before he finally found one who brought the cure. Potiphar's wife, who, the Bible tells, caused Joseph so much trouble, lived at Thebes in Egypt.

The Pharaohs and rich nobles had, of course, diversions which the common people could not afford. Mme. G. R. Tabouis, in her remarkable book, "The Private Life of Tut-ankh-Amen," draws a vivid picture of the way that interesting young ruler spent some of his time.

"In the heat of the day Tut-ankh-Amen would come to his harem to enjoy the coolness of the big halls with the water basins among the brightly colored pillars, and then all the little rooms of the fair recluses woke up as if by magic. It was the master's hour. Round about His Majesty the concubines fluttered, slim and unclad, lips painted, eyes lined with kohl, and finger nails and toe nails colored carmine. Some brought him lotuses to gratify his nostrils or sweet melons to quench his thirst. Others placed the game board on a table and, with bursts of childish laughter, set out the enameled terra-cotta pieces with the dogs' and jackals' heads.

"Pharaoh settles himself comfortably in a wide armchair. Behind him two concubines wave great fly-flappers. With his right hand he throws up two knucklebones (a form of dice), the fall of which determines the

THE TEMPTATION

"Get thee hence Satan: it is written thou shalt worship the Lord thy God and Him only shalt thou serve."

IN one of the most unusual of modern books [illegible] the whole story of His nativity, [illegible], ministry, crucifixion and resurrection [illegible] told without a word of text. The story is [illegible] in some seventy woodcuts, eight of which are reproduced in this page.

The illustrations are grouped under four chapter headings: The Infant, The Boy, The Son of God, and The Son of Man. And to everyone familiar with the Bible most of the important episodes in the life of the Messiah can be found, in the order of their happening, in the woodcuts, which recently were published by Farrar & Rinehart in a volume called "The Life of Christ in Woodcuts."

James Reid, the artist, is one of the youngest [illegible] in the world, having but recently [illegible] his twenty-fourth birthday. His work has made a deep impression on the comparatively few men who express their talents in wood engraving, a form of art which is not practiced today nearly so much as it was before the invention of the process of photo engraving.

THE NATIVITY. "And she brought forth her first born son, and wrapped Him in swaddling clothes, and laid Him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn."

It is supposed that wood engraving was invented by the Chinese in the third century A. D., and it is known that Mongol artists printed letters and illustrations from wood blocks as long ago as that. The Babylonians and Egyptians used woodcuts to trade-mark bricks.

Just how the European artists of medieval time picked up the art is not definitely known, and some historians believe that wood engraving sprang up in Europe, independent of any other influence, some time in the Fourteenth century.

The first American to distinguish himself as a wood engraver was Alexander Anderson, who died in 1870. Many of his woodcuts were copies of cuts used to illustrate English books sent to this country.

James Reid has what might be called an original manner of expressing himself in wood, for he has combined certain distinctly modern ideas of illustration with his own version of the technique of the medieval wood engravers.

All of his woodcuts possess what the critics call "dramatic value" because of their unusual contrasts in black and white and the powerful simplicity by which they tell their stories.

movements of the green jackal and blue dogs, while his left caresses the slim, bare waist of a girl who stands by his side, making him smell the opiate scent of a huge water-lily. Opposite him stands a fourth, very small concubine, who moves the pieces about, and Pharaoh gazes indulgently at the happy animation of her baby face.

"Gradually evening falls. Pharaoh goes up to the second floor, that of the little painted rooms. At the end of each an alcove yawns mysteriously under the flashing gold of a royal vulture with wings spread, revealing a divan with feather cushions of many colors. In front of the rooms, water splashes gently in little basins of blue faience. Pharaoh stops: here is the stone slab on which muscular negroes rub down the Royal Wives, still marked with the damp outline of the Great Favorite.

"Tutankhamen hesitates, but etiquette must be observed, even when the heart does not speak.

As the night goes on, Tutankhamen goes to his dancing-girls and singing girls. Their pavilion stands in the middle of a lake. He drinks wine and olive oil with them and listens to their songs. One of these has the refrain: 'When I am with my beloved, I am drunk with beer.'

"Dawn has barely broken," writes Mme. Tabouis, "when Pharaoh is saying: 'Seek something to lighten my heart.' The Vizier answers: 'I have ordered a barge to be manned by the fairest of your harem.' Then [illegible] galley gliding over the lake, rowed by twenty women clad only in gold hairnets. Pharaoh takes his seat in the midst of the crew, and his heart is lightened to see the jeweled oars dipping in the water, and [illegible] warmed by the first rays of the sun."

Some of the princes gave entertainments for their friends, upon which large sums of money and much ingenuity were expended. One of these [illegible] has been described in a manuscript lately deciphered so that moderns can look in upon the entertainment almost as if they were [illegible] though it happened forty centuries ago.

The invited guests were seated upon the broad roof of the palace while servants brought them wine and sweetmeats, nuts and raisins. The palace was close to a great canal giving a wide view of graceful [illegible] and fruitful fields.

A boat comes into view, swept forward by the rowers to the landing stage in front of the palace. Apes clamber over the boat and the carols of the singers are heard. Bullfights, wrestling matches and contests are held.

These contests are followed by folk dances, in which men and women take part, clothed in short jerkins, dancing various figures together. These are followed by the more accomplished ballet dancers of the harem, all being accompanied by the music of harps and reed-instruments, together with chants. The dances are planned not merely for grace and charm, but often represent some historic scenes, such as the Pharaoh's victory over his enemies.

Then come the contortionists, and last of all the ballplayers, who use the ball as a motif in an intricate dance woven around throwing and receiving the ball.

Now the guests pass to the banquet-hall, where they are served by the charming dancers. They pour ointment on the heads of the guests, place chaplets of flowers about their necks, while the blind harpists pluck harmonies from their strings and the flutists carry the melodies of ancient chants. The choirs of male voices sing the chorus which the female voices have introduced, and then in unison they hymn the joys of the "Flooding of the Nile:"

"The pools with fresh water overflow
"The dry earth is enriched by his great love."

The mummy of an ancestor is brought in to join the festivity, that he, too, may share in the food and drink of the feast.

Again the musicians strike up a livelier strain, and unclothed women from the harem enter, dancing, not the ancient measures of historic scenes, but more piquant posturings. They give the stomach-dance, still practiced in Egypt, and as the harps grow silent, the tambourines and castanets keep time to the livelier measures. It is almost dawn before the feast draws to a close and the wedding guests go home.

On the preceding page is a spirited painting of three musicians of one of the orchestras that amused the ancient Egyptians. It is from the tomb of a scribe named Nakht, who lived in Thebes, Egypt, some 4,000 years ago. The orchestra was apparently made up of good looking girls. One plays a harp, another the reeds, and the third a stringed and fretted instrument. This illustration, with the others on the page, is reproduced from the "Robb de Peyster Tytus Memorial Series," books published by the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York. The picture was copied faithfully from its ancient original by Mr. Lancelot Crane. Another picture shows old Nakht and his wife enjoying a banquet. Nakht is inhaling the fragrance of a lotus. This tomb painting was copied by F. S. Unwin.

Johnny Weismuller, the Swimming Champion, and His Bride, Bobbie Arnst. The Photograph Shows the Remarkable Muscular Development of the Swimmer's Back.

A Study in Famous Backs

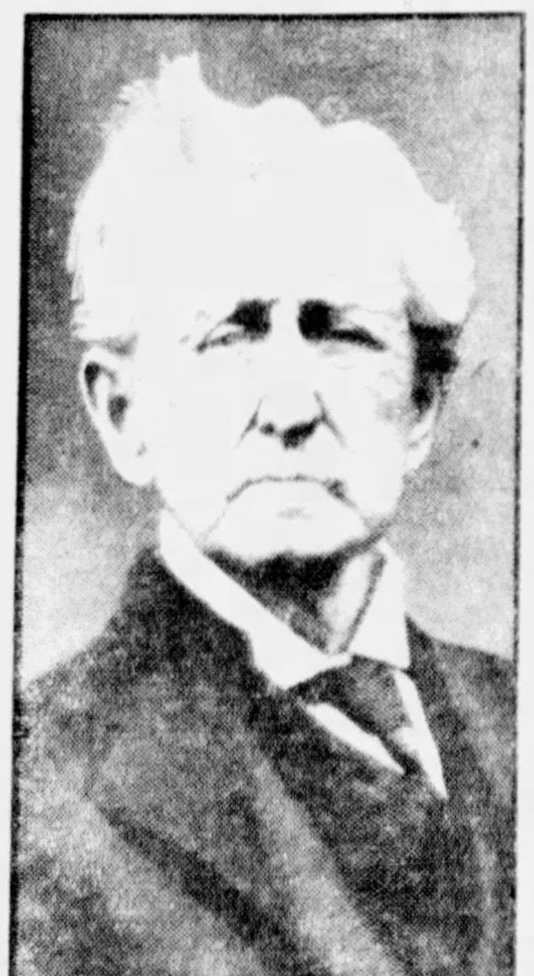
MANY photographs were taken of Johnny Weismuller, champion swimmer, and Bobbie Arnst, popular Broadway musical comedy star, while they were on their recent and widely publicized honeymoon. Among these "shots" of the newlyweds was the picture shown above. To most people this photograph was merely amusing, but to physiologists and physical directors it illustrated graphically the value of fresh air and exercise in the lives of everyone.

Naturally, Weismuller would have a broader, stronger back than his stage-star bride. But, the physiologists point out, if it were not for his several years of healthful physical activity, much of it in the sun and air, the swimmer would not have the notably splendid back apparent in the photograph.

Mrs. Weismuller has a good back, too, as backs go. But, the scientists say, she would have a much better one if she, like her husband, had developed it by regular exercise within the limits of her physical powers. If she had not spent so much of her young life indoors rehearsing for shows and playing in them, to the delight of thousands of theatre-goers, and to the advancement of her own fame and fortune, she might be the proud possessor of a back almost as splendidly developed as that of her spouse.

Swimming is one of the best sports for building symmetrical bodies and deep chests. And, say the physical directors, the chest is merely "the front of the back" and its development is essential to such perfect backs as that of Johnny Weismuller.

Bandit Now Religious Worker



Alex Adair, Now 81, the Last Survivor of the Notorious Band of Outlaws Led by Jesse James. He Is Now a Religious Worker.

NO ONE would think to look at Alex Adair, of Denver, Colo., that he once was one of the notorious "bad men" of the West, and that there was a handsome reward for his capture, dead or alive.

Mr. Adair, a quiet-spoken man of 81, is spending his declining years in trying to lead erring humans back to the so-called "straight and narrow path." He is an active member of a religious organization known as the Volunteers of America and is associated with other groups whose purpose it is to inspire people to be moral and law-abiding citizens.

"Dare-devil Alex," they called the religious worker back in the wild days when he was a member of the gang led by Frank and Jesse James, and he admits that he was ready for any job [illegible] swashbuckling outlaws assigned to him.

He long ago ceased to believe in banditry, and he has told thousands of young men that there is a lot of truth in the oft-repeated adage that crime never pays.

"Many of the so-called crimes of the James Boys," says Mr. Adair, "were what might be called Robin Hood jobs — cases of robbing the rich to give to the poor and needy. But I know now that even that type of banditry is bad. Anyone who thinks gangdom is romantic is deluding himself. The only real romance is to be found in living an upright and useful life. A criminal can't be happy, even though he escapes punishment."

A Perfect Type of Blonde?

VIENNESE gentlemen — including artists, photographers and theatrical producers — are ardent admirers of feminine beauty, whether that beauty is classed as blonde, brunette or titian. But they are forever showing their preference for blondes.

The newest evidence of the weakness for golden-haired beauties in the world-famous "City of Beautiful Women" was manifested in a contest recently held to select and crown the feminine resident of Vienna possessing the most perfect type of blonde comeliness.

A committee of artists and sculptors tackled the difficult job and finally agreed that Marie Von Eisler, the young woman whose photograph is shown at the right, is "the most perfect" blonde in Vienna, or anywhere else on the European continent.

The winner, in the opinion of the eminent judges, has everything that Mother Nature can bestow upon a blonde member of the fair sex. Her hair is just the proper shade of gold. Her pink and white complexion harmonizes exactly with her crowning glory. And her sea-blue eyes, set in a classically oval face, complete the alluring color scheme.

Miss Von Eisler, since her elevation above the heads of the hundreds of good-looking blondes in the Austrian metropolis, has been besieged by offers to go on the stage and to star in the movies, but she has so far refused to put her name on the dotted line.

The Matrimonial Predicament of Young Mr. Converse

Like Others of Wealth, Fashion and Leisure, He Was Unhappy With His Wife, Got a Quick and Easy (but Defective) Reno Divorce, Marries Again and Now Has Two Wives on His Hands

The Estate at Greenwich, Connecticut, of the Late Mr. E. C. Converse, Wealthy Grandfather of Young Converse M. Converse.

Mr. and Mrs. Converse Returning From a Five Months' Trip Abroad—This Is Before They Began to Have Their Troubles.

Mrs. Converse M. Converse, Who Was Divorced by the Reno Courts, but Reinstated as a Wife by the New York Courts

Mrs. Converse No. 2, the Mexico Bride Who the New York Courts Say Is Not Mr. Converse's Wife.

"Burglars!" Exclaimed Mrs. Converse as She Arrived Home From a Tea, Glanced Into Her Husband's Bedroom and Was Startled to See Drawers Open and His Fashionable Attire Scattered About. But She Was Mistaken—Mr. Converse Had Swiftly Packed a Suitcase and Left for Reno Without Even Kissing His Little Wife Goodbye.

MR. CONVERSE M. CONVERSE, wealthy young New York society man, grandson of one of the multi-millionaire founders of the Steel Trust, was not happy with his young and attractive wife. He took the quick and easy road out of his matrimonial difficulties through Reno, Nevada—but now he is in a worse predicament with his Reno divorce than he was before he got it.

Mr. Converse M. Converse supposed he had gotten rid of his first wife and, with the divorce in his pocket, at once married another. But the law is a sort of a game which, like whist or poker, must be played according to the rules. The lawyers seem to have carelessly overlooked one of the rules, and therefore the first Mrs. Converse was able to walk into a New York court the other day, persuade the judge that the Reno divorce was worthless and therefore put Mr. Converse in the embarrassing position of being the husband of two wives.

When Mr. Converse got his Reno divorce it looked just as good as any other. It had the judge's signature on it and the seal of the court and when the clerk of the court handed it out he yelled "Next!" in the same business-like voice as usual. It did not bulge or smell bad, like a defective can of sardines, so how was Mr. Converse to know?

He accepted the document in good faith, paid the fees of the court and of his lawyers and showed the impressive document to Mrs. Stella Fried-Kahn-Gurdin of New York City, who had been in the divorce market twice herself and presumably ought to know something about that line of goods.

The thing looked so good to her that on the strength of it she went to Juarez, Mexico, with Mr. Converse and married him. The Mexican authorities thought it was good, too, but then most anything goes, in the divorce line, in that rival of Reno.

Then the couple went to Hollywood to live happily ever after and the first doubts arose. They learned that the first Mrs. Converse did not consider herself divorced at all and was suing in New York City for separation and actually naming the second Mrs. Converse as living bigamously with her husband.

"How absurd!" said Mr. Converse. "It was all agreed. We had been married seven years and were all through. First she was to go and get it, but she was so busy with dances and one thing and another that she could not get around to it, so I took time and did it myself. I am sending her $600 a month which she said would be all right. What can she be thinking about?"

For one thing, she was now thinking about $1,200 a month alimony. The newlyweds got out that solemn-looking document and the Mexican marriage certificate. They looked as genuine as their birth certificate and driver's license. However, to make sure, Mr. Converse wired to the lawyer who had steered him through the mill and asked if there was any doubt about it. Back came the answer:

"Don't worry. It's as good as the wheat."

But they did worry. In the first place wheat had not been very good for some time and Attorney J. L. Melzer, Mr. Converse's lawyer in New York, did not seem to think that divorce was any good at all in the Empire State now that it had been contested, therefore the bride, in the eyes of the law, would not be his wife but merely a lady friend who had made a sad mistake. This uncomfortable matrimonial situation would be true only within New York State. Unless the first Mrs. Converse brought some more suits Stella's standing would be good in all the rest of the world. But having just married a man of some social and financial prominence the bride could not bear the thought of being exiled forever from New York City.

Neither could Mr. Converse bear to abandon the city that contained Park Avenue, the opera and all his clubs. There was also the financial side to be considered. If the court should award the first Mrs. Converse that $1,200 a month, she could collect it by simply attaching his income from a trust fund left by the late Edmund P. Converse in that way so that the young man could not possibly lose it. A trust fund, however, is no protection against alimony. A wife can get her husband's gold no matter where it is except perhaps in his teeth, and this was nice and handy for her in the Bankers Trust Co.

The first Mrs. Converse is a granddaughter of John A. McCall, former president of the New York Life Insurance Co., and said to be so smart that she can tell what an insurance policy really means and plenty smart enough to suspect that her husband's divorce was a "second" and a "dud." Like Attorney Melzer she had studied the moves in the legal chess game and discovered that an important one had been overlooked. Her husband had mailed her a copy of the summons and served her by publication which made the resulting divorce good against her as far as the State of Nevada was concerned, but no good in New York. To make it binding all over he should have either served her within the boundaries of Nevada or else have induced her to appear by attorney, neither of which was done. So Mr. Converse hurried back to New York to see what could be done about this wife who wouldn't be divorced and had changed her mind about the alimony.

Apparently nothing could be done at first. It was $1,200 or nothing and then, one day, she suddenly became sweetly reasonable, offering to accept the original figure of $600 a month and call everything off. Everybody was happy until she presented the agreement for Mr. Converse to sign and then it turned out that she did not want it in the form of alimony, which is payable only during the life of the payer and as long as the wife remains unmarried. She wanted a settlement of that amount for the rest of her natural life, whether married or single, a very different matter.

The offer was refused and the case came up for hearing. According to the first Mrs. Converse, she had not agreed to the divorce at all, and, any way, if there was to be one she was to have gotten it, even if she did take her time. The first warning of her husband's intentions was one day when she came home from a tea.

"Burglars!" exclaimed Mrs. Converse as she glanced into her husband's bedroom and was startled to see drawers open and his fashionable attire scattered about. But she was mistaken—Mr. Converse had simply packed a suitcase and left for Reno, without even kissing his little wife goodbye. This she thought cruel and besides he had said some mean things in that divorce complaint, for instance:

"About four years after marriage Mrs. Converse developed a temperamental manner and nature, and gave evidence of the same by frequent outbursts of passion and temper for no good or just reason; from this time on and after she gradually assumed a dictatorial attitude and manifested decisive, tyrannical traits, making imperative demands upon Mr. Converse and displaying a superior air over him as hereinafter particularly alleged; she insisted upon having her own way in everything, was extremely unreasonable and arbitrary in her demands, and when he tried to reason with her in a quiet way she would give vent to hysterical outbursts of passion, anger and temper, and finished up by striking him with her hands over his face on occasions too numerous to specify.

"About this time, and for no justifiable reason, Mrs. Converse became infuriated and approached him in a menacing and threatening manner and scratched his face, digging her sharp finger nails into his face, clawing him and causing his face to become lacerated and to bleed, rendering him unpresentable before his friends and acquaintances for several days.

"During the same period another popular method adopted by Mrs. Converse of showing her contempt for him and her anger was to pick up any article that happened to be near and throw it at him; that she frequently threw or hurled at him such items of personal property as books, ash trays, glassware, a hand mirror, a fancy ornamental clock and other things within reach; this character of performance happened very often. In Bern, Switzerland, a frivolous argument arose between them, and she became enraged and rushed at plaintiff with a long, sharp nail file and jabbed it into his right ankle, causing blood to run from the wound, and produced a laceration and swelling which caused him to limp for several days from the same.

"While in her usual temperamental fits and paroxysms of anger as above described, she frequently rushed at plaintiff and violently grabbed at his hair and pulled the same with great force and often succeeded in pulling out hair from the roots of his head, thereby causing him great physical pain and suffering; she repeated this course of treatment about six or seven times during the Winter months of 1928.

"Although Mr. Converse has always provided for her liberally and generously she was never satisfied and always clamored for more and complained and nagged plaintiff, and demanded more than his means would permit, and she was in the habit of forcing her demands to such extent by her nagging methods that from sheer exhaustion he felt compelled to yield to her unreasonable demands to keep peace in the family, although by yielding to same he was forced into debt to satisfy her extravagant craving."

Those were some of the things Mr. Converse told the court in Reno, but his wife, who denies all the charges, was not present to refute them, so "Connie," as Mr. Converse is called by his friends, won his divorce.

And now in her recent action in the New York courts to upset her husband's Reno decree, Mrs. Converse has some charges to make against the man who thought he had got through with her forever.

In her New York proceedings, Mrs. Converse declares:

"My husband acted sullenly and spitefully toward me at parties, receptions and other public gatherings. He entered into a bigamous marriage with one Stella Gurdin and has since lived unlawfully with her, to my great humiliation and anguish."

Supreme Court Justice John Ford threw Mr. Converse's Reno divorce out the window and awarded the first Mrs. Converse a separation, but before imposing alimony he urged the parties to get together and "not be greedy." As a result they agreed on the sum of $8,500 a year, only $1,300 more than Mr. Converse had offered. Also, being alimony, it will cease at his death or her remarriage.

This leaves the three in a peculiar position. In Nevada, the second Mrs. Converse is still the genuine and recognized wife, and wife number one has no standing. In New York, it is the reverse. In other States and the world at large probably both are equally in good or dubious standing. Even in New York the husband cannot be prosecuted for bigamy on account of a saving legal technicality.

Though New York threw out the Reno decree it respects it to the extent that Mr. Converse cannot be punished for using it in good faith as the basis of a remarriage. The attitude of the courts is that the second marriage was void and, therefore, legally never happened, yet both ladies may enjoy the title of Mrs. Converse M. Converse.

There is a precedent in the case of Charles Ludwig Baumann who obtained a Mexican divorce and married again only to have it declared invalid in New York, whose courts held that the second Mrs. Baumann could call herself that though it did not mean anything.

However, Mr. Converse, if he cares who gets his money, should be careful how and where he dies. For example, if he should have made a will naming his second wife sole heir and not mentioning his first wife, the latter would have great difficulty in getting her hands on any of the spoil, but she might. And this would even be the case if death occurred in New York State. If Converse should die without having made a will, in any part of the country but New York State, his property would go to the second Mrs. Converse. If he should die leaving no will in New York State, the property would go to the first Mrs. Converse.

Therefore, should Mr. Converse die suddenly and carelessly, in New York State, a sort of grand sweepstakes gamble for the matrimonial profits may be expected.

Drugged Before the Wedding — Bride Must Not See Husband Until She's Married

LOVE and romance flourishes among the Bugis, a semi-civilized moslem tribe on the Dutch East Indian island of Celebes, as it flourishes in no other part of the world, except perhaps, in the nearby island of Bali, which explorers have called "an earthly paradise." But the marriage customs of this amorous race seem to indicate that matrimony is so elaborate a ceremony [illegible] drugged into unconsciousness before she can be dragged or carried to the altar.

So far as is known, however, no Bugis [illegible] has objected to the ancient and curious tribal custom of [illegible] a sort of native "knockout drops" so that she [illegible] a moment of [illegible] gaze upon the face of her beloved during the three-day wedding celebration.

Relatives of the bride and the bridegroom congregate in the village three days before the wedding, dressed in robes of brilliant colors, raiment which is worn at no other time. They feast on a bewildering variety of highly colored sweetmeats, fruit and rice, and drink great quantities of an intoxicating fluid drawn from the toddy palm.

The bride-to-be is present at some of these pre-nuptial celebrations, but she doesn't know what it's all about, because, before the beginning of the festivities, she is made to drink a strong narcotic which dopes her so thoroughly that she can't even raise the lids of her eyes, which are painted a pretty shade of blue.

The Bridegroom Upon Whom the Bride May Look Only After She Has Become His Property.

If she broke the tribal custom which forbids her to look at her betrothed during this three-day period, and until she is safely married to him, the wedding would be off and the assembled company would be plunged into superstitious and funereal gloom.

It Is One of the Customs Too, That the Girl to Be Married Must Not Have Her Feet Touch the Ground for Three Days Before the Ceremony. She Is Shown Here Being Carried on Her Father's Shoulders.

Almost as interesting as the traditional doping of the bride, is the custom which decrees that the woman's feet must not touch the ground during the three-day orgy of feasting, drinking and dancing. The Bugis believe that a wife-to-be must be kept at least symbolically pure for the ceremony of matrimony and that this symbolism is best carried out by keeping her from contact with the earth.

Wherever the unconscious lady goes she is borne on the shoulders of her father, and if her father is dead, she is carried by the uncle, or the next of kin among the male members of her family.

Some time after the actual marriage ceremony is performed with great pomp and din, the wife awakes from her coma, with a sort of "where am I?" expression and fondly embraces her waiting spouse. Her family and in-laws stay on the job until she is fully conscious and then go on living their respective lives. The photographs shown here were made by E. O. Hoppe, British explorer, by special permission of the bride's father.

The "Snake Nest" Dance

NATIVE New Yorkers and visitors to the Metropolis who seek diverison in the city's numerous night clubs thought they had seen about everything in the way of dancing until they beheld, in one of the more expensive and exciting rendezvous, the serpentine contortions of a girl named Thais Giroux.

Thais, they guessed, was a French girl who had been brought up in the Orient—for her "snake nest" dance combines the abandon of the Parisian Latin Quarter and the sensuous flexibility of the East. The pretty, 17-year-old girl can boast no such romantic background, however, for she frankly admits hailing from Montana where the populace is more interested in copper and cattle than it is in the so-called Terpsichorean art.

The photograph of Thais shows her in the interesting and involved finale of the dance, which she will soon be doing for the amusement of night-clubbers and theatre-goers overseas—for she recently signed a contract to make a tour of European cities.

Miss Giroux is able to twist her torso, her arms, her legs and her neck into postures that would break the back of an ordinary person—and her "snake nest" dance is an anatomical achievement of which a professional circus contortionist might well be proud. She is confident that Europeans will like her unique style of dancing which, she admits, is really not dancing at all, but a series of acrobatic feats.

Beauty Shop for Sausages

THE strangest beauty salon in the world is operated in a wing of the National Physics Laboratory of Bushy Park, London. Its patrons are not debutantes who want their brows plucked into a graceful, arching line, or dowagers who want crows' feet massaged from the corners of their eyes. The patrons of this beauty shop are sausages and frankfurtuers of various shapes and sizes.

Manufacturers of these popular edibles have discovered that consumers buy frankfurters and sausages as much for the color of the skin that cover them as for the taste of the ground-up meat with which the skins are stuffed. And they find economical and sanitary ways to "beautify" frankfurters and sausages by giving the "hot dog" and their smaller cousins eye-attracting complexions.

The scientists in the interesting beauty salon have, after long experiments, worked out a process by which the complexions of their inanimate "subjects" can be made a healthy looking, uniform red—just that shade of red which appeals to sausage buying Britishers.

More than a year ago, American meat packers, after a painstaking survey of the country, employed scientists to work out a scheme for producing frankfurters and sausages in several shades of red which would please the keen eyes of American housewives.

Odd Facts About Bay Rum, the Only Virgin Islands' Industry Prohibition Has Not Ruined

ALTHOUGH Prohibition took away the main source of revenue of the Virgin Islanders by stopping the manufacture of the famous Ste. Croix rum, and thereby ruining the sugar industry, the taking over of the islands by the United States vastly increased, curiously enough, the sale of another rum in this country. This is the well-known Bay Rum, which is not a drink but a lotion. It is the chief industry of the island of St. Thomas. In 1917, when the United States took over the islands about 249 gallons were imported into this country. In the year 1929-30 52,000 gallons were imported here.

Bay Rum has an interesting origin. Its first use can be traced back to the days of slavery in the Virgin Islands. Slaves fresh from the African jungles and skilled in the art of "bush remedy," soon discovered the medicinal properties of the leaf of the bay tree which grows in profusion on the Virgins, and especially on the picturesque island of St. John, about three miles distant from St. Thomas.

The slaves first soaked the leaves in water and bathed their tired bodies with it when they returned from the fields. Rum, the potable variety, was plentiful in those days, and after awhile the slaves found that when the leaves were soaked in this an article was produced which was much more soothing than the Bay Water.

The first effort toward commercializing Bay Rum was made early in the Nineteenth Century, when a Mrs. French, an English woman, made an infusion of the leaves, added rum to it, strained and filtered it and offered it to the local trade as Bay Lotion. For one reason and another, the enterprise failed.

But several years later two Frenchmen, S. Marval and S. de Tascher, took up the idea. They crushed the leaves in rum, and instead of filtering it, tried distillation. So excellent a product was obtained that a local chemist, a Dane named Riise, became interested and carried on the experimentation. He found that the best results were obtained by process of double distillation. First he distilled the oil from the leaf; then he mixed the distillation with a high grade quality of rum, and distilled again. Continuing his experiments he dicovered that pure grain alcohol used instead of rum gave a finer product.

Since that time the process of manufacture has remained unchanged, except for two features. The double distilled product is now cured in oaken vats, and Prohibition has made it necessary to add a denaturant to make it unfit for drinking. This denaturant is Quinine Sulphate, which does not affect its uses for the toilet. Statistics show that prior to the American occupation of the Virgin Islands, the largest export was in 1915-16, when 32,800 gallons were disposed of. In the year 1929-30, 108,182 gallons were sold.

There are many varieties of the bay plant and they are so similar that only the experienced handler of the leaf can tell the difference. The leaf of the variety named pimenta acris is the only one that gives the true oil. In other kinds, the fragant oil is contaminated by pronounced odors of almond, lemon and anise. While the pimenta acris is found on many islands of the West Indies, the planters of St. John seem to have been most fortunate in isolating the true leaf from the others. The soil of this island appears to be particularly adapted for the growth of the pimenta acris. Little cultivation is necessary. The best propagation of the seed is done by birds, for the reason that these seeds are cleaned of their fleshy coverings in the intestinal tract, and this dried seed is not attacked by insects and thus gets its chance for proper germination.

If permitted to develop freely, the bay tree grows to a considerable size. In cultivation it is kept to about fifteen feet in diameter across the branches for ease in leaf gathering. It has large leathery leaves, white flowers and fruits that take the form of small globular berries which are favorite articles on bird menus. It reaches maturity in ten years, and thereafter yields about 100 pounds of leaves annually for sixty or seventy years.

The leaves yield 3 per cent of a volatile oil, the so-called oil of bay. A quart of oil is ordinarily obtained from 130 pounds of green leaves. But the young shoots of the tree are also distilled. The tender branches are broken off by hand, following the tradition that this is better for the tree than cutting by knife.

The gathering is done almost entirely by women and children, the children climbing the trees and throwing down the leaves and branches to the women who pack them in bags holding about seventy pounds and take them to the distilleries. Most of the distilling is done in St. Thomas by firms who buy their alcohol and rum from Porto Rico, St. Croix, Demarara and other West Indian centres.

No Need of the Absurd Antics of Orchestra Leaders

They Never Do the Acrobatic Monkey Shines in the Bandroom When Nobody Is Looking and Their Highly Skilled Musicians, All Thoroughly Rehearsed, Know Perfectly Well When to Play Loud or Soft

Leopold Stokowski.

From "The Prince of Wales and Other Famous Americans," By M. Covarrubias. By Permission of Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., Publishers.

Mengelberg, the Famous Leader of the Concertgebouw Orchestra of Amsterdam, and His Famous "Rats' Nest" of Hair, Which Everybody Watches While He Goes Through His Gymnastics.

Sir Henry Wood, the Spectacular British Leader. From Caricature by Autori, the Italian Cartoonist.

THE recent comment by Richard Strauss, the well-known musical composer and director, that the antics of the spectacular, modern orchestra leader are not only stage play and unnecessary but a poor compliment to the members of his orchestra, has let a large-sized cat out of the bag.

It revealed to the general public something that every competent orchestra musician has known for many years, that all these showy acrobatics do not assist him in producing the music which is supposed to be the main reason for the concert any more than does the director's long hair.

But the public has never been let into the secret. The orchestra leader is set up on a high chair or a platform where the audience can see him and everybody stares at him open-mouthed and spellbound. Nobody doubts the tremendous importance of those acrobatic gyrations as he beats the air with his baton, strains his body over in one direction as he points at the violins, and then dramatically holds up a warning hand to modulate the base viols and drums, then sinks back into a sort of semi-conscious condition, waving, perhaps, only the ends of his fingers, to gradually work up a huge fervor of wild enthusiasm as if he was whipping the reluctant orchestra into greater and greater volume of noise, until it collapses with a bang at the end of the torrent of music. Nobody doubts that every attitude and motion is vitally necessary, and that without this superman on the raised pedestal—well, nobody knows what an awful mess and mix-up that thirty or forty or fifty or ninety-five men would get into.

One would think they were a lot of musical Bolsheviks held in order only by this one musical dictator, who sinks down perspiring and exhausted at the end of his victorious struggle. The joke is that when these same men are rehearsed in the privacy of the band room their leader does none of these gymnastics until they are all set, and only then, when it won't upset his musicians does he rehearse his own part of the show.

Not knowing this, the audience is convinced that if this genius with the baton didn't toss his fevered brow in the air and flash that appealing look, the kettle-drums would not come in when they should, and if it were not for that splendid lion-like shake of the long-haired head and the commanding gesture, like a traffic policeman preventing a charging truck from crushing a fallen child, they would keep right on and ruin the piece.

Signor Toscanini Smashed His Baton on the Head of a Careless Musician Who, He Thought, Was Playing a Little Flat, and the Italian Courts Decided That This Burst of Temperament Was Within His Artistic License. In This Instance the Leader's Acrobatic Feat Probably Really Accomplished Something in Correcting a Careless Musician.

In a recent editorial comment on the Strauss statement it was asked:

"Don't they really know when to play loudly or softly or when to come in?"

As a matter of fact, they know perfectly well and it is all written down for them on the music sheets in front of their faces. Anyone who didn't know that much would hardly belong to a first-class orchestra. Probably only a band of amateurs would be helped by these cheer-leader, jumping-jack tactics.

Why then all this unnecessary fury?

It is for the benefit of the audience and no great compliment to that either. A concert, apparently, must be "circussed" nowadays. It is not enough that the musicians do their part, that the music be perfect; the audience must think it very difficult, like a trapeze or strong man act, in which the performer makes it seem almost beyond his powers by deliberately falling once or twice first.

If all the musicians could be seen to wrestle with their instruments and, at the end, fall in a faint, that would be perfect.

But this would be too much to expect. Musicians are not actors and, even if they were, it requires all their attention to produce the music sitting quietly in their chairs. The acting, therefore, must be done by some unessential individual and it now appears that the modern conductor is that person. As musicians are supposed to be of a nervous temperment the wonder is that such a wild man, raving in their midst, does not rattle them.

That the leader is, in fact, unessential has been proved by the success of leaderless orchestras, but these also proved that for very large ones the leader does perform a certain service, though not by his gyrations. In a small orchestra every member can hear the others and know just when to come in, but in the biggest ones they sometimes cannot, and therefore the rhythm of the leaderless organization is occasionally ragged.

As has been pointed out, a trumpeter sitting far over on the right of the stage, with three trombones and a lot of drums behind him, has difficulty in hearing the first violins, some 30 feet away. At any time he may need a cue from someone in the centre of things, but the lifting of a finger is enough. The music does not have to be jerked out of him by force. Nor does he require what looks like a threat of violence in order to stop at the right time. A hint would be sufficient.

In rehearsals, too, the leader serves a useful purpose, for one mind and one ear must coordinate all the players. There are stories of dynamic conductors who have taken over an orchestra and, without a rehearsal, by their fiery genius played on them as on the keys of an organ, and hypnotized them into producing superlative results. This any orchestra musician knows is pure fiction. The best they could do in such a case would be to let the new man hypnotize the audience and disturb the musicians as little as possible.

That focussing the attention of the audience on the contortions of the conductor, instead of the work of men he is supposed to be leading, is not the right idea is backed by the methods of great leaders of the past, who gave their signals as unobtrusively as possible and tried to have the great musical organization seem to be running smoothly of itself.

Until the end of the last century the orchestra conductor usually did little more than give time signals and was not a highly paid or featured performer. Also there was little pretense on his part of interpretation. In those days the feature was some eminent solist who gave the interviews, received the advertising and brought the crowds. How insignificant leaders were at that time, and how it astonished the players when the public began to give the time-beaters credit for results, is shown by the remarks of Pablo Sarasate, some 30 years ago. This violinist is recorded as having said:

"What do you think! They don't play at all. They just go around with a little stick and wave it over the orchestra and they get paid for it. The public seems to be getting the impression that these fellows actually make us musicians play."

Even now orchestras occasionally let a conductor realize how little value they set on his efforts. Erich Kleiber, of the Berlin Staats Opera and well-known in the United States, says that once when he appeared to rehearse an orchestra, as guest conductor, one of its players stepped forward as spokesman with a suggestion. He stated that the orchestra knew its business and therefore there would be no need of rehearsals just for the benefit of the conductor. The intimation was that they were so well-trained that anything he might do at the performance would not bother them at all. But Kleiber insisted.

That a director can do almost anything, no matter how startling and unexpected, and rely upon his musicians carrying on, is revealed by the curious accidents which befell Sir Thomas Beecham, the celebrated English conductor. At Philadelphia, in his antics on the platform, he managed to sprain an ankle, which cramped his activities because he had to stand still and carry his weight on one foot, and in later performances he kept the injured one on a pillow, but the concerts were a great success. In New York, conducting the Philharmonic, he suffered another casualty. So furious were his exertions in wrenching the music from the musicians that his suspenders broke under the strain and he almost lost his trousers.

This was even worse than a sprained ankle, because it kept both legs together and most of the time one hand in a trousers pocket. In emergencies, when he felt it necessary to wave both hands, this gesture was instantly followed by a frantic clutch at his waist. In spite of these cruel handicaps, the audience cheered. It was his greatest American triumph. Sir Henry Wood is an equally sensational British conductor, but wears stronger suspenders.

When a temperamental conductor shakes a clenched fist at the musicians on the percussion instruments, it may not be an idle threat. If they defied him and kept on, it is not impossible that he would run over and "sock" one of them. Such things have happened. The great Toscanini hit an offending violinist over the head with his baton. The violinist saw the blow coming and tried to ward it off with his bow. But the bow broke and the blow landed. Worse than that, a splinter injured the fiddler's eye and he brought suit for damages.

A psychologist testified that to such a temperamental artist as Toscanini hearing a violinist play flat was enough to unseat his reason for the moment. He would be filled with a blind impulse to silence the offender in the quickest possible manner and therefore must not be held accountable.

Had it been the case of a boss and a working man, this theory might not have impressed the court. But it happened in Italy before a judge and jury of musicians. It would be difficult to get ten native Italians who are not musical experts, and their faces hardened when they heard that the injured man had played flat. For such a crime they thought the conductor might well have hit him with a base viol. Toscanini directs without a score, entirely from memory.

Mascagni was one of the first to reap financial benefits by putting personality and showmanship into directing. Others were quick to follow. Walter Kramer, editor of Musical America and composer of more than one hundred musical compositions, agrees with Mr. Strauss' criticism of acrobatic conductors.

"I believe," says Mr. Kramer, "that symphonic conducting should not include showmanship. The exaggerated gestures of the cavorting conductor are an insult to the able musicians in the orchestra and to those members of the audience who know their music. The conductor who cuts up violent capers in the directing of a Brahms symphony or a Strauss symphonic poem cheapens the music, gets in the way of the music, and instead of becoming an interpreter of melodic beauty descends to the status of an exhibitionistic prima donna.

"Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, is the outstanding showman among conductors in this country. He is widely known for his unorthodox methods, particularly his precipitate entrance from the wings to the conductor's platform and the suddenness with which he launches the music. Before he gets both feet on the stand his baton has swung down, the lights in the auditorium are dimmed and the concert is in full swing.

"Stokowski undoubtedly is a talented conductor, but many of his original methods of staging a concert are done to impress the audience. They do not increase the respect and cooperation of the musicians working under his baton.

"When Willem Mengelberg arrived in this country to conduct the famous New York Symphony—I think it was the season of 1920-1921—he indulged in many extraordinary gestures, some of which were dramatic to certain members of the audience, but annoying to the orchestra and to music-lovers familiar with the works of masters. Violent gestures are never necessary to the effective rendition of a musical composition. Later on, Mengelberg abandoned many of his more hyperbolic gestures—particularly the vigorous shaking of one clenched fist."

Walter Damrosch, dean of American orchestra conductors, who for forty years directed the New York Symphony, does not care much for these "orchestra fighters" either. He says:

"A good conductor will use only such movements as are necessary to the interpretation of the music, and the antics of certain conductors are performed largely to impress a shallow audience."

New Lace Evening Gowns

Authoritative and Newest Fashions From the Studios of the Most Distinguished French Dress Creators, Drawn by Soulie, Foremost Fashion Artist of Paris

A Gown of Geranium-Red Lace, by Blanche Lebouvier, Has a Double Skirt With an Uneven Frill That Is Much Longer on One Side Than on the Other. The Bodice Is Simple, With a Rounded Neckline. Over This Is Worn a Short Coat of Geranium-Red Broderie Anglaise, or Eyelet Embroidery, Done on Batiste and Mounted on Geranium-Red Chiffon. The Coat Is Fitted at the Waist and Is Bordered With Red Fox Around the Hem and Running Up to the Waist on One Side. Deep Cuffs of the Same Fur Finish the Sleeves, but There Is No Collar.

This Evening Dress by Worth Is in a Pretty Shade of Green, Slightly Greyed, Like Mint Leaves. The Decollete Is Very Original. A Band Across the Shoulders Is Slightly Beaded With Steel Beads and Is Cut Out Below. The Steel Beading Runs Right Around the Cut-Out Section. Below There Is a Little Peplum of Petals of the Lace. The Hips Are Smoothly Fitted and a Deep Flounce Is Added With a Scalloped Line. The Gown Is Slipper-Heel Length.

This Yveline Tassel Model Is in That Combination of Chiffon and Lace Which Is One of the Successes of the Season. White Chiffon Plaited Rather Finely and White Lace of a Rather Heavy Variety Are the Materials Chosen. The Lace Is Used on the Bodice Like a Little Bolero. On the Skirt It Runs Up in Deep Points Between the Plaited Chiffon Sections. A Belt, Set High, Is of Tango-Colored Grosgrain Ribbon With a Buckle of Matching Galalith. Tango-Colored Slippers Are Worn With the Gown.

This Redfern Gown of Many Uses Is in Black Chantilly Lace Mounted Over Black Satin. The Bodice Is Decorated With Double Frills, Which Are Plaited. They Are Arranged to Leave the Shoulders Bare and Follow the Oval Line of the Decollete in the Back. The Hips Are Fitted and Below the Plaited Frills Are Set in Points. There Are Five Rows of Them, the Lowest One Being Slightly Wider Than the Others.

PARIS, May 27.

FORTUNATE are those who are contemplating Summer travel, visiting new countries, or renewing their acquaintance with old friends. It is safe to say that the woman of the party will spend a great deal of time on choosing a wardrobe, whether it be bought for the occasion or an adaptation of costumes already in wear combined with some new ones.

The kind of trip naturally determines the sort of clothes chosen for it; but for the general traveler a suit with a top coat for the actual journey, some silk frocks, an extra coat a bit more "towney," and at least one well-selected evening ensemble is usually considered a minimum.

For the evening gown I cannot do better than advise lace for its many qualities. First, you do not tire of it, so you may resign yourself to appearing in it frequently; secondly, it packs well, and shakes out on arrival without the necessity of pressing; thirdly, it is not fragile, if you choose a medium weight, and can be worn many times without looking shabby. There is even a fourthly, if you are not tired of this enumeration, which is that lace adapts itself to different occasions, so that there is little danger of appearing either underdressed or overdressed in it.

The question of color for a gown that is to be depended upon for so much service is an important one. Probably one is safer in black than in anything else, and black lace can be varied with colored accessories, so that it turns into quite a protean garment. However, for those who prefer a color, the dark blues, midnight or sapphire, give as good general service as black itself.

For certain women brown is a distinguished evening color, but brown, after dark, is always an informal color; there is nothing "gala" about it. If green is becoming to you, there are good greens, darkish but on the bright side, which are practical and look well. I do not advise any shade of red for a gown that must be worn often, as one soon tires of it.

If you prefer a light shade, you must run the risk of having to send it en route to the cleaner's. In almost every Paris collection this Spring, there are at least one pale beige evening gown, either a yellow or a rose shade. This is a good choice for the traveler, and to be preferred to the other pale colors, blue, green or pink, because it is less marked and so can safely appear more frequently.

On this page there are four lace evening gowns, any one of which would be suitable for a traveler's wardrobe. The one by Worth, originally in a pretty green shade, slightly greyed like mint leaves, has one of those original decolletes with which the Parisian dressmaker loves to experiment. A band across the shoulders is cut out below, leaving a U shaped space. This space may be covered, for more informal wear, by a capelet or fichu drape, either of the same lace or of georgette or chiffon in a matching shade.

Redfern's black lacy frills are pretty enough to wear to any evening event. This frock sketched is particularly good for dancing, as it looks charming on the floor. It might be adapted to many different occasions by the use of those life-saving jackets, capelets or fichus which the mode loves at present, and which are a splendid resource for the traveler. One night one might wear it as it is; on the next one might add the little frilled fichu of rose-colored faille, tied in the front, with which this gown is shown in Redfern's salons. On another evening a cape of coral red or turquoise blue chiffon velvet might be added, with costume jewelry of the same color. You see the endless possibilities.

Yveline Tassel is a new house which showed its first collection last Spring. The model on this page is in that combination of lace and chiffon which is found in every Parisian collection. It gives a very light Summery effect and is almost as useful as an all lace gown. Here it is shown with a tango colored belt.

Blanche Lebouvier has made use of one of the Summer's favorite materials in making the coat that accompanies her red lace gown of broderie anglaise, or eyelet embroidery. Gowns, jackets and sections of dresses are all seen in this material this year, and wide brimmed hats are also being made of it.

The wrap that accompanies the traveler's gown must be chosen to go with it. I think perhaps, for variable climates encountered during the voyage, a three-quarter length is the most generally useful, affording as it does a little more protection than the useful and pretty short jacket for evening wear. A good quality of velvet that does not crush or a rather heavy satin might be chosen for it.

Both of these materials will inevitably show creases when they have been packed in a confined space. The trick that all old travelers know is to unpack them at once on arrival, hang them in the bathroom, turn on the hot water, and let the wrinkles steam slowly out. By the time the garment has cooled off again it should look as if it had just come from the cleaner.

Extraordinary Exploits of "Idiot Geniuses"

Dr. Critchley Gives Examples of Insane Asylum Patients With a "One-Track Mind," Who Can Recite Every Hymn in the Hymn Book, Can Give Every Date for 1,000 Years, Beat Any College Professor in Mathematics But Are Helpless Imbeciles in Everything Else

In Earlier Days Lunatic Asylum Patients, If Regarded as Dangerous, Were Thrown Into a "Crib," the Lid Shut and Padlocked and the Victim Left to Exhaust Herself in Her Helpless Rage.

The 12,000,000,000 Brain Cells, All Connected Up With Nerves, Have Been Compared to the Inside, Interconnected Wiring of a Giant Automatic Telephone Switchboard. If a "Short Circuit" Occurs, Throwing All the Current in a Certain Direction, the Remaining Portion of the Switchboard Goes "Dead." Roughly Speaking, the Same Sort of Thing May Occur in the Human Brain, Producing the "One-Track Mind" and Shutting Off All the Rest of the Brain Cells Except Along the Path Which Is Still in Working Order.

Sir Isaac Newton, the Great Mathematician and Scientific Genius, Was "Absent-Minded" and Suffered From Delusions of Persecution. In This Picture Newton Is Shown Experimenting With Sunlight Through a Prism.

In a German Lunatic Asylum Was a Patient Who Was Able to Remember Every Card That Had Been Played and the Player Who Played It. This Uncanny Ability Made the Patient Unpopular and Finally the Other Patients Refused to Play With Him.

The Late President Wilson Announced That He Had a "One-Track Mind." But Mr. Wilson Did Not Understand What a Completely One-Track Mind Signified. He Meant That He Could Concentrate Only on One Thing at a Time.

Michael Inik, an Illinois Lunatic, Was an Example of the Dangerous "One-Track Mind." In a Suit Made of Stovepipe and Newspapers, Which He Thought Made Him Bulletproof, He Loaded Himself With Weapons, Started Forth and Shot a Judge, a Policeman and a Juryman.

NOTHING is more interesting and yet more baffling to science than the human mind—the processes and methods of the brain. And as the physiologists learn much about the mechanism of other parts of the human machine when illness or disease throws the machinery out of order, so the working of the human brain can, in some respects, be better understood by study of diseased brains.

And thus it is that Dr. Macdonald Critchley in a recent report from King's College Hospital, London, sets forth some very interesting studies of the insane. Examining especially a number of "idiot geniuses," individuals who combine mental brilliance in some one direction with dullness or even hopeless insanity in other directions, Dr. Critchley is able to suggest an explanation of these strange genius-lunatics as examples of a completely "one-track mind." Lacking in other ideas or interests, it appears that the human brain is able to develop to an extraordinary degree along the only track in which the mind can run.

The late President Wilson announced that he had a "one-track mind," but he did not understand the pathological significance of a completely one-track mind. Dr. Critchley, however, recites case after case of patients under his observation who exhibit intellectual qualities almost beyond belief, and yet these mental supermen are actual imbeciles.

One of this insanity expert's most remarkable cases is that of a congenital imbecile who spent most of his life in the Leavesden Mental Hospital in England. This man belonged to the "microcephalic" or small-headed type of idiot. He was entirely unable to read or write or to learn these arts. It was impossible, the doctor reports, for him to keep his attention on any subject for more than a very few moments. Even the simplest mathematical calculations like the addition of two and two to make four were beyond this unfortunate individual's mental abilities.

Nevertheless, this man possessed a most remarkable memory. Over a period of many years while he had been a resident in the insane asylum he was able to give the date of arrival or departure of all of the physicians, attendants, and other persons connected with the asylum. Also, he apparently had committed to memory the complete hymn book of the English Church. If given the number of a hymn he would respond immediately with the first line and usually with the text of the entire hymn.

Dr. Critchley reports another patient who is a hopeless imbecile and yet extraordinarily clever at memorizing anything. He is able to repeat the results of all the local cricket games, the scores of each batsman, the bowling averages and similar data with regard to the chief English sport. American observers will be reminded of the existence of many individuals in the United States who have stored away in their memories literally books full of such detailed data concerning the standings and scores of baseball teams, baseball games and individual players, although many of these real experts on baseball statistics are people of very little competence or success in ordinary matters of everyday life, even if they are not victims of actual insanity.

This patient familiar with the cricket scores also is characterized by the remarkable memory for hymns. He is able to respond to any hymn number, instantly and accurately, with the first line of the hymn. One of his habits gives, also, an important clue to the nature of the minds of these idiot geniuses. "The patient is extremely proud," Dr. Critchley states, "of his accomplishment and spends the greater part of each church service in the close study of the hymn book." As all of the data on such cases indicates, the chief reason for the remarkable memories which these individuals possess apparently is their concentration of all mental effort and interest in the one direction; the extreme development of the one-track mind.

A special class of the idiot geniuses is represented, he believes, by a third one of his patients whose specialty is the remembering of dates. Like others of the group, this man, now twenty-six years old, has been from birth a hopeless idiot of the so-called "hydrocephalic" type, having the abnormal condition called water on the brain. This man is extremely childish and is continually laughing to himself in a vacuous fashion. One-half of his body is completely paralyzed. The opposite arm and leg are weak and tremble constantly. Because of the brain disease, his head is greatly enlarged. His speech is imperfect and difficult to understand. He suffers occasionally from epileptic fits. It is difficult to see how any person could be more definitely and clearly idiotic than the doctor's description of this case implies.

Nevertheless, this pitiful imbecile has a most astonishing memory for dates. He remembers the exact date of any minor incident in the ward of the insane asylum where he lives, such as the arrival or departure of attendants, the deaths of other patients, the making of minor physical examinations, blood tests, and so on. In addition, he is a walking perpetual calendar, able to name correctly the day of the week for any given date of month and year over thousands of years. Again, if told that a particular date, like the first of June, falls on a Monday, he will state instantly the years since the birth of Christ in which this is a possibility.

A case of similar extraordinary memory is reported from a German lunatic asylum, where a patient was able to remember every card that had been played and the player who played it. This uncanny ability made the patient unpopular and finally the other patients refused to play with him. It has been remarked that the really great bridge players are usually not good at anything else—they have forms of one-track minds. Indeed, some of the world's great men have had this mental peculiarity which allowed them to focus their thoughts on a subject with concentration undisturbed by other thoughts going on in their heads. They were called "absent minded." Sir Isaac Newton, the great mathematical and scientific genius, was absent minded and suffered from the delusion of persecution.

Of course, not all one-track minds are safe to be trusted or busy themselves with harmless things like hymns, the dates of Easter Sunday, or the cards that have been played in the game. Michael Inik, an Illinois lunatic, is an example of a dangerous one-track mind. He built himself a helmet and boots of stovepipe, and a suit made out of newspapers which he believed were bullet proof. Then equipping himself with knives, hammers, hatchets and pistols, he started forth and shot a judge, a policeman and a juryman.

Not all of the idiot geniuses are characterized by exceptional memory only. One of the cases described by Dr. Critchley, although a blind imbecile with virtually no mental ability of ordinary kinds, possessed, he reports, the very rare and remarkable characteristic which musicians call "absolute pitch." Like the other infrequent individuals who have this ability, this idiot blind boy could recognize and name instantly any of the notes of the piano keyboard. What is still more remarkable, he could identify instantly the individual notes in a chord of ten notes all struck at the same time.

"On one occasion," Dr. Critchley reports, "the organ in the institution chapel went out of order so that when a particular stop was pulled out several notes sounded together. No one except the patient was able to identify the notes which were concerned."

Another example of unusual ability in a lunatic, this time a physical ability, is the famous "cat lunatic" named Richter, who has given much trouble to the police of the city of Berlin. On one recent occasion this individual escaped from the insane asylum where he is confined, climbed the front of a house on one of the city's busy streets, frightened a woman occupant almost out of her wits, locked himself in, took a bath, ate half a cake of soap, put on an overcoat and some gloves which he found in the flat, and reappeared at a front window with a family portrait, which he promptly threw out to the crowd in the street below.

Pursued by firemen and police with ladders, the lunatic climbed out again onto the front of the house and proceeded upward to the roof. On being finally captured and taken to the police station he climbed straight up the bare wall of the police room and finished, when locked in a cell, by climbing twelve feet up a wall so that he could recite nursery rhymes through the grilled window to passersby on the street outside. He stated to the police that he was really Prince Joachim of Prussia in disguise, but was presently identified as the escaped lunatic which he really was. Even then, the authorities were not through with him, for on his return to the asylum he escaped from the attendant, climbed straight up the high wall of the institution and again obtained his freedom, finally to be captured and safely locked up on the following day.

There are numerous individuals of unusual athletic abilities who have more or less prowess in wall climbing and who make their livings, for example, by giving exhibitions as "human flies." None of them has equalled, however, the remarkable exploits of this Berlin lunatic whose mind otherwise is completely twisted.

Another case which came under Dr. Critchley's observation was that of an imbecile child, clumsy with his hands, unable to learn, indistinct in speech and otherwise clearly of idiot type. This boy, who now is fifteen years old, possesses a more intimate knowledge of one of the chief English railway systems, the Southern Railway, than is possessed, it is probable, by any employe of the system itself. He knows all of the stations on this system in correct order, the area which each station serves, the exact routes between stations, the portions of the railway which have been electrified, the shortest itineraries between stations, the times at which trains leave and arrive, the similar times at junction points and the like.

Other extraordinary examples of special skills or memories include an individual named Buxton, who was able to describe, with full names and dates, every occasion on which anyone had bought him free beer since he was twelve years old. Still another imbecile had so delicate a sense of touch that he could split a newspaper page into two thin and equal layers. An imbecile girl of twenty-two was able to repeat correctly the dates and circumstances of every visit paid or received by her family over many years. Another patient knew by heart the date of every Easter from 1000 A. D. to 2000 A. D., as well as the name of every patron saint for each day in the year.

One of the most remarkable cases of lunatic geniuses ever described is that of the French "calculating idiot" named Fleury. This individual was blind, completely idiot in mentality, uncontrollable and destructive. He was afflicted, also, with continual muscular tremors. Nevertheless, he learned to perform the most remarkable calculating feats, such, for example, as extracting mentally in thirteen seconds the cube root of the number 465,484,375. He multiplied successfully in his mind 287 by 341 in ten seconds. Despite this arithmetical ability this individual was incapable of grasping even the rudiments of geometry.

One observation made on this patient is especially significant. When performing his mental calculation, it is reported, Fleury was observed to work his fingers rapidly. Apparently he had perfected a calculation method in which the fingers represented digits, tens, hundreds or other units, so that his hands became virtually a calculating machine, like the numerous mechanical calculators which have been devised. Joined to this must have been an exceptional memory in which the results of these finger calculations were recorded, step by step, as they were made.

It is this unusual ability to store up memories of some single, definite kind which explains the power of these idiot geniusus and also their relations to the more normal examples of one-track minds, Dr. Critchley suggests. Apparently the human memory is limited in the amount of material which it can contain. Ordinary individuals have a large number of different interests. In connection with these they store up in their memories a very large number of facts of many different kinds; some facts about friends and relatives, other facts representing history or English literature or other items of ordinary education, still other facts dealing with hobbies by which the individual is attracted and a large number of additional facts which constitute competence in some single trade or business.

The very fact of the number and diversity of such interests and memories prevents any one of these interests becoming supreme. With many, varied things stored in one's mind, one is perhaps a well-rounded, generally competent individual, but neither an idiot nor a genius. What happens to the imbeciles and idiots which have been described is that their mental outlook is limited to one particular thing: to dates or hymn numbers or the stations on a railway system or the ability to climb walls. Nothing else distracts the attention of such persons. Nothing else limits the storage of memories, as memory storage in ordinary individuals is limited by the numerous and diverse memories already stored.

So it is, Dr. Critchley believes, that these idiot geniuses develop minds which run on one track, not only for the moment or usually, but always and inescapably. The mere fact that no other part of the mind works at all sets free all of the mind's energy, great or small as it may be, to operate along this one groove and in this one direction.

The Mystery of Perfumes

Curious New Facts Revealed by Recent Scientific Research, Even the "Odor of Sanctity" Is Recognized, Analyzed and Explained, but Many Other Peculiar Things Are Not Yet Understood

Louis XIV., Who Had a Great Love for Perfumes and Was Described by Fournier As "The Sweetest-Smelling Monarch That I Had Ever Seen."

PERFUME and its effects have always been something of a mystery to man, and even to woman, who has tested its powers and dangers more thoroughly.

The dictionary says that perfume is a pleasant smell, but what is pleasant to one nose often is unpleasant to another. Just the right scent can and often does fascinate a man and draw him irresistibly to the woman who uses it. But it is an uncertain charm and may drive away the very man at whom it is aimed.

In the study of perfumes by scientists, it has been found that two very different branches of science are interwoven. While the chemist is able to analyze and counterfeit most perfumes, yet it requires the psychologist to interpret why some odors attract and others repel human beings, why some kinds of perfume are chiefly popular with women, and yet others are the ones men prefer; and why a given odor may be welcomed by one individual, yet the same perfume will disgust and annoy another.

Nature is the original perfume maker, but even she does not please all noses by any means. Though most all men and women would agree that the fragrance from a field of flowers is delightful, the much keener-nosed dog is not interested unless the field by chance contains a plant known scientifically as Chenopodium Olidum. In that case the dog will go into raptures, inhaling its scent and proving his appreciation by rolling in it. How little man agrees with the canine opinion of that particular perfume is shown by the plant's common name, which is "stinking goosefoot."

Why a mere smell in the air should upset a man's judgment as to the desirability of a woman is explained by the evolution of the human brain. The part of the brain where cold, clear thinking is done is the cerebral cortex. This is the part that resists temptations, that weighs consequences and warns a man to go slowly. When he gazes into lovely eyes that have a come-hither look, this is the part that reminds him of the high cost of living, alimony and other responsibilities of marriage, prompting him to get his hat and go before he gets vamped.

Fortunately for romance, it happens that this icy guardian and bane of all vamps has one weakness. It can be stampeded by messages from the nose. The cerebral cortex was evolved in prehuman ancestors, where it worked for millions of years as it does now in the lower animals. There it is not used for deliberation, but for making instantaneous decisions such as whether to advance or flee.

An animal emerging from cover raises quivering nostrils and sniffs. If his nose tells him that man or some other dangerous creature is near, he is off into his hiding place like a flash. If his nose says that something good to eat is close by, he instantly starts forward to investigate and capture it. The animal cortex does not stop and analyze; it acts with a swift and overpowering impulse. Though the human cortex has evolved into a thinking organ, it has not lost its ancient traits and can still be stampeded by smells. For that very purpose millions of dollars' worth of perfumes are used every year, sometimes with unexpected results. Women are almost though not quite as susceptible to nose appeal as men.

Wild animals seem to be born with educated noses which tell them, at the first whiff, which way to jump. Man inherits a few, but, for the most part, his nose is educated or, as the behaviorists say, "conditioned" by experience. People not only get used to bad odors but come to like them. For instance, Roquefort is one of the most popular cheeses, but try to get a young child to taste it after it has had a smell of it.

Odors that are universally considered disgusting may, through association, bring sweetly romantic thoughts. Few families would care to rent a residence next door to a glue factory, but there are men who admit that its odor throws them into a state of romantic sentiment. A man who had loved and lost a girl who worked with him in a factory where fish-glue was manufactured left his job because the odor of decaying fish brought the picture of his lost love to his mind. Whenever he passed one of those high-smelling places he became sad and love-sick. It is quite likely that any girl desiring to win him would have done well to have gotten a job in a glue factory and vamped him while the perfume of stale fish was still fresh in her hair and clothes.

In spite of the fact that men do a certain amount of fussing and criticising of women's perfumes, all women are convinced that all men are sentimentalists, and science thinks this is true. Most of the criticism comes from married men, perhaps because they are not sure that this bait is entirely for their benefit. The uncertain art of luring by perfume can never be turned into an exact science, probably, because it is hard to know which one will attract any particular man.

Many women think that they should use an individual perfume that fits their personality just as a certain color blends with their eyes or hair. This is as much a mistake as for a fisherman to use only one fly that matches his whiskers. The only preferences to be considered are those of the fish or the man to be caught.

If a man happens to be a perfume-user, it will not avail a woman much to adopt the same one for herself. Though she may be sure it will not repel him, it won't attract him either. The perfume that will intoxicate a man is never the one he uses. Suppose the odor of violets happens to be the one that dethrones his reason agreeably, it is probably because it brings up thrilling memories of his first love or perhaps unconscious memories of his childhood. For some reason, possibly because it may seem like sacrilege, he will not scent himself with it.

Dr. C. J. S. Thompson, in his recent book, "The Mystery and Lure of Perfume," published by the Bodley Head, London, has gone into all that is known on the subject and shows the powerful influence of perfumes from the earliest times. Eden was a garden, full of flowers, and not till Adam and Eve got dispossessed were they supposed to have known any sort of a bad smell. The first recipe for perfume, Dr. Thompson finds in the Bible, the book of Exodus, Chapter xxx, verse 34:

"And the Lord said unto Moses, Take unto thee sweet spices, stacte and onycha, and galbanum; these sweet spices with pure frankincense; of each there shall be a like weight; and thou shalt make it a perfume, a confection after the art of the apothecary, tempered together, pure and holy; and thou shalt beat some of it very small . . ."

This was not to be used for vamping purposes but was holy, like incense in the churches. However, the Phoenicians, Egyptians, Greeks and other trading ancients did a big business in fragrant gums, spices and oils that were for private use. Oil of lily was prized in ancient Egypt and exported to other parts of the world. The fragrance of the perfume buried with Tutankhamen still lingered in his tomb after 3,000 years.

Queen Hatshepsu of Egypt, 1600 B. C., sent five ships to get plenty of her favorite myrrh. The Arabs were the first to perfect distilling of the volatile oils of flowers. Attar of roses became the popular Turkish perfume because roses were supposed to have sprung up where Mohammed's sweat fell on the earth.

Cleopatra, vamp that she was, went in for perfume on a grand scale. She is reported to have used mostly spices dissolved in water. Even the decks and sails of her ships were so impregnated that it was said to have been a pleasure to pass even a mile to leeward of them. Did Cleopatra's spies find out in advance what sweet odors would make Antony and even the calculating Caesar forget themselves? If so she kept that secret.

Shakespeare said that the ones he liked were violet, rose and lily, but none of those may have been the one that would have led him to the altar again or the divorce court. The scent that is said to have vamped King Henry VIII is made as follows:

"Take six spoonfuls of rose-water, six spoonfuls and a quarter of an ounce of fine sugar. Mix and add two grains of musk and one ounce of ambergris. Boil softly together for five or six hours and strain."

Queen Elizabeth's was composed of musk, damask water and sugar. One of Napoleon's bills contained an item of 162 bottles of Eau de Cologne and another one had four cases of it. But that was for himself. The odor that vamped him was musk used by the Empress Josephine and yet he often made a husbandly complaint against it. The late Czarina of Russia who could twist her husband around her finger, employed Essence of Chypre, but it failed to vamp the Bolsheviks when they decided to murder her. In Athens they went so far as to have a special perfume for each part of the body. Socrates protested:

"No man is ever anointed with perfume for the sake of men and, as to women, how can they want perfume in their husbands when they themselves are redolent of it?"

In 1770, the following bill was solemnly introduced in Parliament:

"That all women, of whatever rank, profession or degree, whether virgins, maids or widows, that shall from and after such Act, impose upon, seduce and betray into matrimony, any of His Majesty's subjects by the scents, paints, cosmetics, artificial teeth, false hair, Spanish wool, iron stays, hoops, high-heeled shoes and bolstered hips, shall incur the penalty of the law now in force against witchcraft and like misdemeanors and that the marriage, upon conviction, shall be null and void."

This bill to protect bachelors, however, failed to pass, with the result that they have been getting married in England ever since.

Some perfumes, Dr. Thompson finds, are so repulsive to certain men as to cause headaches and even nausea. Many hay fever sufferers wish the use of perfume were a state's prison offense. Even agreeable ones can be harmful. A French journal recently recorded the case of a young woman who saturated her linen, clothing and even her apartment with patchouli. "Loss of appetite, depression and insomnia fallowed and, in the end, she became a victim of neurasthenia."

"There is a curious difference," the author finds, "between the odors preferred by men and women. Women, as a rule, show a distinct liking for perfumes in which mint, citronella, rose, violet and softer odors are combined; while men have a preference for musk, lavender, cedar, sandal or perfumes in which they take part."

Dogs undoubtedly know their master's personal odor and when he is sick or nervously distraught enough to change that odor, the animal recognizes that something is wrong. In the middle ages it was frequently recorded that a saintly person died "in the odor of sanctity." This seems to have been no mere figure of speech but a reality. St. Polycarp was specially mentioned as smelling sweet at his death.

Quoting an American physician, Dr. Thompson says that the "odor of sanctity" has a neuropathic explanation. The physician declared that the odor may have been due to disease or emitted during conditions of hysterical excitement and religious exaltation. He instanced that persons suffering from suppurative conditions, emitted an aromatic odor like strawberries which was produced by the invasion of the pus by the bacillus pyogenes and that when turpentine had been administerd they diffused an odor of violets.

"The odor of sanctity," Dr. George Dumas, of Paris, states, "has been compared to the perfume of the lily, the rose, the violet and the pineapple."

St. Theresa's "odor of sanctity" he lays to diabetic acetonaemia because the breath of diabetics is well-known to have a peculiar sweet smell.

Considering that the human nostrils are assaulted by so many smells, it is a mercy that the nerves of that sense tire easily. In hunting a smell it is always well to remember that, "The first sniff is the best sniff."

As Kipling has written:

"Smells are surer than sounds or sights to make your heart-strings crack."

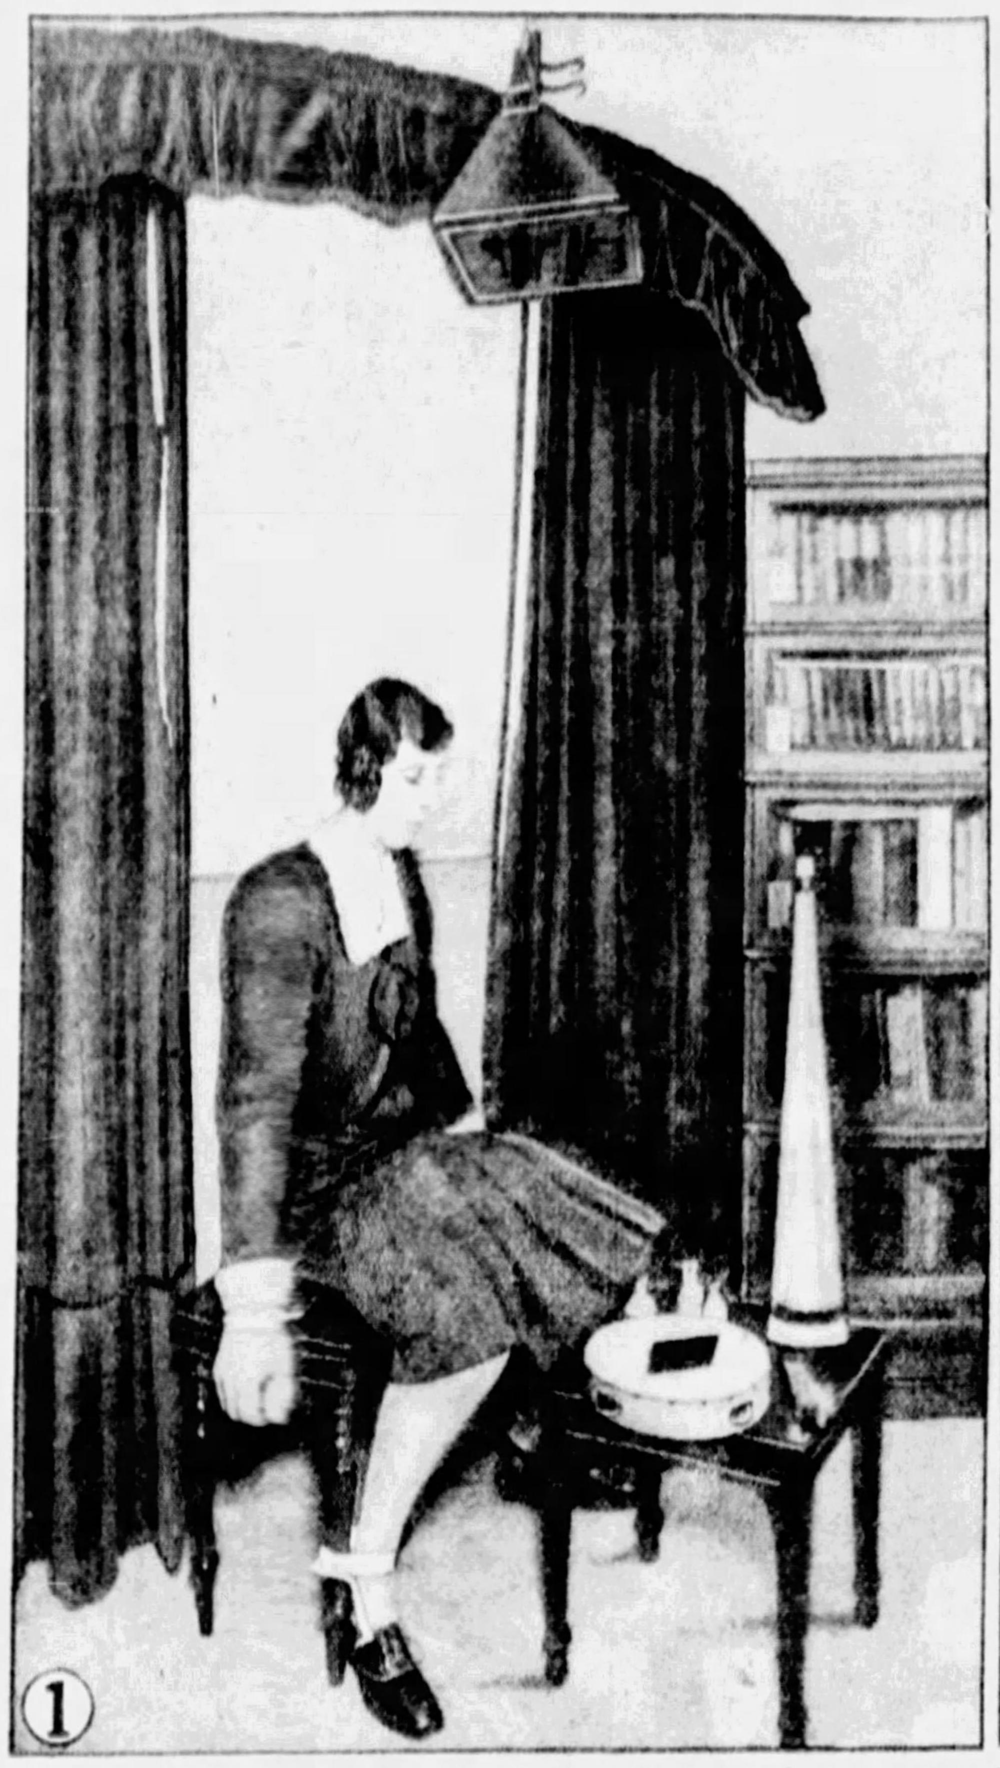
Bogus "Spirit Mediums" Tell How They Fooled Conan Doyle

The Author of "Sherlock Holmes" Died Believing He Had Seen Spooks and Received "Spirit Messages" but Recent Confessions Reveal the Frauds



How the Bogus "Spirit Medium" Is Tied to a Stool, the Curtains of the Cabinet Drawn and "the Spirits" Begin to Play the Musical Instruments.

1—Although Bound to a Solid Mahogany Stool in the Manner Shown Above, the Medium Is Able to Play the Bells, Tambourine and Trumpet in Front of Her as Soon as the Lights Are Turned Out. Before Each Seance the Stool Was Handed Round for Examination by the Audience, the Legs Even Being Unscrewed, but No Trickery Could Be Discovered, However Careful the Scrutiny. The Noises From the Cabinet Are Ascribed to Spirit Agency. How It Is Made Possible Is Revealed by the Pictures on the Right.

2—No Matter How Tightly the Medium's Hands and Feet Were Tied to the Stool With Medical Tape, She Contrived to "Do Her Stuff." The Explanation Lay in an Ingeniously Concealed Spring Which the Medium Pressed With the Tips of Her Right-Hand Fingers. This Released the Little Block of Wood (Marked by Top Arrow Above) Through Which the Tape Was Passed, and She Could Then Use Her Right Hand Freely. The Second Arrow Points to the Hole Left by the Release of the Block, and the Smaller Picture on the Right Gives a Close-up of the Clever Trick.

3—The Ribbons Fixed on the Heavy Curtains Behind Are Phosphorescent, Giving the Effect of Lightning When the Lights Are Turned Down and the Curtains Agitated. The Stool Is Now on Exhibition, With Other Fakes Belonging to Bogus Mediums, at the National Laboratory of Psychical Research in Roland Gardens, South Kensington, London, England.

The Mysterious Slates.
Mr. Harry Price, Director of the British National Laboratory of Psychical Research Which Has Devoted Much Time and Expense to the Exposure of Fraudulent Mediums, Demonstrating the Slate Trick. Two Plain Slates, Previously Examined Minutely, Are Placed Together by the Medium. When She Takes Them Apart, One Has a "Spirit" Drawing, the Other Some "Spirit" Writing. The Secret Is a Strong, Hidden Spring.

THE late Conan Doyle has hardly been laid away in his grave when confessions begin to be made that the "spirit mediums" who largely converted him to spiritualism are frauds. But it probably would not have upset his faith because most people believe what they want to believe. The creator of "Sherlock Holmes" had taken a stand endorsing the "supernatural," much to the sorrow of many of his friends, and it would have made him ridiculous if he had admitted that he had been fooled by the clumsy tricks of bogus mediums.

Indeed, before Doyle died a few disconcerting revelations had been made. Frederick T. Munnings, a celebrated British "spirit medium," confessed in great detail how he produced "spirits," arranged messages from the "spirit world" and managed his "supernatural" wonders. Conan Doyle had been deeply impressed by Munnings and had endorsed him as one of the greatest mediums. And yet Mr. Munnings baldly admitted that he never saw a ghost in his life, could produce bogus "spirit messages" from anybody, had faked any number of ghost photographs and even "materialized" a dead dog. An almost fatal illness had brought about an awakening of his conscience and he confessed his long career of fraud.

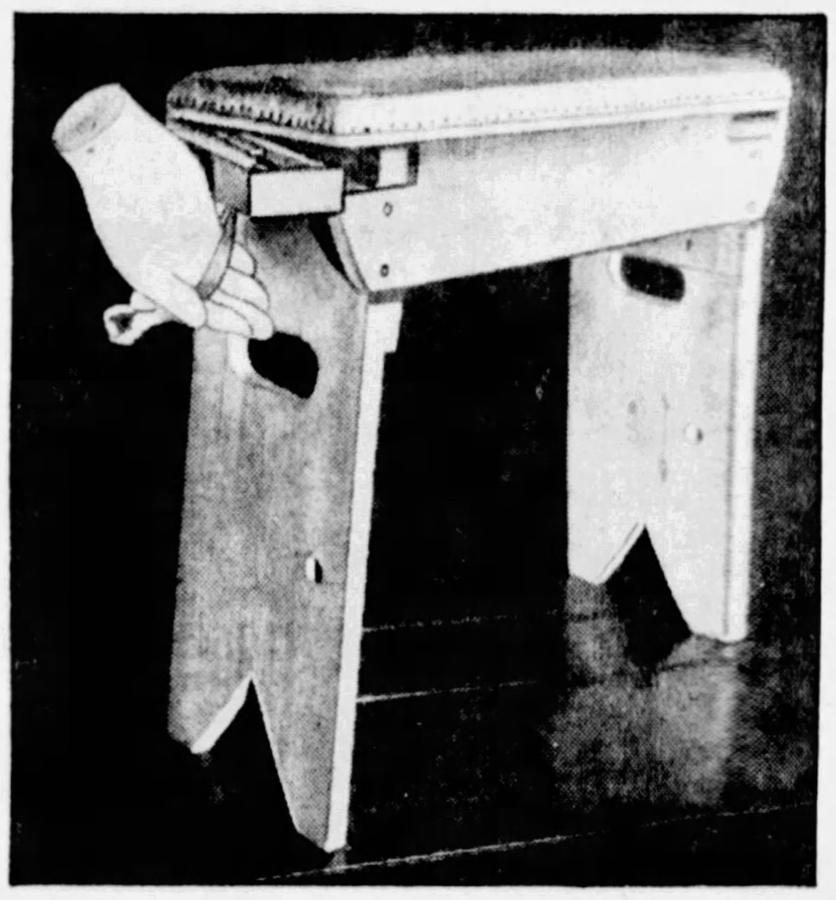
But Mr. Munnings's revelations, made before Conan Doyle died, did not disturb the distinguished author. It is unlikely that the recent confessions by other bogus mediums would have upset Doyle's faith if they had come before he died a few months ago.

Both the English and the American revelations show that Sir Arthur's friend, the late Harry Houdini, was right in telling him that all these weird and supernatural doings in the dark of the seance room were produced either by sleight of hand or special trick apparatus. Mr. Harry Price, Director of the National Laboratory of Psychical Research in London, exhibits an interesting museum of ingenious devices for fooling the credulous which he will gladly demonstrate to any spiritualists who care to call. But, curiously enough, real believers never seem to wish to know how such things are done.

For instance, what could be more convincing than to strap a medium, hand and foot, to a stool or chair by means of surgical tape. Houdini used to wiggle out of handcuffs and ropes no matter how fast he was bound, but this tape is another matter. Criminals use it to tie up their victims and they stay tied until someone releases them. Nevertheless, mediums of both sexes, thus strapped, have somehow caused bells to ring, musical instruments to be played, articles to fly around in the air, ghostly figures to stride around in the dark and all the other manifestations of busy visitors from the next world.

When the lights were turned up and the curtains of the cabinet drawn aside, there was the medium still helplessly bound, hand and foot, in the unbreakable grip of the tape. Sir Arthur, after one of these demonstrations, used to ask reproachfully how anyone could witness such unquestionable evidence and still doubt the great truths of spiritualism. Mr. Price could not answer that question satisfactorily until he got hold of one of the stools and had examined it carefully for a long time. Then he was able to do all the medium did without any spiritual help and in a bright light.

Seeing in the Dark. This Iron Trumpet Was Used by a "Direct-Voice" Medium, Who, When Given Written Messages in the Dark, Replied Through the Trumpet in the Voice of the "Spirit" to Whom They Were Addressed. She Put the Message in the Cap (on Left), Which Fitted On to the End of the Trumpet (Unseen by Her Audience) and Contained a Small Battery and Bulb, Which Light Enabled Her to Read the Message.



This Is Another Trick Stool Used by Spiritualistic Frauds and Baffled Investigators for Many Years. To Work the Spring Which Releases the Block of Wood, the Medium in This Case Inserts Her Right Hand in the Hand Grip and Pulls Upwards Against Her Own Weight.

By pressing a little hidden spring, the piece of the stool to which the hands were taped, comes loose entirely. To be completely free, all the medium had to do was to reach down and unscrew the sections of the legs to which his ankles were taped. Then, except for the slight inconvenience of four small pieces of wood attached to his extremities, he was free to step forth from the cabinet and put on his show. When this was over, he simply stepped back into the cabinet, replaced the four pieces of the stool and was once more a helpless captive.

One medium produced flashes of what looked like pale lightning running around the cabinet. This was supposed to be the visible gathering of the psychic forces, impressive as well as hard to explain at first.

The trick, however, turned out to be simple and easy. All that is needed is a couple of strips of ribbon, treated with phosphorescent chemicals on the inside of the cabinet flaps. While the light is on these ribbons it looks no different from the rest of the material, but as soon as it is dark they glow. When the medium has released himself or herself from the bonds and is ready to start the demonstration, he flaps the curtains about, thus producing a "cold psychic breeze" and glimpses of the phosphorescent ribbons, all the signs of a little psychic thunderstorm.

Whenever a medium confesses, he invariably mentions how much the sitters at a seance help fool themselves and even suggest some of the medium's best tricks. Munnings had never thought of producing the so-called "spirit lights" until he did it by accident. One day, in the midst of a seance, he pulled out his watch with an ordinary luminous dial, to see how much more entertainment he ought to give them. He forgot to shield it with his hand and two people cried out that they saw spirit lights. After that Munnings exhibited his watch boldly as a regular part of his performance.

The Sealed Box.
Messages Placed in This Strong Box—Which Was Locked and the Keyhole Sealed—Were Mysteriously Answered by the Medium. The Secret Is the Little Screw (Top Left) Which, on Being Pulled Out, Released the Lock.

The Clear Box, Open, Which Replies to Questions People Ask Medium by Ringing So Many Times, Apparently Without Human Agency. When Shut, the Button Is Inside, and How the Bell Was Made to Ring Was Unexplained for Years, for the Box as Usual Showed No Signs of Any Contrivance Other Than What Is Shown Above, However Carefully Examined. Actually, There Is a Tube of Mercury Concealed in the Side (Indicated by Arrow) and the Medium Merely Tilted the Box to Make the Bell Ring.

Nino Pecoraro, born in Naples, Italy, but for eleven years one of America's star mediums whom Sir Arthur called one of the greatest in the world, has just confessed that he "got tired of the medium racket." Munnings did so from a troubled conscience but most of the others, like Nino, quit from disgust. He says:

"The spirits get all the credit, the managers get all the money and I do all the work."

After he had explained the mechanics of wriggling out of his bonds, playing instruments, writing on the inside of sealed slates and the other stock tricks, somebody wanted to know how he materialized his ghosts that the sitters saw.

"I never produced any ghosts and I never saw any either," he said. "Yes, they would see them and speak about them to each other and I used to look around and feel for them because I would dearly love to see a ghost, but I never did in all my life."

It was the same story of the sitters fooling themselves. After a circle of people have sat in darkness and nervous expectancy for some time and finally the medium has started a few uncanny noises and moves to prove the spirits are hovering around, the sitters' imaginations begin to make them see things.

Sir Arthur was among those who testified that they had felt a cold psychic breeze at both Munnings' and Nino's sittings. Munnings deliberately produced it by whisking a trumpet or other object past their faces and making a rushing sound like wind by whirling his belt strap over his head. Nino never bothered to do this, but they felt it just the same. He thinks it was a feeling that goes with gooseflesh and cold chills that gullible people get at such times. At one of the seances, Sir Arthur and two other men were sitting on a heavy sofa and when one of them said it was rising into the air by "levitation," the others said they felt it, too.

Nino is a slim little man, with tiny wrists of rubber-like bones which give him an advantage in wriggling out of ropes with ridiculous ease, like Houdini, but he has little strength. Asked how he managed to levitate the sofa, Nino laughed and said he could not have raised it even if nobody had been sitting on it.

"I was surprised when I heard those three men saying that the sofa was going up with them," he said, "and I almost believed them. They were honest men, their feet were on the floor, how could they be mistaken? They had me so puzzled that I went over and felt of the thing. It was right on the floor all the time, but they still thought they were sailing around in the air.

Spirits are temperamental and have to be humored. Some have a violent dislike to surgeon's tape and won't grace with their presence a seance where it is to be used. Others, especially those where the medium has the right sort of trick stool, favor it. Many mediums (for the sake of their spirit controls they say) refuse to have their hands sewed into mittens. Nino's spooks had no prejudice against them. He let them sew him into a pair and the mittens sewed together. No wonder, he could slip his slim hands out in a jiffy and what is more remarkable, force them back in again without breaking the stitches.

During a seance of Nino's the spirit of Doyle's son who was killed in the war came and shook hands with his father. The great novelist had no doubt that it was his beloved boy's materialized form greeting him from beyond the grave and he was much comforted at this "evidence" that they would meet again. Sir Arthur was sure because he had seen Nino's hands sewed into mittens and his wrists tied tightly with rope and when the lights were turned on again he made sure that they were in the same condition.

Even if the famous novelist had lived to read of Nino's confession that it was his live mortal hand that he was shaking it would hardly have upset his faith.

From those who have confessed, it seems that each medium learns his own tricks, self-taught. Nino is a wonder at squirming himself free from ropes and mittens, but he had never learned one of the simplest and oldest tricks of all, writing "spirit" messages on a slate, in the dark, while a sitter holds both his hands. This is done by taking the chalk between the teeth. It requires little practice. Nor had anyone sold him the trick slates that open by a secret spring, giving the medium plenty of time to write long messages and even make "spirit" drawings.

Another bit of apparatus that impresses sitters is a box which is carefully locked and sealed and a written question either locked inside or dropped in through a slot. The medium goes into a trance, the spirits cavort and when all is over, the seal is taken off, the box unlocked and beside the question is a written answer. It usually is not a very valuable answer but how did it get in there?

The box has a secret spring through which the medium opens it, gets at the question and, with the aid of the tiniest of electric flashlights reads and answers it. If someone gets a glimpse of the light, so much the more wonderful. It must be a "spirit light." One lady medium carried her battery and light in her hat. Ladies don't have to remove their hats even in the presence of ghosts.

Another magic box has an electric bell and a push button in its locked interior where only a spirit finger could possibly press it. There is no secret method of getting into this box and yet the bell rings merrily, making code replies to spoken questions. The trick consists of a tube of mercury which makes an electric contact only when the box is tilted in a certain way. This apparatus can be freely handled because unless the examiner presses at just the right spot and gives the box just the right tilt at the same time, nothing will happen. Sometimes the springs will not work until the medium has first removed an innocent-looking screw. They are ingenious devices worthy of a better cause.

For more than 20 years Andree and his two companions lay dead at White Island in the Arctic while all the world wondered what had become of them. messages from all sorts of unimportant messages from all sort of unimportant dead men but never a word from these three who must have been most anxious either to talk themselves or to get some other spirit to put a message through. Of all the millions of silly messages from the other side not one has given any valuable information.

Lava Love—by Inez Castello

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

BEAUTIFUL Adora Vernon's position on the yacht Sea Spray, on a cruise in the South Seas, becomes embarrassing when Nicky Armstrong, the owner, makes clandestine love to her. Nicky's wife discovers the affair and innocent Adora is drugged and left behind at Saranoa at the plantation of Carlos de Velasquinez, a former admirer of hers.

The Spaniard makes her an offer of marriage but headstrong Adora refuses and escapes to Saranoa where she falls into the hands of Manuel da Costa, a Portuguese innkeeper. Carlos rescues her and returns her to his plantation. Under the ardor of his love-making Adora feels herself weakening and begs him to send her back to England. When he agrees she realizes that she does not want to go.

Adora decides to marry Carlos but determines to tantalize him a bit before she surrenders. She is about to confess her love when Conchita Mendez and her brother, Luiz, arrive unexpectedly for a visit. The Spaniard introduces Adora as his wife to save her reputation.

Conchita is furious as she hoped to marry Carlos for his wealth and titles. Luiz, suspicious of the story of their secret marriage, attempts openly to flirt with Adora.

CHAPTER XV.

Vanished Hopes.

JOINING Adora on the veranda Carlos spoke coldly.

"Before I go to visit my sick neighbor, you had better drink this," he said, holding out something in a glass. "You really are not looking at all up to the mark, Adora. I dare say the climate is too much for you. It is all right for a girl like Conchita, born in the tropics, but you are more delicate. Perhaps, after all, I shall have to send you home to England. We shall see."

"By the way," he added, as she drank down the medicine and made a wry little face, "it was just as well Conchita and her brother turned up when they did. You couldn't have gone on that boat I mentioned. It is held up at the last port with smallpox on board."

"Isn't it fortunate for us, Carlos," she asked a little languidly, handing him back the medicine glass, "that Conchita and her brother came?"

"Yes, I suppose it is..." He rammed his big sombrero over his curly black hair and laughed cynically. "Well, I'm off, querida. I'm late now. You won't be lonely with our guests for company, I'm sure."

With that, not even looking down at her, he was gone, striding off the veranda! A moment later the engine of his car began to purr, and then the noise receded into the distance. It was replaced by the voice of Luiz Mendez behind Adora. He said, on his silken note, a man's replica of his sister's voice:

"The senora will assuredly not be lonely if she is with me!"

Adora turned her golden head. She was inwardly furious with Don Carlos. And, in order to be level with him over his familiar attitude towards Conchita as she had seen it, she smiled temptingly at Luiz.

"You must have heard what Carlos said, Luiz!" she exclaimed, returning into the house and making way for him on the divan, into a corner of which she was snuggling.

"One could not help but hear!" he laughed, sitting beside her, and adding: "It was indeed such good news that I was overjoyed to hear it."

"Good news?" Adora turned on him her tantalizing sea-blue eyes.

"That you were going to be left alone for a while with us—with me. Always, it seems to me, that dragon of a Carlos is watching over you."

"Do you think so?" Adora shrugged, and laughed. "If you asked me, Luiz, I should say that Carlos is more frequently in your sister's company, interested in her rather than in me."

"Ah, well . . ." Luiz smiled, and leaned toward Adora. "Is not that only natural?" he said. "You know already that both Conchita and I thought Carlos intended to marry her. It has come as a blow to her—and to me also—that we arrive here to find you as his wife."

"Of course, I know that. At least, so far as your sister is concerned. Carlos and you both told me. But——" Adora hesitated a moment—"why should it be a blow to you, Luiz?"

"Because you are so lovely that—how could I possibly help losing my heart to you?"

He said those words with such tense emotion, such passionate fervor, that Adora was a little frightened. She had intended to lead the way to a mild and meaningless flirtation which might show Carlos that she too had her rights to freedom. But the face of Luiz, contorted by passion, alarmed her.

"You mustn't say things like that, Luiz!" she reproved him, to find one of her little hands grasped fiercely in his hold.

"Why not, you adorable creature?" he breathed, leaning towards her so suddenly that she shrank back into the corner of the couch, one small palm pressed against his chest to hold him at bay.

"How can you ask such a question?" she demanded. "To talk like that in his house, and you—his friend?"

"That is nothing. I say again that I love you. I have just as much right to do and say that as he has."

"And I am his wife?" Adora was saying when a fresh voice interrupted with a little rippling laugh of derision, causing Adora to turn in astonishment to find that Conchita had joined them.

"If you really happened to be," Conchita was saying, her eyes mocking as she stood there, looking across at Adora so meaningly that the latter was shocked into realizing something seriously amiss.

"Do you then question the fact, Conchita?" Adora demanded coldly.

The other laughed again.

"There is no fact to be questioned!" she rejoined.

"You know perfectly well that Carlos and you never have been married. That ring on your finger is just sheer pretence, and the story of a marriage is only to save your face, invented when Carlos knew we were coming."

Adora was so startled by this statement of fact as definitely coming from Conchita's actual knowledge that she did not attempt to deny it. She searched at once for the root of that knowledge, amazed that the truth should actually be known. And there was no one from whom the truth could have come but—Carlos. But surely, she argued, Carlos could never have betrayed her like that?

"I should like to know," she said meanwhile, "why you seem so certain about that, Conchita?"

Conchita laughed again. She was out to take risks. Actually, she was not quite so certain as she had sounded. The truth was that Luiz, during his visit to Saranoa, had been talking to the Portuguese hotel proprietor, da Costa, mentioning that he was staying with Don Carlos and his English wife whom he had recently married. And da Costa had laughed, telling as much as he knew about Adora, suggesting that the story of marriage was not true.

This, with other suspicions aroused in her by watching during the last few days and nights, had decided Conchita on the bold stroke of tackling Adora on the subject when Carlos was out of the way. And now, confronted by Adora's very natural question, she decided upon another bold stroke when she answered it, screening a lie behind a silken smile of certainty.

"How could I come to know, excepting through Carlos himself?" she replied.

"Carlos told you himself . . ."

Adora's voice sounded dull and lifeless, and in contrast Conchita's laugh bubbled with a brilliant vivacity.

"Certainly he told me. But . . . I must admit this, my dear. It was quite accidental. He said something and then—well, the only thing he could do was to confess the truth. Of course, I promised him not to say anything."

"And—this is how you keep your promise?" Adora shrugged, her lips curled in a smile of contempt which had the effect of rousing the other to a sudden anger.

"Because I love Carlos!" she flamed. "And because he is utterly miserable through having you on his hands, and being caught with you here by me, having to pretend to me—to me who was his promised wife before ever he met you and you tried to fascinate him!"

"I—tried to fascinate him?" Adora stared in hurt surprise, and leaned forward. "Did Carlos tell you that, too, or are you imagining it? Did he tell you how I actually came here, how I was left here in his power by the people whom I believed to be my friends?"

Conchita, of course, had no such earlier knowledge of the facts, so she snatched eagerly at the scanty ones now suggested by Adora to store them in her memory, perhaps for future uses in a different direction. And now she pursued her path of deceitful intrigue.

"The story which Carlos gave—very reluctantly—" she told Adora, "—was that you allowed yourself to be left behind by your friends in order that you should be compromised by Carlos and so he would be forced into marrying you."

"He actually told you that?"

Adora could, however, only believe it true. For if Carlos had betrayed to this girl the fact that they really were not married, if he were base enough for that—then he was base enough to tell any lie to shield himself. Meantime Conchita confirmed her statement.

"I have said so. And why should Carlos lie to me, his promised wife?" she demanded.

"It is not, in any case, true!" Adora asserted with a little gesture of pride. "I was trapped here and Don Carlos was in the conspiracy to trap me, although he has all along denied that. But—I know it now. As for the rest, he has lied. Why should I ever conceive such a preposterous thing as to try and compromise myself with him? What on earth would I gain by it?"

"Gain?" Conchita's eyes flashed. "What any other girl would sell her soul to gain. Carlos himself and his name, one of the noblest in Spain, to say nothing of his immense wealth."

"Believe me, you are entirely wrong," said Adora coldly. "I knew nothing about his wealth or his rank or anything when I came here. I hadn't the slightest interest in him. If anything, I hated him. It is quite true that I am not married to him. But all the rest he has told you it is a pack of lies, and I shall tell him so in your presence when he comes back."

"One minute, sweet Adora . . ."

It was Luiz who interrupted, speaking again for the first time since these disclosures began. Neither he nor Conchita wished anything said to Don Carlos, as was natural. Luiz had listened while his sister had spun her web of intrigue, and he realized that Adora must, at all costs, be kept from any open breach with Carlos.

"I wonder what good you think you would do by saying anything at all to Carlos?" he asked insinuatingly. "My sister and I are your friends. Do let us advise you on this. Of course, Conchita was entirely wrong to break her promise to Carlos. If he knew she had done so, it would cause bad feeling between her and him, without doing anyone any good. Don't you see that?"

"I ought to have held my tongue, I know . . ."

Conchita, a consumate little actress, had brought tears to her fine, dark eyes as she sank into a deep chair and hid her face.

"I couldn't help but speak!" she sobbed. "Carlos has been so miserable and distressed in secret. He loves me, just as I love him. He was afraid he had lost my love. He—just had to let me into the secret, for fear of losing me, don't you understand?"

Adora's heart was heavy as lead. She sat there with unseeing eyes, with a mind torn by distress—real distress, too deep for tears. All her hopes had vanished. Life offered her nothing now. She could quite see that argument with Carlos would be of no avail. She was indeed too proud to argue.

"I understand," she said. "And—perhaps you are right. No good could be done by saying anything to Don Carlos. I shall not speak. He will not know from me that you have betrayed his confidence. The only thing is . . . the sooner I get away from here, the better. But how . . . ?"

"Let us talk of such things later, sweet Adora!" intervened Luiz in his soft voice by her side. "All this has been very distressing for all of us. If, as you say, Carlos is indeed to blame for

Easy Way to Whiten Teeth 3 Shades in 3 Days

Now Simple to Remove Ugly Yellow Stain and Causes of Decay

IF your teeth are dull, tinged with yellow or stain that dims your beauty like a storm cloud when you smile then—

It's time you tried this new and utterly different technique—but recently perfected—that removes every blemish and easily whitens teeth 3 shades in 3 days.

Just do this: Morning and night, give teeth and gums a Kolynos ANTISEPTIC FOAM BATH with a half-inch of Kolynos on a dry brush.

Then note the day-to-day improvement. Very soon teeth look cleaner and whiter than in years. Gums feel firmer and look healthier. The mouth and breath are sweet and fresh. Here's the reason:

Kolynos is unique. It succeeds where ordinary preparations fail because it becomes an antiseptic foam the very moment it enters the mouth. This foam gets into and cleans out every pit, fissure and crevice. It kills the millions of germs that swarm into the mouth with every breath, defy ordinary toothpastes and cause most tooth and gum troubles—190 million are killed in the first 15 seconds.

Gently this exhilarating, antiseptic foam bathes the teeth and gums—erases tartar and the mucoid coating—stimulates the gums—purifies the oral cavity—CLEANS TEETH AS THEY SHOULD BE CLEANED, RIGHT DOWN TO THE BEAUTIFUL, NAKED WHITE ENAMEL WITHOUT INJURY!

Thus stain and ugly yellow are removed. Decay is prevented. Teeth are kept sound and gleaming white. And gums are safeguarded against insidious disease.

Try the Kolynos Dry-Brush Technique. Start giving teeth and gums a Kolynos ANTISEPTIC FOAM BATH morning and night. You'll be glad you did. Teeth will be whiter than ever. Gums firmer and healthier. The mouth tingling with a clean, fresh taste. Buy a tube of Kolynos.

The Countess of Kinnoull, Titled Daughter of Mrs. Meyrick, and Manager of Her Mother's Often-Raided Supper and Dance Resorts, Reveals Episodes Behind the Scenes With the Rich and Fashionable Patrons

Secrets

NEXT to Her Majesty the Queen, perhaps no woman's name is better known in London than Mrs. Kate Meyrick, proprietor of several famous night clubs, and who has three times served a prison term for defying the law of serving liquor and keeping open after hours.

And while the illustrious mother was in her prison seclusion, Miss May Meyrick, her daughter, managed the clubs.

In these most exciting meeting grounds of the upper circles and the underworld, where champagne splashes the walls and there is enough ice in the cocktail shakers to take care of a fever hospital, Miss May met and soon married Lord Kinnoull. Thus the Night Club Queen's daughter became a member of the British Peerage; indeed, another daughter, Miss Dorothy Meyrick, also married a Peer, Lord de Clifford.

"Lady May," the Countess of Kinnoull, has lived in the artificial glitter of night club life ever since she graduated from fashionable Roedean School, and knows everybody of wealth and title in and out of England. She has met the best and the worst of people, and has watched the ebb and flow of life and the whirlpools of intrigue, dissipation and scandal which sometimes cast the victims into the divorce courts, financial ruin or a suicide's grave.

The Countess of Kinnoull now draws aside the curtain of secrecy and reveals many extraordinary incidents in the famous night clubs owned and managed by Mrs. Meyrick and herself.

The Baronet's wife suddenly came upon her husband and his woman companion as they were leaving the night club on their way to the Baronet's parked automobile.
"I've caught you at last!" cried the outraged wife, and, turning to the woman, said: "I shall put you in your place in the divorce court!"

CHAPTER IV.

© 1931 by American Weekly, Inc. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

THE girl who is a professional dancing partner in a London night club has to be a "gold-digger."

To dig she must use the right implements. Her looks, her figure, her expression, and—her wits. Those implements must be kept bright and shining, and they must be keen and well-tempered.

You are not to imagine that all these girls are blood-sucking harpies. I am going to show you how much they differ, how utterly contradictory they can be at times in their outlook toward men. At one moment you will find these alluring sirens, dressed always in the height of fashion, like some shrewd pedler appraising the wares he has to offer, and surveying with cold analysis the probable buyer, and carefully weighing up just how far he can go in extracting the last limit in price.

At another moment you will discover in them the most unexpected and incomprehensible softness, a kind of mother instinct toward some man, quite irrespective of his age or station in life.

At a club like the famous "43" there will usually be about twelve to fifteen girl professional dancing partners. Some of them have been show girls, or chorus girls, who have left the stage because they have no talent for it or because they hate the routine of rehearsals and of being under discipline as to time. Others have found, on leaving school, that they have no special training, and that their only qualifications are good looks, an attractive figure, and an ability for ballroom dancing.

Then, as I shall show you by actual instances among our girls, there are some who have been let down by a man, and who find themselves forced to get their own living. The idea of doing anything very bad is shocking to them, but equally distasteful is the idea of working in a shop or an office, because of the regularity of hours.

Most girl dancing partners in night clubs are part lazy, I must say that. If they can come by money and extract it from men's pockets—and not infrequently from women's purses—merely by exercising their feminine wiles, they prefer to do so.

In some clubs they are paid a nominal salary of $5 a week. Whatever else they make is entirely up to themselves. They get a commission from the club on the champagne which they persuade their men partners to buy at $7 to $10 a bottle; on "favors," such as dolls, powder puffs and "mascots" at $10 each, and on boxes of chocolates at $7.50 to $10. Those commissions and their "fees" are their living.

In some New York night clubs I am told champagne costs $50 a bottle—and is not real champagne even at that.

At clubs such as any of my mother's, it would be nothing unusual for a girl who was pretty and had a pleasing personality to average $150 to $200 a week, though today, in London, much less money is being spent on luxuries. Those girls are among the luxuries of life, though a certain type of man seems to find them necessities.

I have known lots of cases where a wealthy man, usually elderly, has given a girl $100 for dancing with him for a few hours, while his bill would amount to $50 or $75, out of which the girl's commission might be $10 to $20.

I mentioned, in an earlier chapter, Douglas Potts, the Cambridge undergraduate, who shot his tutor, a detective and himself in a room at the University, after having led a most hectic life in the West End of London.

Now Madge Miller, who gave evidence in the case, and who was one of our dancing partners at our "43 Club," was one of those who showed she had, under a frivolous care-for-nothing exterior, a heart of gold.

Potts had spent every sou of his never very plentiful money in "cutting a dash" in the life of London's West End. He had bought a certain measure of cheap popularity by spending money on people he thought highly placed in society. He had spent money also on Madge Miller.

Madge was, and still is, a very pretty brunette, in the twenties. She came to Mother one day and asked for a job as a dancing instructress, as the professional partners call themselves, and my mother engaged her because she liked the girl's looks.

To the average man with whom she danced at the "43," Madge Miller was as much of a gold-digger as any other. She was out to make as much as she could, but that was what she came to the club for.

Potts danced with her almost exclusively. For weeks he came down at intervals. Then, when he found himself "broke," and with debts looming up ahead of him like big black clouds, he gave way to despair. He drank each night more heavily than the one before it, as if the waters of Lethe were contained in the glasses from which he swallowed.

And Madge looked on in pity. There was little she could do. As a dancing partner hers was not the duty of preaching sermons or reading lectures to errant youths. Laughter, wine, song and dance were part of her stock-in-trade, and she could vend these wares with the best and the rest of them.

Mrs. Kate Meyrick, Known as London's Night Club Queen, and Mother of the Countess of Kinnoull.

And when Douglas Potts, no longer the spendthrift Cambridge undergraduate, no more the youth who had "found his feet," and whose ambitions had swelled daily, crawled to her flat in Shaftesbury avenue, crushed, broken, a pitiful would-be-suicide, Madge Miller did not go back on him because he was penniless.

She took him in and fed him. And when she had fed him, she reasoned with him, She became a woman in her own little apartment, trying to instill sanity into this foolish youth.

He brandished a revolver and shouted:

"I am going to use this on myself."

"You will not," cried Madge. "Not while I can stop you. Give me the weapon." And by sheer force of will she made him give it up.

She housed him that night, the last night he ever visited the "43 Club." It was the night before the double murder and suicide. In the morning she gave him breakfast, and then she went to her bag and handed him $5 for his fare to Cambridge and for cigarettes.

"Promise me, Douglas, you will go back to your college and forget all this nonsense about shooting yourself. Work hard and come and see me when you feel you can afford it. Promise . . ."

Potts promised.

But not until he had left to get his train at Liverpool Street Station, for Cambridge, did Madge Miller know that the promise was not to be kept. Then she went to the place where she had hidden the revolver the night before and—found it gone. It was with that weapon that Potts fired those fatal shots as he was about to be arrested.

There was a girl—she would be about twenty-one — who came one evening to the door of the "43 Club" and asked:

"Could I see Mrs. Meyrick, please?"

The porter told Mother, who instructed him to send the girl in.

As soon as she spoke Mother recognized the girl's good breeding. I might mention just here that it is amusing how all our girls used to pretend that they belonged to very highly placed families, and would often remark to their partners:

"Of course you don't know who I really am," with an air that suggested they had come down very much in the world.

This girl, however, who gave her name as Eileen Riordan, was obviously well-bred and well educated.

"I wondered if you could take me on as a dancing partner, Mrs. Meyrick?" she asked.

Mother considered it for a moment.

"I might," she said, "but you understand the hours are late and the work is sometimes difficult. Do you think you would be suited for this kind of thing?"

"There's nothing else I can see I am suited for," said the girl. "I do wish you'd let me try." And so Mother agreed she should start next evening.

It was not until Eileen Riordan left the club, more than a year later, that we knew her real story.

She had married an Irish barrister when she was about nineteen. It had been a real love match, but, as it was against the wishes of the young man's parents, they had thrown him out of the family without any money. I daresay you know how terribly hard it is for a young lawyer to live during his first years in practice, unless he has a private income. That is, even as a bachelor. But now that he had married, the young Irishman found it impossible to keep Eileen and himelf.

Eileen had never been trained to any kind of work. But she was very pretty, with a beautiful figure, and she danced well. So she made up her mind she would use the only talents and assets she had, and become a professional dancing partner in a night club. She had come to the "43" because she had heard that our girls made more money than at any other club.

For two years Eileen kept herself and her husband while he looked around for briefs that were slow to come in. Although some of the other girls did not like her very much—they felt she was better bred than they were, and they spoke of her as "up stage and country"—the men visitors to the "43" were very keen to dance with her. She managed always to appear gay, and I think it was because she had a definite object in view, which was to take home the money she made to keep the tiny flat going, that she never seemed to look bored as some of the girls do at times.

Eileen must have averaged about $75 a week, and now and then some wealthy man would give her a $25 or $50 bill as an "extra present." There were times, of course, when Eileen found matters a little difficult. A professional dancing girl in a night club can hardly say to a man who proposes "to run her out into the country in his car" at two o'clock in the morning that "she is very sorry, but she doesn't think her husband would approve."

The men who go to night clubs do so to enjoy themselves in every sense of the word. Their idea is that so long as they are prepared to pay the piper they can call the tune. The tune they expect of dancing partners is sometimes a very hectic, jazzy one indeed. But Eileen had plenty of tact. Her men admirers came back to her again and again, and yet she managed to keep them at arm's length sufficiently to go home alone direct from the club, sometimes at three, sometimes as late as five-thirty in the morning.

Curiously enough, it was the very fact of her being at the "43 Club" that gave her husband his first case. There was a stoutish, bald-headed man, who used to come to the club pretty regularly, who had taken a great fancy to Eileen. He danced with her more often than with any of the other girls, and, as is part of the "etiquette" among the dancing partners, he came to be known as one of Eileen's clients, not to be sought after by any of the others.

One night, sitting down with her at a table, and with his second bottle of champagne in front of him, he told Eileen he didn't feel very cheery.

"I noticed you weren't looking quite your usual bright self," I heard Eileen say to him, for I was at a table nearby. "What's the trouble?"

"Oh, something a little lady like you wouldn't understand. A business affair. It'll mean a law-

of London's Most Notorious Night Club

At that moment the door of the Baronet's car flew open, and out stepped a radiant vision of young womanhood. Walking up to the Baronet's excited wife, she said:

"Haven't you made a mistake? It is I who am with your husband. Not in any funny way—just that he offered to drive me as far as the door of my flat."

suit, and I hate lawsuits like poison," he said. "In fact I've had a bit of a row with my solicitors over the counsel they wanted to brief and now I've got to find a decent barrister to take up the case."

Eileen was not slow to weigh up the situation.

"If I told you I know a young barrister who's awfully clever would you consider giving him a chance at the case?"

The stout man looked very hard at her. Although he was a happy-go-lucky soul, who spent his money freely and generously at the "43 Club," it was only because he was a shrewd business man that he was able to have the money to spend.

"Someone you know well?" he asked.

"Very well," said Eileen. "My husband, in fact."

The man stared. The idea of a barrister with a wife who was a dancing partner in a night club seemed to him extraordinary; in fact, rather suspicious. But he had grown to like Eileen very much, and he asked her to "tell him all about it." She did, very frankly. In the end the city business man decided to have a talk with her husband, and the result was that he was "briefed" on the case as junior counsel.

Today Eileen's husband is regarded as the leading junior counsel in England as the outcome of the case that gave him his start, and he is talked of as a man who, when it comes "to take silk" later—that is to say, becomes a K. C. or King's Counsel—will very likely be another Lord Birkenhead.

Now here is another case of a dancing partner at the "43," with a husband, but on rather different lines.

The cause celebre, which has just come before the Old Bailey, London, or Central Criminal Court, as it is officially called, in which a man named Henry Grayson was charged with committing perjury in a divorce action which he brought last Spring against his wife, naming Sir Guy Sebright as co-respondent, really began at our Broadway Club. For Mrs. Grayson, at seventeen years of age, became one of our dancing partners and met Sir Guy Sebright at the Broadway Club.

Grayson alleged, in his divorce action, that Sir Guy Sebright, who is a land-owner and very well known in London society, had led his wife astray, and a decree nisi was granted, with damages and costs against Sir Guy Sebright. But in England, when a decree of divorce is pronounced, the parties must wait six months before it is made absolute. During those six months an official, known as the King's Proctor, whose duty it is to see that no collusion between husband and wife has taken place, makes inquiries. In this case the inquiries showed that Grayson, whom my husband and I have known as a sheer adventurer, was quite well aware of the relations between Sir Guy Sebright and Mrs. Grayson.

It was as Joy Parnell, a tall, auburn-haired girl of seventeen, that Mrs. Grayson, as she became, started as a dance instructress at our Broadway Club somewhere about 1922. She was really a beautiful girl, with plenty of what Elinor Glyn comically described as "IT." Joy Parnell—I still think of her by that name—is still beautiful.

She proved an immediate success on her job. Girls of her type usually do. They know how to flatter the middle-aged "tired business man," and, in an atmosphere of perfumes, expensive cigarettes, jazz music, wines and general exotic appearances, they can transform a hard-dealing, steely-brained financier into a wax-like, plastic dodderer, who can be moulded into whatever form the girls wish. Youths, unless of very monied and callow type, rarely fall heavily for those girls in my observation.

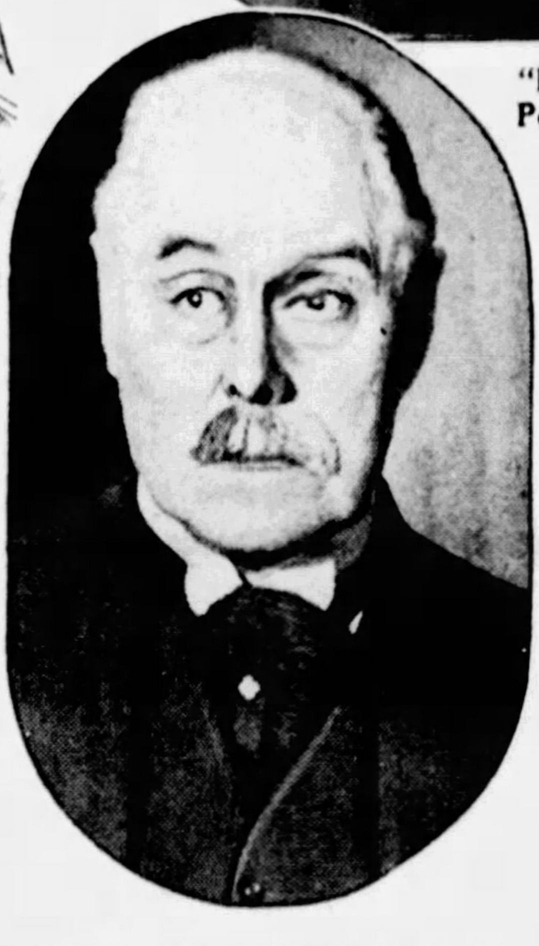
To the Broadway Club came Sir Guy Sebright, a genial old gentleman of excellent family and possessed of quite a lot of money and getting on in years. I believe he is now somewhere approaching seventy.

If I say that I know so very well that there is no fool like an old fool, I am not exactly calling Sir Guy Sebright on old fool. But his actions in this Grayson divorce and perjury case have shown him to be something very near it.

Sir Guy soon showed a marked preference for Joy Parnell. Whether it was youth attracting old age, or whether it was just the charm of this Titian-haired dance instructress, I don't know. Anyhow, Sir Guy fell head over ears in infatuation for her. Joy was only a dancing partner at the Broadway on and off. She went on the stage and appeared in a show at the London Hippodrome, and then, like most other professional dancing partners, she would return to my mother's club again.

There came a time when Sir Guy Sebright took a flat for her, and he installed her there as mistress of it—and himself.

Now Grayson had come to the Broadway and also to the "43" at times. I saw him on several occasions. A man of fairly good looks, fair, keen features and with a look of breeding about him. He is, as a matter of fact, an English public schoolboy, and belongs to quite a good family. But we soon got to know him as a man who lived by his wits, or, perhaps, I ought to say, the lack of them in other people.



Sir Guy Sebright, Who Was Entangled in an Unpleasant Notoriety Through His Night Club Acquaintance.

"Dorothy," One of the Most Popular Dance Instructresses of the "43 Club."

I never knew what his relations were with Joy Parnell at the time, but eventually they got married. Honestly, I can't think why she, a girl full of attraction and with any number of worth-while men at her feet, ever did marry Grayson. But then one never does know how half the marriages in the world ever came about.

Sir Guy Sebright kept coming to the Broadway Club regularly, and always to dance with the auburn-haired young girl with whom recently his name was coupled in both the civil and the criminal courts. Joy had a very ingenuous air, with big open eyes and an innocent expression, just the type to appeal to an elderly man.

Then she disappeared almost entirely from club life. She went to live in the flat which Sir Guy had taken for her. As has now been proved, however, when Sir Guy was not there her husband shared the flat for which her elderly lover paid. When Sir Guy came to see her Grayson quickly made himself scarce and hid himself in the kitchen or else went out of the flat.

There came a time when Grayson found himself very hard pressed for money. He was a man who, so far as we knew him, never did any work. So he hit on the scheme of compromising his wife's lover and catching him "in flagrante delicto." It was arranged that Sir Guy should be in the flat in such circumstances as would leave no doubt about the intimacy, and then that Grayson should burst in on them and catch his wife and Sir Guy together. Then he would sue for divorce and for substantial damages.

It all worked according to the programme. The "outraged husband," according to the evidence in the divorce courts, said that he had gone to the flat in a taxi to fetch something, and had forced his way in to find his wife, Joy Parnell, the former dance instructress at the Broadway Club, in the arms of Sir Guy Sebright.

"I was horrified and surprised," Grayson told the Court. And he went on to swear to this and that, to show that he had never even suspected anything wrong between his wife and Sir Guy.

But the King's Proctor got keenly on the scent, and he soon found evidence that the whole affair was a put-up job on Grayson's part. The Director of Public Prosecutions was consulted, and so Grayson was arrested for perjury. He came before the Magistrate at Bow Street Police Court in December last, and was sent for trial at the Old Bailey, where he was convicted and sentenced to three years in prison.

Girl dancing partners at smart clubs in London are often asked by a party of guests to join them at their table. All the girls, of course, dress extremely well, and they have to know how to behave so that they can join any company without being out of place. Sometimes, indeed, a dancing partner may be asked to go to a private dance in a big Mayfair mansion.

Group of Dancing Partners at the Famous "43 Club," London, Some of Whom Are Referred To in This Chapter.

A party of people would come to one or other of our clubs with possibly one man odd. He would find a professional dancing partner and invite her to join the party. At the end of the evening, when they were about to depart, the girl was paid her fee, varying in such cases from $5 to $25, according to the generosity and mood of the man with whom she had danced.

It was in such circumstances that I saw the beginning of what proved to be an amusing society scandal, in which a young peer, his wife and one of our dancing partners were involved.

The young peer married, at the age of twenty-two, a girl of his own station and also about his age. For a year or so they were happy together. A baby son and heir was born, but he died in infancy, and that seemed to be the beginning of a rift between the young Earl and Countess.

The young couple were both very fond of dancing, and they frequented night clubs a great deal, chiefly my mother's places. It was at our Manhattan Club one evening that the Countess met a man with whom she became very much infatuated at first sight. But the Earl was rather in the way. She could not very well flout her affection for her new male acquaintance right in front of his very eyes. So she hit on a plan.

She left the party at the table and went to the ladies' cloakroom, where she espied a very pretty dancing partner.

"Listen, my dear," said the young Countess to the dance instructress, "I would like you to join our party. I want you to dance with my husband, and I would also like you to flirt with him and engage his attention. I will give you $50."

The dance instructress was a little bit surprised for a moment at this request, but dancing partners are never surprised at any thing for long. She agreed to the arrangement and went into the ballroom with the young Countess, and was duly installed as one of the party. Then the girl, whose name was Betty, promptly set about her job of fascinating the Earl. It was not a very difficult task, for the young peer was very susceptible to pretty women. So Betty and he danced together, and before long they had become exceedingly friendly. The Earl, in fact, got so bound up in Betty's charms that it was some little time before he noticed that his wife had left the ballroom. So had her new admirer.

He inquired of the head waiter whether anyone had seen his wife leave, and he was then informed that she had gone out of the club altogether, having remarked that she "had a bad headache and was going home."

The Earl didn't worry much. To his naturally happy-go-lucky disposition was added the attraction of Betty, who had not only received her $50, but had been invited by the young peer to have champagne and chocolates, on which she would later draw her commission. So the two danced on till at four-thirty they had breakfast together.

Now this young Earl was a very keen motorist and aviator, and when he mentioned to Betty that he had an airplane of his own she was very thrilled.

"Oh, would you take me up, please?" she begged him.

"Certainly," said the Earl, who by this time would have given her the moon, let alone fly to it.

"When?" said Betty.

"No time like the present," he said. "Let's go off now. I'll go home and change, and I'll meet you in an hour at your address. Put on warm your being here, well, one can not be angry with her. Even [illegible] admit that [illegible] Your beauty is too [illegible]

L[illegible] Love — by Inez Castello

Adora listened with ears which scarcely heard. She found that Conchita, drying her [illegible] tears, had left the room, leaving behind her just that [illegible] which it had been her intention to create. But of this Adora knew nothing. She only considered the picture painted of Don Carlos, compared it with the attitude he himself had adopted toward her since the arrival of his Spanish friends. She remembered that he had been almost negligent of her.

He had possibly, as Luiz now suggested, been dazzled by that fatal loveline of hers. He had certainly offered her marriage; but that was only when he knew quite well she would refuse. He had said to her not a word on that subject since Conchita had arrived. Obviously, he had gone back to his first love in Conchita, so that the passion he had displayed toward Adora had only been that of the flesh.

Adora was only glad that still she was pure and unsullied, and that she knew the truth before it had been too late. Her heart was broken, and never might be mended again. But if Conchita was indeed Carlos' true love, and he would be happy with her, that mattered most to Adora.

Meantime, with an arm thrown round her on the couch, Luiz talked to her in a brotherly fashion which soothed her a little. He knew far too well to betray his real feelings for her just now, that the worst thing he could possibly do was to press himself upon her at this moment.

So he set himself very artfully to seek her confidence. He talked about himself as a brother might talk, and about herself as someone who sadly needed a friend. Presently she found herself discussing with him quite frankly how best she could get away from Carlos and return to England. He promised her his help.

"You cannot very well leave until Conchita and I bring our visit to a close, Adora mia," he urged upon her. "And then well, we will arrange some plan. The best thing will be for you to come over to the mainland to our place, once you do leave say a few hours after we have left. We will arrange it somehow . . . ."

And here there appeared on the veranda Carlos himself, so all further discussion of that subject had to be reserved till later. The sight of him hurt Adora incalculably. She had here a foretaste of the suffering which must eternally be hers. And yet, in her moments of pride, when the spirit of the old Adora returned to her, she asked herself why all this useless heartburn and misery?

He could not be worth it all. The mere fact that he had betrayed to Conchita her unmarried state alone branded him as dishonorable. And still worse was the lying story behind which he had seemingly screened himself to put himself right with the girl he did apparently intend to marry. So why should Adora torture herself with further thought of him?

Don Carlos himself, beyond inquiring after her health in front of the others most assiduously, showed no desire for private conversation with her, beyond remarking rather humorously when they were alone for a minute that no doubt she was finding the company of Luiz very attractive.

"Of course he's in love with you!" chuckled Don Carlos, pinching gently one of her little ears. "I suppose he wishes you were not my wife. If he knew the truth . . ." He hesitated for a moment, looking down at her before he spoke again.

"He is much more your age than I am. He is quite a nice boy. If you had the chance, would you listen to his wooing?"

"I like him very much," responded Adora merely, and suddenly decided to be more emphatic than that. "Indeed," she added, "it is rather a pity I'm in this unfortunate position, supposed to be your wife, when I'm really not so at all, and he can't be told."

She waited, half in the hope that Don Carlos would confess to having told Conchita the truth. But he did not. He merely shrugged his shoulders.

"For your own sake, he can't be told," he said. "And so—I should not lead the poor boy on too much, querida. It will hurt him, and not look too well on your part."

Carlos turned to leave the room, and the house. He had only returned to snatch an evening meal and to go back afterwards with some medicine to his neighbor's sick bed. Went, did Carlos, without kissing her, flagrantly now offering her no sign of affection, no doubt preparing the way so that, when the two Mendez' visit ended and they were gone, he could break to her the news that he was marrying Conchita.

Adora went wearily to bed, heart-hungered, tragic. For even the armor of her pride was not faultless. There was a chink in the armor through which the sword-blade of love had her poor heart at its mercy. Despite her pride, she sobbed herself to sleep that night. And, in her sleep, she dreamed of love—and Carlos. Dreamed that he was not faithless, that he loved her and was telling her so . . . .

Adora wakened suddenly to the sound of a man's whisper. It came close to her ear. There was the feeling of a man's hand caressing her. From a distant window a shaft of moonlight flooded a part of the room and faintly touched the bed. And here she saw a man's shape, hunched and kneeling, whispering her name tenderly. Instinctively, she whispered back, eager, amazed:

"It really is you at last, Carlos?"

"Carlos?" The whisper became derisive immediately. "Not Carlos but Luiz, querida."

"Luiz . . ." Adora sat upright in bed and shrank away from that hunched shape. She whispered frenziedly, "What are you doing in my room? You must go at once. How dare you come in here?"

"Dare?" he whispered back, trying to enfold her in eager arms. "Why should I not dare. I love you. I want you for my own."

"You must go away at once. Supposing Carlos found you here?"

"Carlos?" he derided. "Carlos is not back yet, anyhow. He told me that he might not be back at all till day-break. And what does he matter? He does not love you as I do. I am as much entitled to you as he is, seeing that you are not his wife."

"Luiz . . ." Adora, struggling in his embrace, tried to reason with this ardent youth, whose passion-swept and handsome face was outlined by the moon so close to hers that his hot breath fanned her scorchingly.

"Luiz . . ." she repeated. "You must leave me at once. I don't love you. I love Carlos, in spite of everything. If you are the friend to him you profess to be, you must feel shame to have come here at this hour in his house—"

"I feel no shame. Why should I?"

"None at all—for me?" she whispered frenziedly, trying to beat off his caressing hands, his eager lips.

"Why should I? You have been living here alone with him in this house. You haven't thought that shameful."

"Because Carlos has behaved like an honorable man. He has never once treated me as you are trying to do—"

"And you think I believe that—of Carlos? I know him too well. Why, he couldn't resist you, any more than I can. And I am not going to be denied my share of your love—"

"Love? I hate you when you talk like that, behave like this. Leave me at once, Luiz, or I'll scream for help."

"Scream, will you, sweet one?"

He pressed his lips to hers before she could protect herself, and his kisses all but stifled her, leaving her no breath at all with which to carry out her threat. He held her body so tightly that she was utterly helpless. She felt that she was about to faint.

Still, she struggled, panting and wriggling in his arms, seeking to escape his mouth and that seemingly endless kiss, growing weaker and more faint every moment. And then. . . .

She became aware that Luiz had been snatched away from her. She heard a voice, the voice of Carlos; somber and menacing:

"So this is what happens when my back turned? This is how my honor and my hospitality are abused? You, Luiz—my so-called friend! You, Adora, to whom I have given my honorable name.

CHAPTER XVI.

Blighted Faith.

IT was Luiz who answered first, forced to do so because it was he whom Don Carlos confronted with clenched hands and a face livid in the moon-sheen. Don Carlos was holding himself in restraint, Adora could see, and the effort was causing him difficulty. Meantime Luiz spoke a little shakily and under his breath.

"What are honor and hospitality when a woman leads a man on?" he questioned, his young face twisted with cynicism. Don Carlos laughed contemptuously.

"The old story of Adam in the Garden of Eden, I suppose? 'The woman tempted me, and I did eat—'"

"That's the whole truth of it, Carlos!" insisted Luiz.

"There is no truth whatever in that, Carlos!" insisted Adora in turn emphatically.

She had slipped from the bed, flung a silken kimono around her and stood there—white and crimson—in the moonlight, barefooted, her body quivering like a slender sword of steel, on her defense.

"Luiz is lying," she said slowly. "He came in here without my knowledge, and insisted on staying here against my will. You must surely know that, Carlos. I am all bruised and hurt on my arms where I have been struggling against him."

"Whichever may be the truth matters little for the minute beyond this," Don Carlos said coldly, ignoring Adora, expressing himself to the other man.

"You have cut at the root of What fun to be Good-looking!

Even twenty-one looks old, jaded, sallow, if poisons collect in the body. But where there's internal cleanliness, forty can be young!

Think of the girls you know who are "almost good-looking." What keeps their skin cloudy, their eyes dull, their brains slow? What spoils their fun? Just this: They neglect internal cleanliness! It shows in the way they look, in everything they do.

Make internal cleanliness the foundation of your charm. It's easy the saline way, with Sal Hepatica.

The benefits—which wealthy Europeans find in the "saline cure" at Continental spas—can be yours, in your own home. For, by cleansing the bloodstream, Sal Hepatica wards off colds and frees the body of poisons. Clear skin, shining eyes, a renewed charm—these are the rewards.

Begin with Sal Hepatica today.

SALINES for the Stout!

Dependable salines like Sal Hepatica are an almost indispensable aid in the reducing diet. Unlike many laxatives, they never have the tendency to make their users stout. In fact, the best medical opinion here and abroad highly commends them to those who are reducing.

Color secrets for "DIM BULBS"

DOROTHY DIX says

"Use Color to make your personality glow and sparkle . . . to put yourself across!"

"COLOR—what a magical power it has! Why don't all girls understand it?

"The right colors in a frock can heighten immeasurably a girl's beauty of eyes, hair and skin—make her whole personality glow and sparkle. Like the glamorous footlights of the stage, color in dress LIGHTS YOU UP! Helps you to put yourself across.

"Don't be a dim bulb (to use a phrase I've borrowed from the boys). It's so easy to charm if you do 2 things:

1. Choose the colors becoming to YOU.
2. Always keep them fresh and vibrant with life.

"Fading—even slight fading—robs a color of its power to thrill; it's like a lovely tune just slightly off key! And then, too, even a little change in a shade may make it WRONG FOR YOU. (Think how easily an exciting chartreuse can become a bilious yellow).

One Sure Rule

"There is just one way I know of to be SURE that colors DON'T fade. That is, to wash them only in Lux.

"Lux is made especially to preserve color. Ordinary 'good' soaps clean, but take away some color pigment. Lux cleanses beautifully, yet leaves the most delicate color singingly ALIVE and TRUE in tone.

"AT HOME, too—let color add glamour to you! Color in draperies, slip covers, even in table linens, all helps the magic spell—if kept fresh and lovely with Lux." DOROTHY DIX

How to Keep Colors Appealingly Lovely

(Right) Lovely yellow and black printed silk washed 8 times in Lux. The color is fresh and sunshiny as new. No fading or blurring of the pattern. All its sparkle and appealing charm retained!

(Left) Duplicate silk washed 8 times in ordinary "good" soap. Faded and streaked—the brilliance and glow of the color lost. No longer lovely!

Any color safe in water alone is just as safe in LUX

Now... ON THE WAY TO YOU

"Summer Hosiery"

It's the latest thing out. . . . Realsilk Representatives now can show it to you. . . . You'll want to see what's right for summer when they call. . . .

"SUMMER hats . . . summer frocks . . . summer shoes—why doesn't some company give us summer hosiery?" asked woman after woman.

Realsilk has long thought, and our Fashion Committee emphatically agrees with us, that no hosiery has had the shimmery, sunshiny feeling in keeping with other summer styles.

So we've developed hosiery that does!

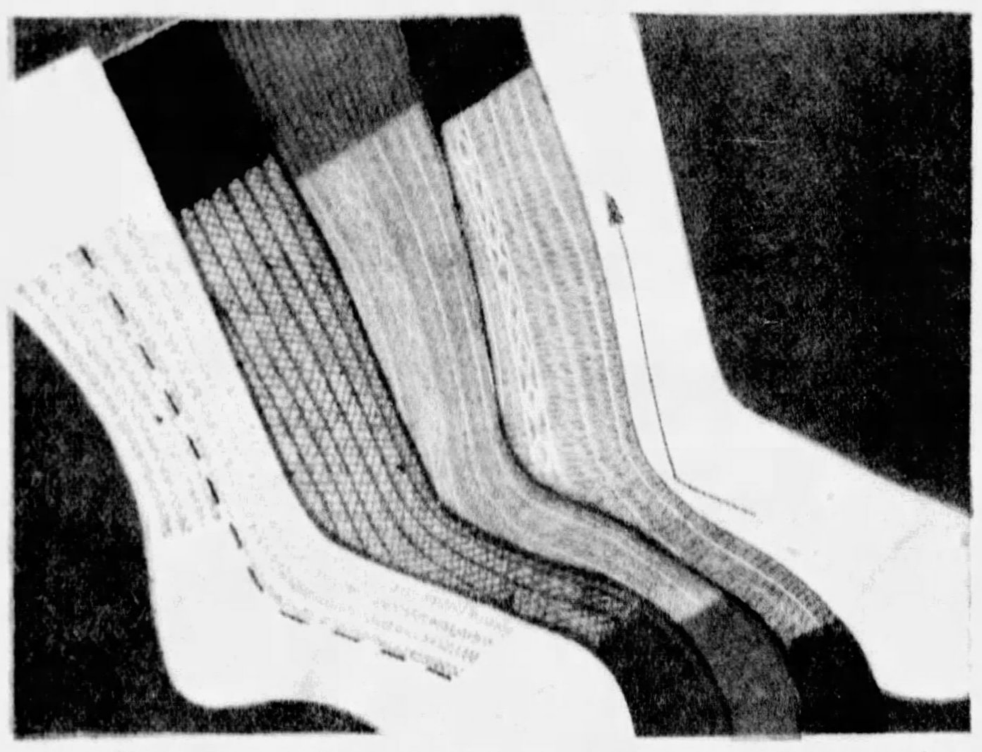
The new Realsilk stockings for summer are lighter in weight . . . marvelously sheer. They provide the perfect hosiery complement for bright, light, hot weather clothes; for exotic evening party gowns, for chic sports, street or afternoon modes of summer.

Style and color rightness are assured by Realsilk's own Fashion Committee, whose high position in the world of style is unquestioned. Members of the committee are: Lucien Lelong, foremost Parisian designer, Lynn Fontanne, America's best-dressed actress, Neysa McMein, whose illustrations of fashionable women are world-renowned, and Katherine Harford, stylist, formerly with Harper's Bazaar—all permanently retained as members of the Realsilk staff.

Within the next few days the Realsilk Representative will call to show you the new Summer Hosiery. We cordially invite you to see it—for we know you'll be enthusiastic, too, about Realsilk's new idea.

Summer Hosiery is another tribute to Realsilk's different method of selling. Through selling only in home or office, Realsilk has built up direct contact with millions of men and women. Realsilk learns as it sells—finds out what customers want and don't want—and is always ready first with the newest developments in hosiery.

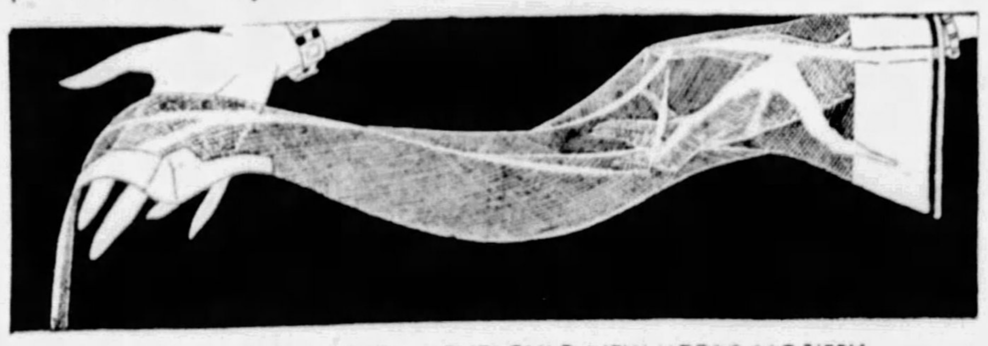
MEN —HERE ARE YOUR SUMMER SOCKS



Socks like these you'll see well-dressed men everywhere wearing when the days are at their longest—and hottest—and for evening, too. The famous Realsilk exclusive features of wear are found in them: six-ply toe and high-spliced heel, 2-ply sole, and the longest silk leg found in any sock, in a beautiful selection of light, cool fabrics and patterns. Left to right, Arctic, Tundra, Sandtone, Greytone and Polar.

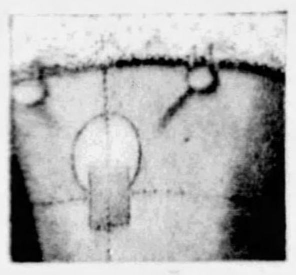
SHEERER . . . DAINTIER . . . MORE SUBTLE . . . NEW AND CORRECT FOR THE SEASON OF SUNSHINY DAYS AND MOONLIGHT NIGHTS

"Definitely THE types for Summer are a new mesh and the sheerest of sheer chiffons," says our Fashion Committee. . . . The new Realsilk Mesh (illustrated below) gives that subtle "webby" appearance so smart with the vivid contrasting colors of the 1931 summer ensembles. Complete range of summer shades. . . . The other, the sheerest chiffon Realsilk ever made —is seamed "wrong-side-out," which gives a much sheerer, duller, more slenderizing effect. It is available in eight intriguing colors, including the very, very new "Off-White."* (Ask to see Styles 39N and 84.)



ILLUSTRATED ABOVE—THE CHIC NEW MESH HOSIERY

THE NEW "HEM-GUARD" (Patent-applied-for). A special reinforcement at the point of greatest strain—where the silk leg of the stocking joins the garter hem. One of many exclusive Realsilk features we have developed as a result of Realsilk's unique "Shop-at-Home" method of selling.



OTHER STYLES IN REALSILK'S EXTENSIVE LINE

A Full-Fashioned Stocking at $1.19—Sheer, luxurious, full-fashioned chiffon. All-silk to hem, with patented longer-wearing Dura-Foot. Formerly cost much more. All colors. Now at this value price.

—and a Supreme All-Silk-To-Top Value

$1.39—full-fashioned, beautifully sheer, and all-silk to top. Special silk-plaited Cradle foot. Picot edge. Full color range. Also formerly much higher-priced.

The New "Off-White"—Have You Seen It?

It's not white. It's not beige. It's not flesh. But it is a little of each—the most intriguing new shade in several seasons. You must see it—for you'll want pair after pair. The nearest to a word description is the delicate "Eggshell"—applied to a stocking!

our friendship, Luiz. You have committed an unforgivable sin. To eat a man's salt and—behind his back—to intrigue for the affections of his wife—"

"Wife?" Luiz flung out that word with doubt and scorn. He had foreseen the use of that word, sooner or later. He was quick cunningly to take advantage of the real truth so that his knowledge of it would take a new form.

"If she had been your wife, Carlos," he said with a little shrug of insolence, "this would not have happened. But—according to her own confession to me—she is not your wife at all."

"She—she confessed that to you?" Don Carlos uttered that question in blank amazement, turning to stare at Adora, who in turn regarded him with accusing eyes, not even waiting for the question trembling on his lips, demanding her confirmation of this fact.

"What else was I to do when you already had given away the truth to Conchita?" she asked simply. Don Carlos ran the strong white fingers of his right hand through his dark hair as if frankly puzzled.

"I have never said a word to Conchita to convey that impression," he said. "I do not know in the least, Adora, what you mean."

"No more do I!" interposed Luiz. "Excepting that she is afraid now the truth has come out, and is trying to shift the blame on to you. Ask Conchita and she'll tell you, Carlos, that this one"—he pointed across to Adora—"told me he was not your wife—told me in Conchita's presence. She said she was here against her will. Why, she even arranged that, when Conchita and I finished our visit here, I should return and help her to escape to the mainland."

Adora listened to this garbled version of the truth with astonished ears, realizing now that she had earlier been duped, that Carlos had not given her away, and that now Luiz was using her natural confession as a weapon against her. It was a question as to whom Carlos would believe. It was a case of her word against the combined evidence of Luiz and Conchita, who naturally would side with her brother.

For the moment, as it proved, Don Carlos was loth to argue the point further. He gestured imperiously towards the open bedroom door and addressed Luiz.

"We will discuss this further in the morning," he said, and turned to Adora. "Luiz and I will leave you. Be so kind as to turn the key in your door. In the morning we shall decide what is now to happen under these new circumstances."

Left alone behind her locked door, Adora sat for a while on the bed edge, listlessly defiant, indifferent as to what happened. At one moment she felt guilty for having for an instant been gulled into believing Carlos had betrayed her to Conchita. Then she would accuse him of disloyalty in seeming to accept as true the lying version of Luiz, directed against herself.

In either case, there remained one fact. The mythical marriage was finally exploded. How Luiz and his sister had discovered the truth, or guessed at it, she could not understand at all. She ceased to ask herself what the solution might be. She sat on amid the fragments of blighted faith, confronting the uncertainty of the morrow.

She must in the end have slept, for the morrow greeted her weary eyes with tropic sunshine, indicating that she had slept late. She dressed hurriedly, not a little nervous and anxious over meeting Carlos and the others in—as Carlos himself had said overnight—these new circumstances.

Not that she needed to feel nervous or anxious. Don Carlos was alone at the breakfast table when she joined him, and he rose at once, kissing her hand and placing a chair ready for her. He showed no sign whatever of unusual emotion, discussing pleasantly the weather, which was exceptionally hot and sultry, without even a stirring breeze.

"You would do well not to go out much in the sun," he told her. "The heat has upset even Conchita, accustomed to the tropics as she is, so that she is remaining in bed and having her breakfast served to her there. Luiz has gone into Saranoa on his affairs and will not be back till night.

"By the way," he added as upon a sudden thought, "you will find the romantic Luiz distinctly repentant over his behavior of last night. I have talked to him very seriously. He admitted to me that really he alone was to be blamed for a serious breach of good manners, to say nothing of honor. The reason of that grave lapse, of course, lay in his discovery of the fact that you and I were not really married."

"I want to speak to you about that discovery, Carlos," Adora gathered up courage to say. "I don't know how Luiz learnt the truth. But I do say to you, on my honor, that he did not learn it from me. I swear it."

"And I, in turn, say that you were quite wrong if you imagined I gave the secret away," said Carlos. "Why should I? Your reputation was at stake. And besides, I had Conchita to consider. How could I ask her to be a guest in my house to meet a woman living with me in an unmarried state?"

"I am none the worse for that!" Adora colored proudly. "It was not my fault that I was left with you, or that she should suddenly come here and be forced to meet me—"

"We will agree on that!" he shrugged a little impatiently. "In groping about darkly to establish the grounds of fault we lose sight of the far more important results. We are now exposed, you and I. In the few words I have had this morning with Conchita I have convinced her that your relations with me have been purely platonic, and that you are here only until I am able to arrange a passage for you back to England, which I presume you would prefer to the suggestion of Luiz that you should go with him to the mainland."

"Infinitely!" Adora declared proudly, surprised that Carlos should have reverted to the idea of her returning to England, which indicated that he now had no intention of marrying her.

"I am not in the least interested in Luiz," she added. "Especially after last night."

"Well, cara mia, Luiz is so repentant over that you should be forgiving. He is a mere boy, ardent and impulsive. He has not your English reserve, your cold temperament, your reluctance towards the demonstrative. . . ."

Don Carlos said this with a grim cynicism which made Adora long to tell him he was utterly wrong, that she was ablaze with love, and only needed for him to take her in his arms and let her prove to him how fond and loving she could be.

But he was intent upon her departure to England. He seemed singularly anxious to rid himself of her presence, possibly the sooner to satisfy Conchita and prepare the way for their marriage, always understood, now to become definite.

"It so happens," she heard him saying, "that an English boat is due in port the day after tomorrow. The captain is known to me, a good fellow in whose charge I feel you would be perfectly safe. So perhaps you will be ready on that day to leave us?"

"Very well, Carlos. . . ." Adora spoke with an assumed coldness, but took care not to meet his eyes or to look at him. She was desperately near to tears. To stave them off she discussed ways and means.

"I have only fifteen pounds in money," she said with difficulty. "I shall need some of that when I reach London—"

"Of course. But you need not worry about money. The captain will make no charge for taking you to London. I am proposing to see also that, when you do land in London you will have much more than your own little bit of money—"

"Oh . . . But I couldn't accept so much help from you—" Adora was protesting when he gestured her to silence.

"Pardon me. I insist. I am a wealthy man. I could not allow you to land in London without at least five hundred pounds behind you. I have more generous thought for your welfare than Diana had when she so callously left you here to whatever fate befell you. But leave everything to me."

Adora protested no more. She made up her mind, however, that she would not use a penny of his money. It was bad enough to be dependent on him for her passage home, and against that she could say nothing. And now she contemplated that voyage with a dread and a broken heart. Where once she had longed to leave Carlos, now she asked herself how life would be endurable without him.

And yet it was obvious that he was entirely in mind to be rid of her, and that therefore he could not seriously have cared for her as once he had protested. So much, Adora thought, for the love of man! A passing whim, caddish as with Nicky, violent as with Luiz, or—as with Carlos—a refined cruelty.

Carlos was now flagrant in his attentions to Conchita. And the latter, after her next meeting with Adora, was frankly delighted that no real tie existed between her and Carlos. Just as frankly she discussed with Adora the real circumstances which had brought her to his house. Conchita was now generously sympathetic. Definitely assured of Carlos for herself, she could afford to be that.

"I do think you have been badly treated, cara mia," she said on the afternoon of the day before the English boat was due in port. "I never heard of such a heartless act in my life before. The woman must have been a perfect fiend, and her husband was a beast to tell all those lies about you. Still, now that you are going back to your own country, you will soon forget all about it."

And that, of course, was exactly what Adora never could do, but she did not say so to Conchita, who, on her part—a little cattish by nature—could not avoid adding a word or two concerning herself and Carlos.

"Perhaps, when we are married," she said, "Carlos will take me to Europe and we may meet once more in your beautiful London. I should like that, cara. And perhaps—one never knows—Luiz may come, too. Luiz is quite mad about you, especially since he has known you were not really married to Carlos."

Conchita, incidentially, had been told nothing about the scene between Adora and Luiz which Carlos had so fortunately interrupted. That was a buried secret. And Luiz himself, having expressed repentance very sincerely to Adora in private, had been moodily disturbed when told that Carlos was sending her home.

On the evening of her last day in the house of Carlos she was sitting watching the man she loved—watching him, eyes dulled by misery, while he strolled in the moonlit garden with Conchita by his side, little knowing that Carlos was purposely playing a part, hoping that Adora would by sheer jealousy be forced to admit her love for him. But Adora was mute. And meantime Luiz came to her, serving at least to distract her thoughts from their hopless quest of happiness denied her.

"Listen . . . ." The voice of Luiz in her ears throbbed with emotion. "You have yet time to change this foolish plan by which you leave here tomorrow. I beg of you, loveliest, to prove to me your forgiveness of my wicked folly that night by understanding how great an agony it is to me that I should lose you in this way. I love you to distraction——"

"Luiz . . . ." She laid slim fingers on his arm. "I am sorry, very sorry. I thank you for loving me so much. There was a time when I did not think so much of a man's love as I do now. I like to know that you feel that way for me. But—what can I do? I have no love for you."

"That will come. I will make you so happy that love must come to you——"

"Luiz, it has come. But—not for you."

"Then it was true, as you said that night? You are in love with Carlos?"

"Only too true."

"And he is marrying Conchita."

"I suppose so."

"Of course. But, in spite of that, you still love him?"

"In spite of it, so long as he is happy."

"Isn't that foolish? You can't remain single because of a man who loves another girl."

"That's the way with some women—the way with me."

"It is sheer folly. Do believe me, Adora mia, you are wrong. If you let me marry you, how soon I would prove to you that you had done the right thing! Will you not give me that chance?"

"Impossible. Can't you see that? How could I be your wife, when Conchita is your sister and married to Carlos? How then could I ever forget?"

"I would make you far too happy ever to think again of Carlos."

"No. I am sorry, Luiz. I am going back to England. That is the only way. I shall always think kindly of you. Soon you will meet someone else——"

"Never. There is no one in this world to compare with you. How can I lose you like this? I can't bear the thought. If I only could, I would go with you to your own country on that boat. Only—I can't. Won't you ever change your mind?"

"It could never change, Luiz. Please——" Adora urged him with tears in her eyes. "Do forget me, and let me forget my own misery."

He seemed to be a little touched by her tears. He took her hands in his and kissed them. He talked of other things reluctantly and with his moody eyes watching Carlos and his sister in the distance. And those eyes of his were full of hate for this man who stood between him and his desire.

Presently Adora slipped away from his side and went in to bed. It was not because of hate but because of unrequited love that she could no longer bear to watch the figures of Carlos and Conchita so close together and with the girl's uplifted lips so tantalizingly near to the down-bent head of Carlos.

Carlos, whose kisses had awakened Adora to love! She took that maddening thought to bed with her, lying for a long while unable to sleep on this her last night under his roof. She had only one satisfaction at all in the future life she was now facing. She had still the memory of those kisses, those caressing hands, those words of endearment.

Vivid and pulsing with life they still were and always must be. They were her dreamland, the sole glimpse of paradise still allowed her, never to be taken from her. Even Conchita could not rob her of her dreams. And so presently, in the hot and windless night, she drifted into her dreamland, which had Carlos as her lord and master.

Now she was in his arms, loving him and being loved, dreaming ecstatically in her profound slumber induced by the sultry night which lay heavy over the island like some invisible blanket. Then, pervading her dreamland, came a sense of violent shock which seemed to lift her up and fling her out of Paradise neck and crop . . . She found herself suddenly to be awake.

She found herself sitting up in a bed which actually was rocking under her. The walls of the house, to her amazement, made sharp, cracking noises. Below her, seemingly at an immense distance, heavy noises rumbled like thunder. The stagnant air of the bedroom was full of dust, choking her. In a frenzy of fear, she leaped from the bed and staggered to the door, which she flung open.

The passage was in darkness, but she heard voices. That of Carlos, answered by that of Luiz. One word bandied from one to the other:

"Earthquake . . . "

And again the house shook, its walls cracking. Adora, flitting on little white feet, had only one thought in her mind, one haven of security on her tongue as she ran:

"Carlos . . . I must find Carlos . . . "

CHAPTER XVII.

Love's Haven.

WHEN Adora entered the room of Carlos, lit only by a ghostly moonlight, she found it to be empty. The open windows led onto a veranda, and outside she could hear Carlos speaking. He was evidently reassuring Conchita through the drawn chicks of her room.

"Nothing to be alarmed about, cara!" Adora could hear him saying, with a laugh. "This isn't nearly as bad as one we had a month ago. It's all over now, I expect. I should not let it keep me awake, if I were you."

Adora, reassured as well, felt ashamed to have displayed so much alarm as to have invaded his room for protection. She gathered her flimsy nightrobe about her and turned to flee back again before Carlos returned and discovered her. But, as she was reaching the door, Carlos himself came in and saw her.

"You?" he asked.

"I was afraid, Carlos," she explained under her breath. "I thought the whole house was falling in."

"No . . ." He laughed softly. "It is built so as to withstand possible earthquakes, Adora mia. You need not be afraid. I was just coming to reassure you, my dear. I ought to have remembered that you would be more startled even than the others."

He could see that she was ghastly white and shaking from head to foot, and he came towards her to throw an arm around her as she swayed. A wave of nausea had swept her, as it sweeps those who experience their first earth-shock. She felt dizzy and scarcely able to stand, but the feeling began to subside as his arm supported her and she was able to lean against him.

"Poor white darling. . . ."

He held her close, very tenderly. "You are frightened to death. Don't fear. I should let no harm happen to you if I could help it. Because, even if you do not love me, I still love you."

"You still love—me?"

Adora stared up at him in amazement. And now all fear had fallen from her, to be replaced by the sudden strength of hope. She asked herself—could those words be really true? Did he mean them? In them, she forgot the earthquake completely. The earth, indeed, was still and silent now. Even the sultry night had grown cooler. A clamor of affrighted jungle-noises, tumultuous a few seconds since, had died down. The silence was profound, broken only by her amazed whisper.

"Do you really mean that, Carlos?"

"Of course, I mean it, sweetest Adora. I have always meant it. I love you. I shall always love you."

"But—you are marrying Conchita?"

"Who told you that?"

"Conchita. Luiz."

"Well, well. . . . It certainly was once almost understood. But . . . understandings are sometimes broken. Certainly, with you gone back to England and hopeless because you did not love me, there might have come a time when I might have turned to Conchita, might have tried to forget you——"

"But, I could never, never have forgotten you, and—I don't want to go back to England. Not—if you do really love me still."

"You actually mean that I have been mistaken, that you—you love me yourself?"

Carlos whispered those words with such an agony of incredulous anxiety that Adora almost laughed out of sheer joy. Her moment had come, the moment of which she had fondly dreamed and despaired of as a vain hope. And now it had come she rose to it with an impassioned ecstasy. She stood before Carlos, white and virginal, her breasts heaving tumultuously beneath the thin lacy robe she wore, her heart in her eyes, desire in her parted lips as her bare white arms crept up to his shoulders, the little hands meeting behind his neck.

"I adore you, Carlos. I worship you, my darling. I seem to have loved you for ages, since the very beginning of time. Carlos, I want to belong to you."

He let her speak, his superb figure towering over her, his eyes moist with the emotions she stirred in him. Very, very slowly, his arms surrounded her, gathered her in. And then, all restraint thrown aside, he crushed her to him, his lips on hers, their shapes shadowed by the night.

It was some time before either of them spoke again, save for the mutual murmur of endearments softly breaking the silence in whispers of ecstasy. Presently Carlos released her a little, gazing down at her in wonderment, as if even now he could not quite believe that he was not dreaming.

"Tell me," he breathed. "When

Here's That New 8-Hour Lipstick

Just discovered in Paris by Edna Wallace Hopper. A new 8-hour lip coloring formulated on entirely new principle. Waterproof. Wearproof. Indelible. Ends constant "making-up."

EDNA WALLACE HOPPER, famous stage beauty, discovered it in Paris. A lip color that banishes all the smearing and fleeting life of present ways in make-up. An utterly new kind of lipstick.

She sent it to Hollywood, and it swept through the studios like a storm. Old-time lipsticks were discarded overnight.

Now—Kissproof, the world's largest makers of lipsticks, has obtained the formula from Miss Hopper, and offers its amazing results to you. A totally New type of lipstick, different from any other you have ever tried . . . Kissproof or any other kind.

You put it on before you go out. Then forget about it. Six hours, eight hours later your lips are still naturally lovely!

No more constant making-up. No more fuss and bother. Do you wonder that women are flocking to its use?

Utterly NEW Principle

It is different in formula and result from any previously known lipstick. It does what no other lipstick does or has ever done . . . actually seems to last indefinitely.

That's because the color pigment it embodies has never before been used in a lipstick. It holds where others smear and wear—yet it leaves no trace of greasy residue.

Then, too, it is a true, NATURAL color. Thus it ends that artificial smirk women have tried for years to overcome. A color that glorifies the lips to pulse-quickening loveliness—trust the French for that!

What To Ask For

To obtain, simply ask for the NEW Kissproof Indelible Lipstick (or Lip and Cheek Rouge). AND—remember it is NOT the "same" as any other lipstick known. Don't believe that just because you have tried Kissproof before—that you have tried this one. You haven't; this is ENTIRELY NEW.

Owing to tremendous demand, the price is as little as 50c—Edna Wallace Hopper paid $2.50 for the original in Paris. Two forms at all toilet counters—lipstick and lip and cheek rouge.

Lipsticks—Black and red enamel swivel case, 75c. Black and gold case 50c. Lip and Cheek Rouge—purse size, red and black enamel vanity with mirror, 50c. Newest Parisian Shades. Theatrical, Natural, Raspberry, Orange.

WHEN WE COME TO THE END of a Perfect Bath . . .

"There, now . . . we're almost finished! Just hold still a minute while I scrub your back . . ."

"Oooh, I feel so clean and cool!—all except that prickly heat around my neck."

"Well, I scrubbed it, but it won't come off. You should have used my powder, every day! It keeps away the prickly heat—and chafing, too."

"You mean it? And you'll put some on me—quick?"

"Wait 'til we're dry. Then you'll feel my powder come sprinkling down. All cool and gentle. It's softer than any you've ever felt. It'll make you so comfortable—you won't be chafed or prickly heated ever any more!"

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

B[illegible] Hackett. [illegible]

When [illegible] Bruce and Marlowe [illegible] the Jean Marie [illegible] they are [illegible] by foul play. [illegible] Ridley of the Leopard [illegible] where [illegible] are concerned.

Bruce [illegible] the resident and Ridley of [illegible] Fanchon [illegible] the Paiku [illegible] from Hackett [illegible] Van Kloort has already given it to Ridley. They decide to sail without a confession.

Bruce [illegible] from Fanchon. Against Marlowe's protest he decides to go to her [illegible] the secret of Hackett's death. Marlowe warns him that if he is not back by midnight the Helen will sail without him.

Ridley makes love to Carol, Hackett's daughter, but she escapes him and flees to the beach where Marlowe hides her until midnight, when they board the Helen.

Bruce demands the secret from Fanchon, but in the end falls for her allure, forgetting everything. When Ridley finds the Helen gone in the morning, he starts off in pursuit.

Bruce persuades Fairless of the Spanish Rake to set out with him after the two ships for a [illegible] share of the ambergris.

The Helen arrives at Paiku and Carol and Marlowe land and find the ambergris. On the way back to the Helen they become lost in a sudden fog and after rowing about for hours bump into a boat which they think is theirs. Carol and the ambergris are lifted aboard, but before Marlowe can follow he discovers it is not the Helen and the longboat sheers off into the fog again.

Carol finds herself and the ambergris in Ridley's power aboard the Leopard. A short time later Ridley's boat encounters the Spanish Rake. There is a terrible fight in which Ridley wounds Fairless with a [illegible] poisoned kris. Before Bruce can revenge his friend the Leopard disappears in the fog.

The next morning Bruce picks up Marlowe in the longboat and they finally sight the Leopard.

Ridley puts two shots from his cannon into the Spanish Rake and the ship begins to leak. Carol leaps into the sea and is rescued by Marlowe. They work the pumps madly to keep the vessel afloat. Bruce tells Carol he loves her, but she seems to share any man with Fanchon. Exhausted they finally make Lee Aves where the Leopard is laying at anchor.

Ridley has locked the ambergris in the cabin and gone to the House to accuse Van Kloort of double-crossing him. He beats the Governor then hurries to settle with Fanchon. When she resists his advances he throttles her and flees into the jungle.

Van Kloort makes out a warrant for Ridley's arrest for assaulting him. He wants to lock the skipper of the Leopard up so he can get the ambergris himself. The death of Fanchon is discovered and a posse organized to pursue Ridley.

Bruce realizes that he has lost Carol to Marlowe, who has loved her all along.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Up Dark River.

A SILENCE fell on the little group in Hendry's. They knew Ridley and they knew that he went armed night and day. Saunders was the first to speak.

"Anyone who's goin' after Ridley better say his prayers right now. There won't be time later on."

No, there would be no time later on. Ridley was a good marksman. Young Scarlett shuffled uneasily.

"Better spread out," said Marlowe. "If he's not near the shore most likely he's struck inland to try and make the north coast. Tell you what I reckon he'll do if that's his game. He'll get down to the river and follow it up. When he gets to the source he'll only have ten miles to go to hit the coast."

"Well?"

"We must take a catamaran up the river and watch the right bank. That's where he'll be, sooner or later. Some of us can beat through the woods, but I don't think we'll get him that way. But if he finds he's pursued he'll make for the river. Any man would. Where there's water, there's a chance of safety. He may try floating down on a log.

"Send the Kanakas through the woods with Saunders and Scarlett," Marlowe was saying. "Bruce and I will take the boat. Hendry, something to eat and a couple of bottles. We may be away two or three days."

He walked over to Van Kloort. "Come outside."

Van Kloort followed him meekly.

"Well?"

"Where's the stuff?"

"I don't know."

"Swear it?"

"It's the truth, Marlowe. I—Ridley — the case is altered — you see—"

"Things will have to come out," said Marlowe. "I suppose you've quarreled with him. That ambergris belongs to us. Do you hear? I got it. And it doesn't matter to you or any one else where or how I came by it."

"Paiku."

"You don't know that, and you can't prove it. If there's going to be an inquiry into that, there'll be an inquiry into other things as well. Do you get my meaning? It might be better not to raise any dust."

Van Kloort nodded. He was done. He couldn't argue and fight now that he was alone. Always he had been the weakest of the three. He rubbed his pudgy hands nervously, and cleared his throat.

"Carol will stay with Hendry till I come back," said Marlowe suddenly. "Do you hear? You leave her alone. She'll be all right there. And — don't let anyone go out to the Leopard until — until Ridley's found."

They eyed each other suspiciously.

"You think it's there?"

"Yes. So do you. Leave it there till I come back," said Marlowe.

He came close to Van Kloort.

"You double-cross me if you dare," he said quietly, and turned away.

Hendry came out with stores and together they went down to the water's edge. Here Puahe and Kahiva awaited them and soon a catamaran was made ready, the owner being rewarded with tobacco sticks and hair-oil for the loan of his vessel. Bruce came down sulkily to watch preparations. Marlowe flung explanations over his shoulder as he loaded the flimsy-looking craft.

Carol stole up and stood watching with dry eyes and white lips.

"Good luck," said Hendry at last. "Come, Carol. Ye'll bide with me till they come again."

She did not hear him. She walked up to Marlowe, raising anguished eyes to his.

"Must you go?"

He took her arm and led her out of earshot of the others.

"Don't worry," he begged her. "We'll get him all right. I'll look after Bruce for you."

She whirled round.

"Let him look after himself."

"What do you mean? Carol—do you mean—"

"I don't love him," she said fiercely.

"Then who—"

For answer Carol reached up and kissed Marlowe full on the mouth. Next moment she was running for Hendry's like a wild thing in flight. Marlowe stared after the flying figure in a dream. The touch of her lips set his pulses hammering. A heady sense of exultation filled him. He wanted to sing, to race madly across the sand, to do a thousand things that might work off the ecstasy that had him by the throat . . .

You'll never see an Old Town sag at the stern because the motor's too heavy. These boats don't get that way! Stern, keel, and ribs are reinforced for extra rigidity. Old Towns don't shiver, shake or vibrate either. And the heavy, non-leak, canvas-covering is seamless. Caulking never needed. Swift, light, well balanced, easy to handle and built to do heavy duty.

Bruce and Hendry were shouting at him. There was no time now. Later on when the fighting was done and he came back—he remembered that Fairless had not come back. Oh, away with that stuff! He hurried down to the boat and stepped in. Hendry grinned a farewell, and the boys pushed off.

The tide was still on the ebb. They made West Height and rounded it without difficulty. But once around the promontory they must contend with the outflow of the river. A strong steady current met them and progress was slow. But already the tide was on the turn. Presently it swung into a flow and they entered the mouth of the Dark River.

It was well named. The slow water crept like a great snake from the heart of Les Aves. A great swamp lay to the right, a gray-green place where sodden trees grew out of the squelching ground with haggard, rotten roots under whose arches dwelt a thousand nameless water-creatures. Marsh lilies grew here, great evil flowers of yellow splashed with purple stains. Their stickly leaves were traps for marsh-flies, scarlet water-beetles, slugs, mosquitoes.

For three miles the influence of the tide made itself felt. After that the sluggish stream swept slowly against the prow of the catamaran. The boys stood to their oars, their muscles rippling under the bronze skin. There was no sound of the sea now. The salt tang had faded from the air, giving place to a hot, sickly stench that rose from the banks. The slimy water sucked at the boat's keel. The heat of the noonday sun turned Bruce sick. He sat doggedly, his knees hunched to his chin, striving to choke back the nausea that swelled in his throat.

Marlowe encouraged the boys to put all their strength into their arms. Speed was essential. They must get well up the river ere they would stand a chance of seeing their quarry. They hugged the right bank of the river as they toiled upstream. Marlowe's keen eyes raked the water's edge in vain. The swamps slid away, giving place to thick undergrowth and overhanging trees. An unnatural stillness hung over the river. Unnatural! Was there anything real about this cursed place, this strange silent river bordered by snags and swamps and dying trees where the lichens hung like ghosts? Marlowe stared at the riot of color, the strange dark greens and browns broken by flaming patches of hibiscus, and wondered why people raved about the beauty of the islands. This wasn't beauty, this terrible luxuriance of life that fought and struggled for its existence against a thousand odds. There was something sinister about it all, some indescribable sense of rottenness, of decay, that chilled the blood.

He shook off his forebodings and turned to Bruce.

"Better draw in for a minute or two. The boys are getting fagged."

They drew in by the bank and rested, eating without enjoyment some of the food that Hendry had thrust into the boat. Their eyes, their ears remained alert, listening, watching for any sign of the man whom they sought. Van Kloort would throw out a wide net. Gradually it would close, drawing Ridley down to his last chance of escape, the river.

"Come on," said Marlowe, impatiently. "Kahiva, must make haste all same quick. Suppose Rideli makes hide."

He urged them onward, caring nothing for Bruce's taciturnity. The fellow sat with his chin in his hands and when Marlowe spoke he did not answer. Marlowe let him be. He guessed where Bruce's thoughts lay, torn between a woman dead and a woman alive . . .

Midday passed. The sticky heat set them sweating at every pore. Marlowe wiped his neck.

"We must be eleven miles in," he said thickly. "Oh, this heat!"

Bruce raised his head.

"Listen," he said suddenly.

The Kanakas stayed their dripping blades. Marlowe craned forward. Yes, there were sounds on the left, fifty yards ahead, sounds of someone crashing madly through the tangled bushes in a desperate attempt to reach the safety of the river.

The safety of the river . . .

CHAPTER XXXVII.

The First Skirmish.

RIDLEY flung his hair out of his eyes and plunged deeper into the woods. Where was he? The maddening sameness of the trees set his head spinning. He marked a tree that had a heart shaped scar three feet from the base. He walked away due north, leaving it behind him. For an hour he fought his way through brushwood and thicket, where the lianas tripped him and the tui-tui tore at his clothes. Presently he leaned to rest against a tree. He found it had a heart shaped scar three feet from the base.

He began to lose his head. He was no landsman, to pick a careful trail through unknown country. He was lost among this hopeless green confusion. His longing for sight and sound of the sea grew intense. Before his bloodshot eyes rose a picture of the Leopard tossing uneasily at anchor, waiting for the master who should guide her out to open sea. The sea! The word splashed across his heated brain, bringing with it memories of storms and winds and decks awash with green water.

He must get back to it. He must conquer thirst and fear and the guns of his enemies and get back to his ship. The thought of the treasures aboard awoke no covetous instinct. He was beyond caring for the stuff. All his mind centered now on the question of his return to the Leopard. All the treasures in the world could go hang so long as he might feel his hand on the tiller, the wet spray blowing into his arms.

He set out again, doggedly, squaring his shoulders in defiance of the strange gods of the wood, who turned his footsteps back by the way he had come. He chose the steeper ground this time and bent his back to the climb. Up, up, up till he stood breathless on a bare ridge of ground above the trees, where he could stare down at the steaming forests that sweltered in the noonday sun. He shaded his eyes from the glare and looked back the way he had come. His eyes, trained to sweep the far horizon, fixed themselves at last on a brown stick that crossed an open space far below. A Kanaka, surely. Yes. What was he doing? Ah, he was waving to someone on the right. Two of 'em, eh? Now what the——

He knew. He guessed at the reason for their presence in the woods below. Most likely there was a score of them on his track, with old Van somewhere in the rear—well in the rear—to urge the hounds forward. They would hunt him as they would hunt a wolf, spreading a wide net, closing in bit by bit until they had him snarling with his back to the wall. Well, they should have a good run for their money. Was Marlowe there? Most likely he was leading the pack. The Spanish Rake must be in port by now.

He turned northeast and saw far below a silver thread that was the river. Here was a chance then. Here was a way out. If he could reach it, if he could plunge down through the tangled growth to the river, he had the last chance that he'd be likely to get. Van Kloort wouldn't think of that. His brain wouldn't stretch so far. Marlowe—but Ridley thrust Marlowe from his mind. He set his face northeast and began the drop down to the distant water.

It was worse than he had thought. He had to hack his way until his arm ached and his knife grew blunt. The steep ground shelved suddenly and he swung himself over the ledge and dropped fifteen feet into a cluster of sickly green fly-catcher plants. He staggered to his feet and went on, running now, heedless of his torn clothes, his blood-stained hands. Down, down, through the riot of growth that the fecund earth displayed so lavishly.

As he gained the lower slopes the heat increased. The sweat poured into his eyes, blinding him, lending strange movements to the motionless tree-ferns, setting the umbrella-plants shaking in a ghostly wind. He crashed headlong into a swamp where a spring rose out of the earth and meandered downhill towards the river. His clothes were black with wet, soggy mold as he stumbled to his feet again.

He skirted the quag and came on a clump of scarlet lilies. Their perfume rose sweet and heady in the hot, damp air. The memory that caught at his heart as their perfume swept over him sent him reeling against a palm, his hands over his face. Was this he, was this indeed Ridley, this fugitive, this hunted, terrified runaway?

Surely he must be near the river. There was a dampness in the stifling air. He listened and could hear nothing. Down, down through the lush clinging stems, the climbing twining stems that fought and struggled to reach the sunlight where jasmine and frangipani grew thick and luscious, scenting the air with their pungent incense.

He saw the river fifty yards below. For a moment he paused, gathering his strength for the last spurt. Once there he would float down to the tide on some log and make his way at night to the Leopard under cover, with the log to sustain him. His spirits leapt at the nearness of achievement.

With all his strength he plunged down the slope, crashing through the undergrowth like a hunted animal. His throat burned. Desire for the cool water swelled in him. Twenty yards, a dozen, five, and he flung himself down by the river's edge with his torn hands dangling limply in the water.

It was achievement at last. Exultation awoke and blew its trumpet in his beating heart. Courage, courage! Half the day's work was over. There remained yet the hazard of getting downstream and out to harbor. But was it likely that he would fail?

He scooped some water into his hands and drank greedily. He splashed it over his face and his throat. On a sun-warmed stone a little green lizard paused to watch him. He smiled at the intent gaze of the creature. Cunning little beggars, those fellows, cunning little—

He could not believe it. The catamaran that slid out like a shadow from the overhanging trees could be nothing but a trick of the eyesight. A ghost. Yes, a ghost. Even when Bruce raised his gun Ridley did not move. But the shot that followed, a shot that splintered the stone where the lizard had been a second before, shocked him into consciousness of deadly peril. Lying flat he took aim and saw Bruce crumple up without a sound. At the sight he shouted, a wild insane yell of triumph. That fellow had had Fanchon in his arms. She had given him what she had denied to Ridley. Death by shooting was too good for him. He should have been strung up and hacked to bits, dying slowly under a thousand tortures for his presumption.

Kahiva swung the boat round and made straight for shore. Ridley sprang to his feet. Well, he'd been in tighter places than this and got out by the skin of his teeth. Was it likely his luck would fail now? He fired twice. One shot went wide, the other grazed Puahe's shoulder and wrung a scream of terror from him. Ridley swore aloud. It was Marlowe he wanted, Marlowe whom he feared, Marlowe with whom the ultimate encounter must be fought to the death.

He backed into the bushes, taking cover, crouching for the shot that should free his destiny for ever from the other's dominion. He was a fraction of a second too late. Marlowe flung himself flat in the shelter of the catamaran, almost overturning

Use Powder

Do as Your Dentist does—when he cleans your teeth

Powder Cleans and Whitens Teeth—as nothing else can

There is nothing known that will clean and polish teeth so quickly and leave them so gleaming white—as POWDER.

That is why your dentist, when cleaning your teeth, as you know—always uses powder.

As it is only the powder part of any dentifrice that cleans, a dentifrice that is ALL POWDER just naturally cleans best.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder IS ALL POWDER—100% cleansing properties. This is more than twice the cleansing properties of tooth pastes.

Dull Teeth Become White

For over SIXTY YEARS dentists everywhere have prescribed Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, because—teeth simply cannot . . . remain dull and film coated when it is used.

It cleans off all stains and tartar, and polishes the teeth in a harmless and practical way that leaves them sparkling—many shades whiter.

No Glycerine—No Grit

Being an ALL POWDER dentifrice, Dr. Lyon's contains no glycerine, therefore does not soften the gums. It is free from all grit or pumice and cannot possibly scratch, or injure, the softest enamel, as years of constant use have shown.

Dr. Lyon's is the only dentifrice old enough to prove it can be safely used for life.

Neutralizes Acids

In addition to cleansing, it is probably the greatest neutralizer known for ACID MOUTH, being many times more effective than Milk of Magnesia.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder keeps your teeth REALLY CLEAN and clean teeth mean—firm, healthy gums, freedom from pyorrhea and the least possible tooth decay.

Brush your teeth with Dr. Lyon's regularly—consult your dentist periodically—and you will be doing ALL that you can possibly do, to protect your teeth.

Lasts Longer—Costs Less

Once you use Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, you will never be satisfied to use anything else. It leaves your teeth feeling so much cleaner, your mouth so refreshed, and your breath so sweet and pure.

Dr. Lyon's is not only doubly efficient, but it costs only half as much to use. Even a small package lasts twice as long as a tube of tooth paste.

In use over 60 years

"John—can't you go alone? I'm simply Exhausted!"

It never occurred to her that shoes she THOUGHT perfectly comfortable could cause habitual fatigue.

Thousands of women like her—worn out, exhausted, nerves frazzled, so tired at the day's end that pleasure is impossible.

The reason is simple—often unsuspected. Nothing more nor less than plain, ordinary, "comfortable feeling" shoes. Shoes that are ill-fitting, improperly designed—that torture delicate nerves and muscles of the arch.

Though you may never realize it, wrong shoes impose a twisting, torturing, unnatural strain on ankles, calves and the whole muscle structure of your body. No wonder you're tired!

Slip on a pair of gloriously comfortable FLEXIBLE arch Cantilevers. Watch fatigue vanish. Youth, life and buoyancy return. You feel like a new person. Cantilever's scientifically designed FLEXIBLE arches give firm but yielding support to the feet. Your foot fits naturally in the shoe without cramping toes or slipping heels. And best of all Cantilevers are neither awkward nor ugly as you would expect of shoes so marvelously comfortable. You will find them in trim, swagger styles. Up-to-the-minute models in the new-season vogue.

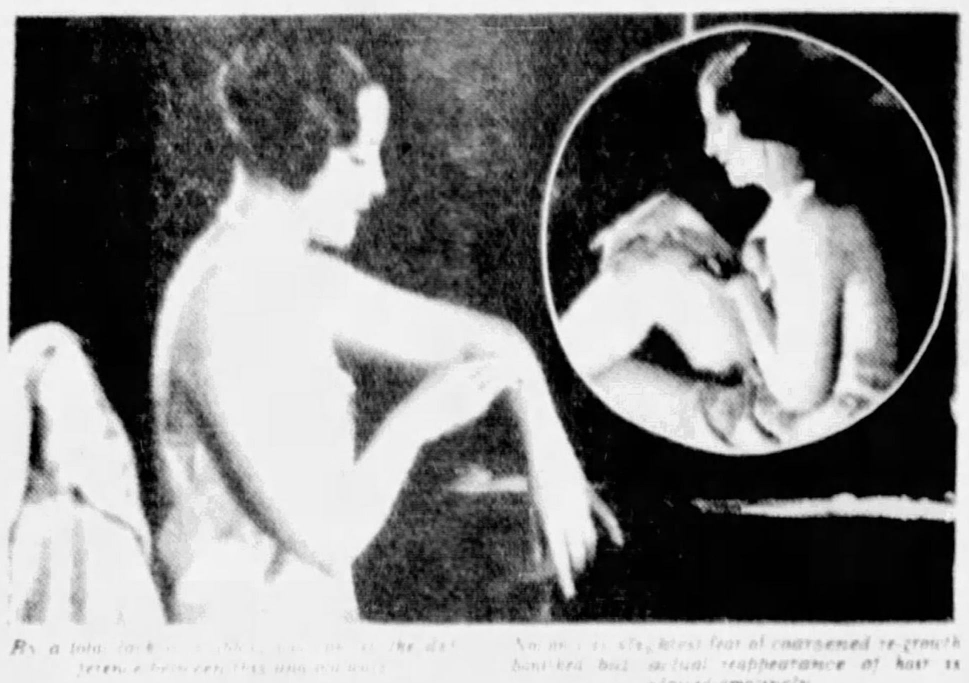
Now Simple To Really Get Rid of Arm and Leg Hair

Utterly Without the Problem of Coarsened Re-growth



A Discovery That is Proving to the Wonder of the Cosmetic World That Hair Can Not Only Be Removed Instantly, But Its Reappearance Delayed Amazingly.

A new way of removing arm and leg hair has been found that not only removes every vestige of hair instantly but that banishes the stimulated hair growth thousands of women are charging to the razor and less modern ways. A way that not only removes hair but delays its reappearance remarkably.

It is changing previous conceptions of cosmeticians about hair removing. Women are flocking to its use. The creation of a noted laboratory, it is different from any other hair remover known.

What It Is

It is an exquisite toilet creme resembling a superior beauty clay in texture. You simply spread it on where hair is to be removed. Then rinse off with water. That is all. Every vestige of hair is gone so completely that even by running your hand across the skin not the slightest trace of stubble can be felt. And the reappearance of that hair is delayed surprisingly!

When re-growth finally does come, it is utterly unlike the re-growth following the razor and old ways. You can feel the difference. No sharp stubble. No coarsened growth.

The skin, too, is left as soft as a child's. No skin roughness, no enlarged pores. You feel freer than probably ever before in your life of annoying hair growth.

Where To Obtain

It is called NEET—and is on sale at all drug and department stores and beauty parlors. Costs only a few cents. 283RA it with his violence. The bullet ploughed up the water beyond in a long spraying furrow. Instantly Ridley fired again. But the hammer snapped harmlessly. He had fired his last shot.

He stared stupidly at the useless weapon. What a fool! He was defenseless now, save for his knife. The instinct for flight overcame him. He turned and fought his way into the covering bushes. Escape, he must escape. He would fight Marlowe yet, but not that day. He must have time. He must make a getaway while he could. But where? The thought of the net that Van Kloott had spread, the net that must even now be closing toward the river, made him pause. . . .

Marlowe ran the catamaran ashore and leaped out. He and Kahiva lifted Bruce and laid him down gently on the stones. From his chest the blood poured in a steady sinister stream. When they touched him he opened his eyes and moaned faintly. They ripped off his shirt, folding it into a pad and pressing it hard against the welling flood. In less than a minute it was a sodden rag.

Marlowe stood up, his decision made. If Bruce wasn't to bleed to death he must get him back to the town.

"Kahiva," he said, "must put Biruti in catamaran, all same go back. Kahiva takem Biruti, Puahe in catamaran. Bimeby Biruti he die all same quick. Suppose Kahiva make haste all same devil suppose Biruti he not die."

"Marilu come too?"

"No. Stay find Rideli. Bimeby Kahiva come back all same find Marilu. Savvy?"

"Savvy, Marilu."

They lifted Bruce again and laid him in the catamaran. Marlowe impressed on Puahe that while Kahiva paddled for dear life he must hold the wounded man and do his best to staunch the flow of blood. He showed him how to keep the wet rags pressed hard against the wound.

"Marlowe," said Bruce weakly, "what's the matter?"

"Don't talk. You'll be all right."

"Did you get him?"

"Not yet."

"My chest—"

"Go," said Marlowe to the boys.

Kahiva pushed off, swinging the boat downstream. His brown body was rigid with importance. He would not fail. He would take the wounded Biruti back to the town and come again for Marilu. No thought of danger or hindrance entered his mind. Had he not paid many sticks of tobacco to the witch-doctor for a charm to preserve life and keep off evil spirits? It was round his neck now, on a chain of plaited goat's hair.

Proudly he regarded the little bag that swung to and fro on his chest. It contained the tip of a sow's ear, the first joint of a dead man's right thumb and three hairs taken from a woman in childbirth. Was there anything on earth that could harm a man so protected? No, indeed. He steered into midstream, intent on the fulfilment of the task that his master had laid on his brown shoulders.

Biruti was a very sick man, there was no doubt of that. He was talking, shouting even, long difficult words that Kahiva could not follow. Lest such cries should attract evil spirits from the swamps, he began to sing. His high, clear voice floated up and up between the lush green banks.

"I am Kahiva the son of Kuara.
I am very strong, very mighty.
See, I hasten along the river
Bearing Biruti to safety.
Keep away, oh ghosts.
Turn aside, oh shodows of the dead.
Turn aside. . . ."

Marlowe watched the catamaran swing around the bend. When it vanished he turned to the land again, considering what he should do. Ridley lurked somewhere near, waiting for him to move, watching him, planning to spring on him unawares. Where was he? No man could go far in that density without betraying himself. Marlowe strained his ears to catch a sound. But there was nothing save the sucking water that slid by twelve feet away.

The lianas that straggled over the ground to the right had been wrenched as though a man's heavy boot had tripped over them. Marlowe took out his knife and began a cautious passage. The place was so silent, so still, that it got on his nerves. At every step he paused, listening, staring, turning his head sharply at some fancied movement. Time itself seemed to stand still, waiting, standing on tiptoe in this strained expectation, this tense waiting for what was ahead. The sense of being watched haunted him. Who could say from what hiding place Ridley would spring, knife in hand, wild eyes flashing, as they closed for this last encounter? On, on, till the world resolved itself into a mass of clinging stems and strange dark green leaves. The tree-ferns towered above his head, the spotted convolvulus thrust its evil blossoms into his face. He had a queer thought that divers walking under the sea must move in just such a green twilight.

He came upon a small patch of open ground where five tall palms grew. On the other side of it Ridley waited.

His shirt was torn to ribbons, there was blood on his chest. His face was as white as death and in his hand he held a knife. Marlowe caught his breath. So it had come at last. His blue eyes narrowed as he came forward slowly.

"Ridley!"

"Shoot me down," Ridley jeered between white lips. "Go on, shoot."

"What do you take me for?" Marlowe roared at him.

They advanced, circling warily, as tigers before they spring. They measured each other, judging where the weak points lay, holding each other's eyes to guard against sudden attack. Nearer and nearer they drew, their clenched hands showing the blue veins that stood out with the strain of coming battle.

Ridley put down his head and charged. He had Marlowe round the thighs, his head pressed against the other's ribs. Marlowe swung his fists, crashing down on the spine till Ridley jerked upright to defend himself. They closed, swaying like reeds in the wind, their bare chests crushed together, their bodies locked in a fierce embrace. Marlowe ducked suddenly, breaking away, freeing himself from those mighty arms that were pressing the blood from his heart. Ridley came on again and caught his enemy's jaw with a right hook that sent Marlowe staggering against a tree.

He shook the sweat out of his eyes and clenched to meet Ridley's attack. The other came on like a bull, seeking to grapple again, to throw his opponent. He was the heavier. His great fists crashed through the skin, drawing blood. He shouted at the sight, a hoarse exultant shout that went echoing to the wide sky. He fought now with the insane fury of a man who has drawn his enemy's blood. The heavy blows that rained on Marlowe's shoulders and chest began to leave their mark in great welts.

Marlowe was coughing. He drew back and crouched for the attack. Three paces off he sprang, his arms about Ridley's knees, his whole weight pressing the other back. Ridley staggered. To reach that crouched figure he must bend lower. Without warning Marlowe's right shot up, catching him on the point of the chin, throwing him off his balance.

But he was not down. He sprawled sideways and recovered himself blindly, conscious of danger, alert for some trick of wrestling that would overthrow him. His lips drew back in a snarl.

"I'll get you, blast your eyes."

"You got Hackett—"

"Yes," Ridley shouted at him. "Yes, I killed him. He said he was the last man I'd kill. Liar, liar! And after that there was Fairless—"

"You didn't kill Fairless," said Marlowe, between his bruised lips. "I shot him. You blackguard, that kris was poisoned. Hobi—he was screaming—"

A mist swam before Ridley's eyes. His heart thudded sickeningly. So he had not been the one to kill Fairless. What if Hackett's prophecy had been right after all? What if he had slain his last man? They say the dying can see far. But what did it mean if it were true? That he would never defeat the man who leant panting against the tall palm tree? Fear took hold of him, gripping his throat with cold hands. The last man! He looked with dazed eyes at his hands, the hands that had killed Fanchon, and his terror rose until it overpowered him.

SHE GRIEVED FOR HER TROUSSEAU LINENS . . until she learned how to remove stains, scorched spots and mildew with Clorox . . . . . .

LINENS, stored away, become yellow—spots and stains come with use—badly laundered linens are gray—what to do? The woman who uses Clorox has the remedy . . . For Clorox can be safely used on even the finest linens. Added to the soaking suds or first rinse, Clorox makes white cottons and linens snowy-white and stain free. It is not even necessary to boil them. Ordinary stains disappear in the laundering process, while stubborn stains, such as fruit, berry, ink and medicine, even scorched spots and mildew, require only a slightly stronger solution.

Moreover, every time Clorox is used to cleanse or bleach it also deodorizes and disinfects.

✣ Here's the Vital Spot ✣ where Yeast gets in its Effective Work . . . ✣ bringing Real Health! ✣

RIGHT HERE, where digestion starts, 90% of our common ills begin because we let wastes gather.

THREE CAKES of fresh yeast daily, eaten before or between meals, soften accumulated wastes and help the body clear them away. With elimination made normal once more, joyous health soon comes back again.

MORE FUN from life is the result when waste has been eliminated from the intestinal tract.

They eat 3 Cakes a Day... REGULARLY

LITERALLY thousands of people in the United States and Canada have found new health through eating yeast. Men, women, children, rich folk and plain folk. So many of them, there must be many in your own circle.

You may not know that they eat yeast. People do not often discuss the ways and means they use in achieving health.

But when you see men and women radiant with health . . . enjoying every minute of the day . . . never seeming to tire . . . boasting glorious skins and marvelous complexion color . . . you can very nearly put this down as certain:

Either they are regular followers of the yeast routine, or they have been lucky enough to escape

That's the secret of keeping internally clean by the Yeast method the prevalent evil that eating yeast corrects!

That's a broad statement, but here's why it is true . . .

The picture above, on the left, depicts the stomach and intestinal tract. It is in this region that your body draws its sustenance from the food you eat.

This region must be clean and healthy. If waste matter is allowed to gather there, as it does in many cases, the body absorbs poisons from fermenting residue instead of nutritive elements. The skin grows clouded, or suffers blemishes. Resistance to sickness is reduced; colds and headaches are apt to follow. Appetite grows dull.

In short, we suffer half-health, which may soon lead to serious ills.

Therefore, it is vital that we give this region regular, intelligent care. Wastes must be cleaned away. Elimination kept complete and regular. Poisons must be prevented from forming and seeping into the system.

That is what Fleischmann's Yeast does. It clears away poison-breeding material, so that the skin clears. It fosters digestion, so that normal appetite is restored. It strengthens resistance to illness by providing fresh and constant nourishment. Thus the whole body benefits. Clear skin, clear eyes, renewed vitality.

Get at the trouble, beginning today.

You can buy Fleischmann's Yeast at grocers', restaurants, soda fountains. Just eat three cakes every day, regularly—a cake before each meal, or between meals and at bedtime—plain or in a third of a glass of water (hot or cold) or any way you like. Remember, every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast is rich in three vitamins indispensable to health—vitamins B, G and D.

Fleischmann's Yeast is fresh yeast... the only kind that benefits you fully. Eat 3 cakes a day!

Secrets of London's Most Notorious Night Club

clothing. I'll drive you out to Hendon in the car." Hendon was the airdrome in the north of London, where he had his airplane.

The Earl went home to change. He had forgotten all about his wife till then, but when he arrived at their mansion flat he was reminded of her, and he went to see if she were asleep. He discovered then that she had not been home at all. However, he changed and went off to pick up Betty.

They drove out to Hendon, which is about seven miles to the north of London, and he got out his 'plane, tuned up, and the Earl and the dance instructress, whom his wife had engaged to take up his attentions so that she could be free in her affair with her new flame, rose into the air.

Whether it was a case of "the morning after the night before" and shaky nerves, I don't know. But at four hundred feet up the machine suddenly dived and it crashed to the ground. A crowd of mechanics rushed across the airdrome to find the Earl and his companion alive, but unconscious and badly injured. When they were taken to the hospital it was found that he had his shoulder and several ribs broken and several face wounds. Betty had both arms broken and a big cut on her face which had to be stitched up.

Betty and the Earl lay in the same hospital for some weeks. The Earl was delirious for some days, and it was a striking thing that through all his ravings he never once mentioned his wife's name. Always that of Betty, although his wife sat at his bedside every day. I don't know what her feelings must have been as she heard her husband calling for the girl whom she had introduced to him at our Manhattan Club in order to further her own love affair. With woman-like inconsistency, she had once more fallen in love with her husband, and she was torn with anguish that he should have completely forgotten her. She also forgot that she had gone for a long motor run into the country and had breakfasted at an up-river hotel with the man who had suddenly infatuated her at the club.

Both the Earl and Betty recovered. But he never went back to his wife. Betty never went back to night clubs nor to acting as a dance instructress. For there was a scar on her face that had completely altered her expression and had spoiled all her beauty. It was a dearly earned $50 in her case. As for the Earl and his wife, they were divorced some months after that night, and he has remarried, while she lives alone somewhere on the Continent.

Another affair which had some similarity to that of the young Earl and Betty, yet which had a different sequel, was that of a middle-aged Baronet, who, for some years, had been a frequenter of West End haunts. He had, in fact, had a great many "affairs" with different women, and yet his wife still lived with him, seemingly unsuspecting of his frolics and philandering.

He was greatly enamoured of a lady who was, for a time, very prominent in society circles. Her husband, who is dead now, was the proprietor of a very big group of enterprises. Even before she became a widow she was noted for her warm heart and her ready acceptance of the attentions of male admirers.

She and the Baronet developed a clandestine love affair. They met and went out together, but always to places where they were pretty sure of not meeting people in his own circle. Why they should ever have visited the "43 Club" with that idea I don't know, for at the time about which I am speaking one was sure to meet half of London society at this or one of our other clubs.

At any rate, the Baronet and the wife of the capitalist came along one night to the "43," and they danced together all evening and made it obvious to all who saw them that they were lovers. They stayed on till the early hours of the morning and then left together. I was not present, but our manager told me what occurred as they stepped out into Gerrard Street to go to the Baronet's car.

The car had been parked a little way along from the club entrance. As the couple walked along they became slightly separated in the crowd of people that was hanging about on the pavement waiting for taxis or their own cars. Sir Arthur walked up to his car with Lady X just behind him, when Sir Arthur's wife appeared seemingly from nowhere.

She confronted her husband.

"Ah, I thought so. I've caught you at last," she cried. "To think I never suspected it for a long time. Anyhow, now I know, and for you," she turned to Lady X, "I know just what you are. I shall put you in your place in the divorce court."

Sir Arthur was dumfounded and stood there not quite knowing what to do or say. He was even more dumfounded when the door of his car opened and a radiant vision of young womanhood stepped out and walked up to Sir Arthur's wife.

"Haven't you made a mistake in at least one thing?" said the girl, who was "Frankie," one of our dancing partners at the club. She spoke to Sir Arthur's wife. "You seem to be making out, so far as I can see, that this lady," she indicated Lady X, "and your husband are together. As a matter of fact, it is I who am with your husband. Not in any funny way. Just that he offered to drive me as far as the door of my flat."

The three people stood there staring. Not one of them knew quite what to make of the position, and Sir Arthur's wife least of all.

"Are you trying to tell me," she said at last, "that you are with my husband, and that this lady has nothing at all to do with it?"

"Just that and nothing else," said Frankie, who was one of our coolest and most sophisticated dance instructresses.

Sir Arthur's wife looked baffled. So did Sir Arthur. But Lady X had taken her cue and had vanished along Gerrard Street in a network of narrow lanes that come in behind the Shaftesbury Theatre and from Charing Cross Road.

Then the baronet's wife turned on her heel and walked back to her own car, in which, as it happened, she had been coming up from a late party at the Savoy Hotel to go home to Cavendish Square. She went away in it.

Sir Arthur turned to Frankie.

"I say, that's wonderful of you. Deuced sporting. But what on earth made you do it? And what the devil were you doing in my car?"

"Now, look here," said Frankie, who was as candid as her name at all times, "let us get it clear. I didn't do it for you, you silly old ass. I don't care a hoot if you get into trouble with your wife, and I don't care a hoot, either, who with. Except with Lady X. Some months ago she did me a darned good turn. I'm not going to tell you what it was, but it was enough for me that I wanted to do her a good turn back. I heard all the bother because I went out with a boy friend to sit in your car and talk. So I thought whatever happened I'd get Lady X clear. Seems I've done it," concluded Frankie laughing joyously. "Now you get home and make your peace if you can, you silly juggins."

I wouldn't for a moment claim that all the gold-digging dancing partners have hearts of gold, but I will say that most of them, like Frankie, rarely forget a good turn done them. Neither do they forget a bad one.

Here is an example of the latter type of case.

One night a party of four men came down to the "43." They all chose dancing partners, and so the party at the table became

A DESSERT OF GEM-LIKE BEAUTY—YET SO SIMPLE

Spiced Pears in Strawberry Jelly—Cook a 2-inch stick of cinnamon and 6 cloves in 1¼ cups boiling water for 5 minutes; remove spices. In 1 cup of the boiling hot liquid completely dissolve 1 package Royal Quick Setting Gelatin (strawberry flavor). Stir in 1 cup cold water.

Chill until it begins to thicken. Place 6 halves of canned pears on end around sides of deep ring mould. Pour on thickened gelatin. Slice 2 halves of pears and mix into gelatin on top of mould.

Chill until firm. Unmould; fill center and garnish with white grapes and sliced pears.

Serves 6. Approximate cost—34¢.

Only one way to get Quick Setting Gelatin

Ask for it by name . . . . "ROYAL"

Of course, you want quick setting gelatin. Women as busy as you are haven't time to bother with the old-fashioned kind . . . that takes all afternoon, and even then sometimes fails to set.

So be sure to ask your grocer for "Royal." Otherwise you will not get the quick setting kind.

* * *

No other gelatin sets so fast as Royal. This new quick setting gelatin jells in an hour . . . or less, with electric refrigeration.

In fact—if you are in a great hurry—you can slip small moulds into the freezing tray. Or pour the liquid gelatin right into the tray itself . . . it will set in 15 or 20 minutes.

But whether you use a small or large mould . . . whether you chill it in an electric refrigerator or an ice box, Royal Quick Setting Gelatin sets nearly twice as fast as ordinary jellied desserts. And when you try Royal, you'll discover that it's not only quicker . . . it tastes more delicious. Royal flavors are richer—more true to the fruit.

Warm red raspberries, glossy ripe cherries, scarlet strawberries. That's what you taste in Royal Gelatin Dessert. The ripe juiciness of orange . . . the piquant tartness of lemon . . . the refreshing coolness of lime.

With these six delicious Royal flavors—and the many ways to serve them—you can have a constant variety of delightful, easy desserts.

* * *

For dinner tonight, mould a package of Royal in a shallow pan. When firm, cut into sparkling cubes and combine with a bit of fruit.

One delicious combination is Royal Lime with pineapple cubes, topped with a perky snippet of mint. And your own ingenuity will suggest others just as refreshing.

It's always a good idea to keep a package or two of each flavor on hand.

And remember—when you buy—that the only way to get quick setting gelatin is to ask for it by name: "Royal." Tell your grocer nothing else will do.

Royal Chocolate Pudding takes only 6 minutes to prepare, yet is thoroughly cooked, and has a smoother, more velvety texture . . . and a richer, creamier flavor . . . than any chocolate pudding you've ever tasted. It is made with arrowroot, a starch long recognized as unusually nutritious and easily digested.

It's simple and easy — just add cold milk and bring to a boil. You'll find the directions on the package. At your grocer's. Only 10¢ per package.

Short Cuts With Summer Shortcakes

By Mrs. Christine Frederick,
The Distinguished Authority on Household Efficiency.

SHORTCAKE—a dish every he-man loves, a dessert that is surely 100 per cent American, and one which looks like the proverbial million dollars even though it consists of nothing but a simple bread dough and a box of berries. Shortcake [is] the ideal Summer dessert because it is so easy to make, so ready of digestibility, and so glorified in its dignified taste and colorful appearance. With its red or plum-colored berry jewels it graces the table like a coronation crown and makes even the plainest Sunday [meal] a guest occasion.

The controversy as to whether the preferable shortcake base is a real, genuine biscuit dough, or a spongecake, rages with an intensity only equaled by the discussion of whether it is better "to dunk," or "not to dunk" cornbread.

Both sides have ardent adherents. The author sees all on the side of the biscuit dough shortcake as being a native form of local cookery, and because its hot, biscuity texture provides more contrast than any cake, dry textured spongecake could possibly give when used with chilled and watery acid fruits.

How did this luscious combination of hot biscuit and cold fruit happen to originate? Quite possibly some New Englander—or was it a Southerner?—housewife who had been making baking powder biscuits or beaten biscuits for years, found that she had on hand a few left-over strawberries or huckleberries. And thinking casually to use them up, she served them together. Happy chance! For now the two are indissolubly joined in the Great American Dessert—fruit shortcake—which is liked by our English cousins and admired by our French friends.

The housewife who can make dandy biscuit has any shortcake at the tip of her spoon—or I should say in this case, at the tip of her kitchen case knife. For success in making any shortcake dough depends on the skill and rapidity with which it is cut with a knife, mixed, rolled—and baked.

The dry ingredients of flour, salt, baking powder, and perhaps a suspicion of sugar, must be sifted several times to insure even blending so that the dough will be porous, light and of similar texture throughout. The shortening—and here is the secret—must be very cold—and added to the flour in tiny bits which are then cut with any flat-bladed knife.

Some cooks, those who are born cooks only, may use their fingers in manipulating a shortcake dough, but the rest of us should be wise and use a stout case knife for cutting in the fat, until we too become artists. Because an over heavy pressure from fingers is what makes an over heavy dough an unthinkable disaster!

The liquid, too, which must be added to bind the dough, should also be chilled. Only enough, the least possible, may be added, almost drop by drop until the desired soft dough stage is reached. It must be moist, and yet permit rapid handling.

In making a single large shortcake, toss the mass of soft dough on a floured board and divide into two parts. Pat into shape, or roll lightly until one inch thick. For individual portions, use a cutter slightly larger than a biscuit cutter, and having a scalloped edge to give a pretty effect.

The dough may be baked in well greased pie tins; but often there is more success if the dough is baked on top of an inverted tin. This practice allows a free and even circulation of hot air to strike all around the biscuit while it is baking. The oven for shortcakes should always be preheated and what is called a quick oven.

This means for those who wisely use temperature in their baking, 450 degrees F. held for 15 minutes when the shortcakes are small, or 425 degrees F. held for 20 minutes when the shortcake is a large single cake. The two layers may be placed on top of each other, and baked together, being sure that the dough was generously spread with melted butter before baking, so that the layers will easily split apart.

All fruits for shortcake fillings should be ripe, slightly crushed, and allowed to stand sprinkled with sugar for about two hours before use—½ cup of sugar to every 1 cup crushed fruit juice; it can be increased by boiling 1 cup sugar with ½ cup of water to a heavy syrup and combined with the fruit. A teaspoon or two of butter may be added to give richness. A few drops of lemon juice or some extract will bring out the fruit flavor.

If there are any who prefer the spongecake basis, then at least see that the shortcake is made from fresh, homemade spongecake with a moist texture. Nothing is more store-made than dry, brittle and flavorless spongecake used with fruits.

Any one can beat up a successful spongecake in 15 minutes. Use well sifted cake flour—not heavy glutinous bread flour—and after blending the confectioner's sugar, the flour and the hot or cold water required by your recipe then fold in the whipped eggs. Never beat the eggs, or stir any spongecake mixture, because that breaks apart the air bubbles which the beating has done its best to enclose in the whipped eggs. Use a moderate slow oven, evenly heated. An oven indicator or thermometer is most useful for this and all delicate cake baking.

Strawberries and shortcake seem inseparably associated, but a shortcake with other fruit filling tastes equally delicious. In this early Summer season pineapples are at their best and cheapest in many markets, and a filling of shredded fresh pineapple alone, or combined with cut strawberries, makes a most flavorful and something-different filling.

Use all fruits right along as they ripen, raspberries, black and huckleberries, cherries, even rhubarb. Peaches and the later Summer fruits make equally luscious fillings for the two buttery brown layers that compose every shortcake.

For those who prefer this spongecake type there are many white or spongecake recipes which may be followed. If such a mixture is baked in a ring or border mold and turned to cool, then the center cavity can be filled with the sweetened berries and topped with whipped cream. One of the newest baking pans has a center opening exactly suited to making this kind of novel shortcake. The same pan design can be secured in small individual cake pans, very attractive for company service, bridge and Summer porch parties, etc.

The standard recipe for Mother's Old-Fashioned Shortcake will enable every homemaker to meet with success, using such variations as her own inspiration may suggest:

Mother's Old-Fashioned Shortcake. Two cups bread flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 5 tablespoons shortening, ¾ cup milk, butter, sweetened berries, whipped cream. Sift flour, baking powder and salt; work in shortening, using two knives in cutting motion until mixture resembles coarse meal. Add gradually sufficient milk to give consistency of soft dough. Toss dough on floured board and divide into two parts. Pat into rounds and place on greased layer cake tins. Bake 15 minutes at 450 degrees F. until golden brown. Split and spread with butter. Fill with sweetened berries between layers; ornament top with whipped cream and plenty of whole berries. To make individual shortcakes, roll dough to 1 inch thick, and cut in rounds slightly larger than baking powder biscuits.

Strawberry Surprise Cake—½ cup butter, 1 cup sugar, 2 eggs, 1½ cups pastry flour, 2½ teaspoons baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt, ½ cup milk, ¼ teaspoon orange extract, ¼ teaspoon vanilla. Strawberry ice cream, whipped cream, whole berries. Combine as usual butter cake mixture and bake in a greased and floured ring or border mold, moderate oven for 30 minutes. Turn out and cool. Place on serving platter, half fill center with ice cream, spread with whipped cream and garnish with whole berries. (Same cake mixture can be used for any cake foundation shortcake, and this center filled with sweetened berries or a fruit whip of any kind.)

Quick Berry Cake—(to be cooked on electric table stove.) Crushed sweetened berries, shortcake dough, hard sauce. Grease the deepest pan thoroughly with butter and fill with an inch layer of the berries. Have dough ready and rolled 1-inch thick and shaped to fit the grill. Place on top of berries. Use shallow grill pan and invert over dough, like oven. Cook on high heat 5 minutes, then reduce to low heat and bake 10 minutes longer, without removing cover. Use hard sauce into which mashed berries and a few drops of vanilla have been added.

Steamed Berry Shortcake—½ cup butter, 1 cup sugar, 2½ cups flour, 3½ teaspoons baking powder, ½ cup milk, 4 egg whites, mashed and sweetened berries—black and raspberries, currants, huckleberries, etc. Cream butter, add sugar and sift flour and baking powder. Add milk, cut and fold in stiffly whipped whites. Fill into greased custard or other molds and steam 40 minutes. Serve with crushed fruits.

Secrets of London's Most Notorious Night Club

eight. Three of the men turned out to be "good scouts." They ordered plenty of champagne, bought the girls chocolates and cigarettes. But the fourth man was a supercilious kind of individual. He was very good looking, but his good looks were rather the gigolo type. He had as his partner a girl on our staff called Patsy.

Patsy was a really good sort. True, she knew the ropes thoroughly, having been a dance instructress at several very "hard-boiled" clubs like Tito's before coming to us. She was a brunette of about 30 years of age. On more than one occasion, however, I have known her to put some over-festive youth from Oxford or Cambridge University, who had spent all his money, into a taxi, pay the driver, and send the boy home or to a hotel.

When the party finished that morning the three other girls found themselves well paid by their partners. Patsy was told:

"I say, my dear, I'm awfully sorry, but I've hardly a bean on me. I can't give you anything tonight, but if you will leave it over I'll give you a good tip next time I come down."

Patsy wondered why the man didn't borrow something from one of his friends, and she had taken an instinctive dislike to him, the only sort of dislike women ever take. However, she told him:

"That's all right. I'll see you next time you come down."

The next time was about a week later. The good looking man came down with his wife. Patsy was discreet. Most professional dancing partners are. So she waited for the man to come over to speak to her at a convenient moment. But he never came near her that evening.

Then, a fortnight later, he came down again, also with his wife. But the "wife," on this occasion was a different one. Once more he never showed a sign that he recognized Patsy's existence, and he left without having spoken to her.

Talk of "hell having no fury like a woman scorned." It wasn't that Patsy expected the man to dance with her or show her any attention. But the fact that he ignored her entirely after having made her that promise enraged her, and made her determined to pay him out in some way.

When a woman sets out for revenge she finds lots of ways and means. The natural cunning of "the weaker sex," more than compensates for what they lack in ability to fight physically. So Patsy did some "detective" work, and she found out some things about the good looking man. She found out enough to give information to one of the two "wives," and to discover that actually both of the women had, as they thought, been married to this man. And he had already one wife, as it turned out, in Manchester.

The result of that man's ignoring of a debt and his treatment of Patsy was that he was put into the dock at the Hampshire Assizes, charged with double bigamy, and he received a sentence of twelve months' imprisonment with hard labor.

Lava Love—by Inez Castello

did you first know that you loved me?"

"I can't say," she breathed back. "I'm not so sure now, Carlos, that I did not love you in London. I must have only I did not know it. I first felt doubts about myself on the night you saved me from Manoel in Saranoa and brought me back here. I felt somehow that—that my right place was here."

"And so it was and shall be!" he declared, kissing her again passionately for a while.

"When you gave me back my woman's clothes too, Carlos," she whispered presently, "I felt a change come over me. And when Conchita came—well, then I knew beyond all question."

"But—you never let me know. You gave no sign at all?"

"Because you seemed suddenly to go cold and not to need me," she explained. "And you were so much with Conchita, so interested in her."

"Partly to try and rouse some jealousy in you, but you never showed any. And so, in sheer despair, I was for sending you home by the earliest possible boat. But now—"

"I never want to leave you again, Carlos, darling!" she whispered, lovelier in her tender and joyous surrender than ever he had seen her before.

So he crushed her to him once more, feasting his lips on her face and mouth and neck and smooth, bare shoulders, as she lay half-swooning in his arms for very happiness, his hands holding her to him and fondling her, hers responding as they caressed his face and neck and hair, till presently, with a sigh of regret and a little tinkling laugh, Adora suddenly freed herself from him and shrank back into the shadows.

"See, Carlos darling, how brazen I have been!" she whispered, her dimpled cheeks all blushes, her eyes dancing one minute and shy the next, as she stood there, a white filmy shape in the shadows.

"Coming in here to you in the state I am!" she breathed. "But I did have an excuse. The earthquake. Only now—supposing the others caught us like this! Whatever would they think and say?"

"Who cares?" He snatched her up in his arms as if to carry her, golden head resting on his broad shoulder, bare little feet dangling whitely on the other side of him.

"Who cares for anything but that we love each other, that you are mine and I am yours," he murmured, hoarsely. "I worship you, adorable beauty. And on the morrow, the priest shall make you and me man and wife. Till then the hours will go all too slowly for me—"

"And for me, too."

With his lips to hers he carried her slowly and silently across the passage to her own room, into which he took her, laying her gently back on her bed, kneeling beside her for one exquisite moment, kissing her before he rose to go.

"Tomorrow you will be all mine, Adora mia!" he whispered.

She nodded, her little face white with spent emotions, her body warm and aglow, trembling.

"I will be all yours, Carlos."

A few moments later she was alone, aware that all happiness was now hers, almost unbelievably amazed that it should be so, that it was not only a dream. But to the truth of it her whole body was witness, her lips on which his kisses had burned, even to her little bare feet, still tingling with the kisses he had left upon them before he went.

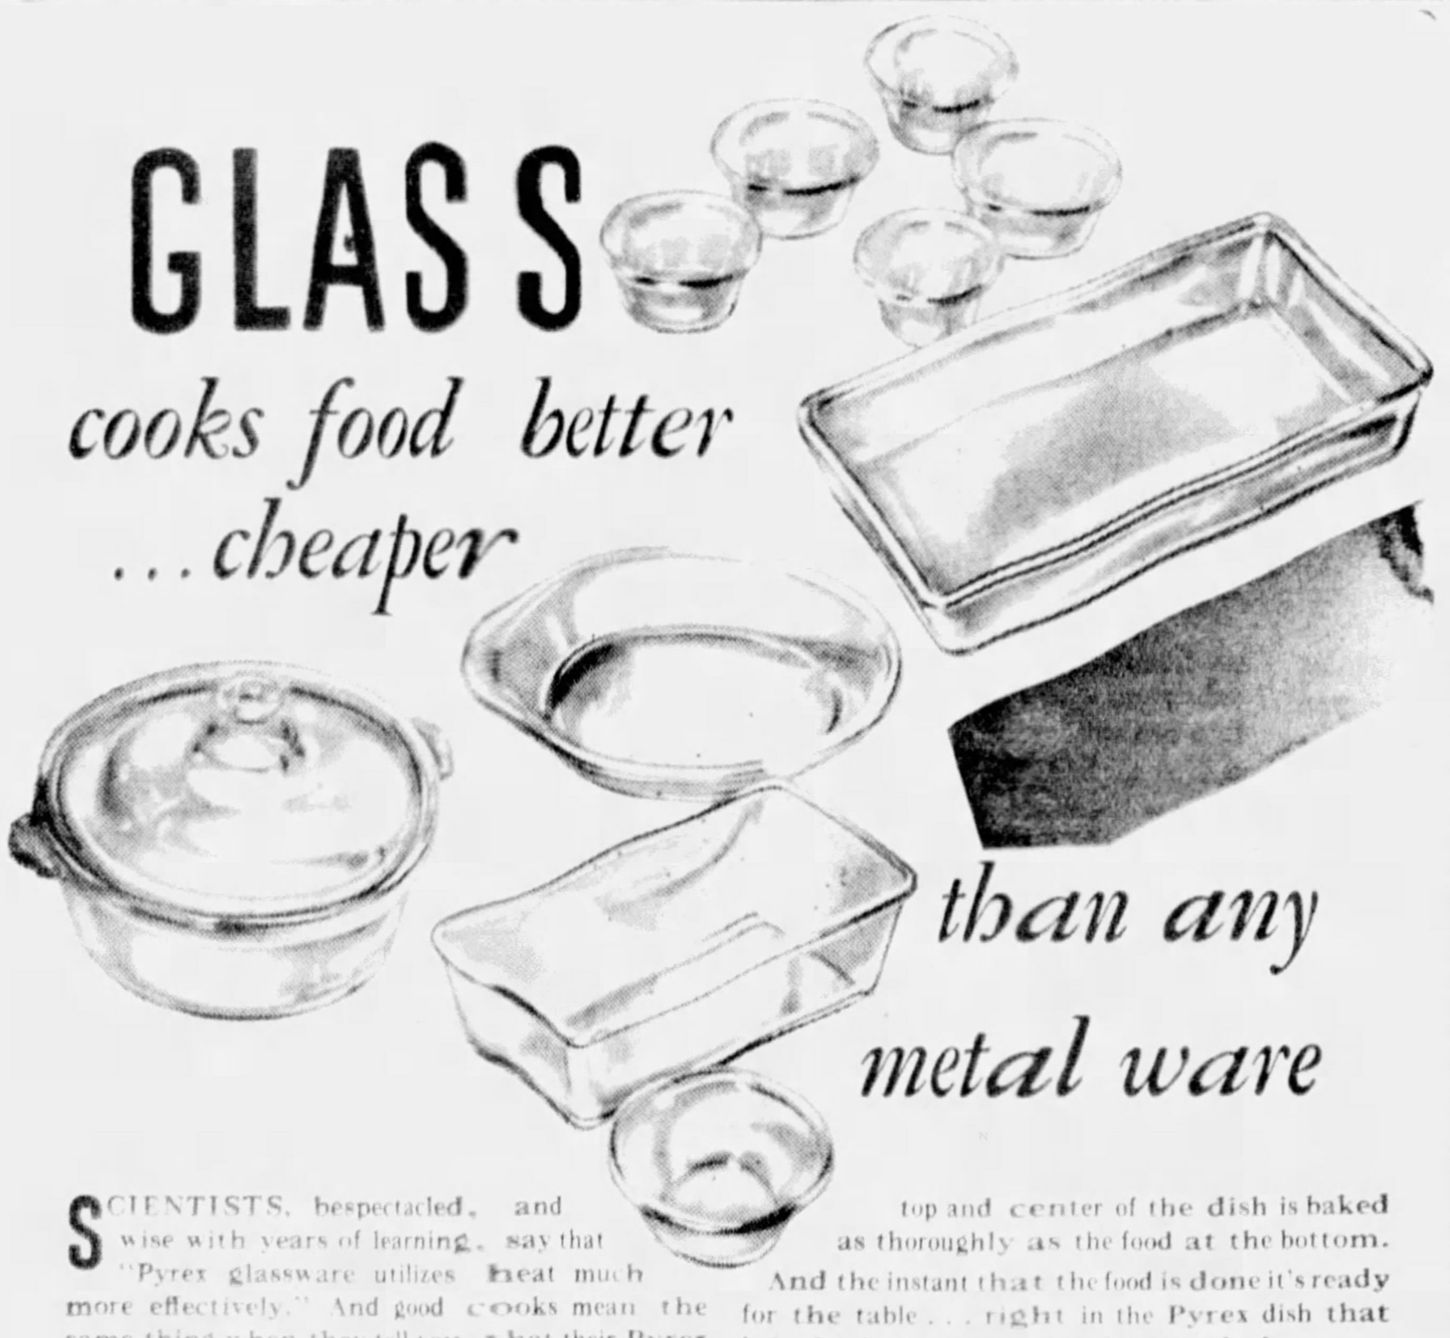
GLASS cooks food better . . . cheaper than any metal ware



SCIENTISTS, bespectacled, and wise with years of learning, say that "Pyrex glassware utilizes heat much more effectively." And good cooks mean the same thing when they tell you that their Pyrex oven dishes "bake tastier foods than metal ware, and actually use less gas."

There's no guesswork in this verdict . . . but the unanimous opinion of all the thrifty wives and clever cooks who own the 60 million pieces of Pyrex glassware at work throughout the land today!

The glass in Pyrex ovenware stores up, in itself, more heat than any metal can. Then . . . steadily . . . perfectly . . . evenly . . . the Pyrex dish gives out this heat until the food at sides, top and center of the dish is baked as thoroughly as the food at the bottom. And the instant that the food is done it's ready for the table . . . right in the Pyrex dish that baked it! One dish to wash instead of two . . . and that one so quickly, easily cleaned that dishpan time drops half its horrors.

Custard cups start at 10¢; many pieces cost only 25¢ and 50¢ . . . at hardware shops and department stores. Write for our FREE BOOK of 30 menus baked in 20, 30 or 45 minutes, and an illustrated price list. Please address Corning Glass Works, Dept. 1510, Corning, New York.

Tasty Summer Recipes

By Mary Lee Swann,
The Well-Known Writer and Lecturer on Cooking.

Mayonnaise Dressing.

TO 2 raw egg yolks add a few grains pepper, ⅛ teaspoon mustard, ½ teaspoon salt, and 3 tablespoons lemon juice or vinegar. Beat well. Add 2 cups salad oil very slowly, beating constantly until thick and creamy.

Sour Cream Dressing (Very Good and Easily Made).

MIX 1 teaspoon sugar, 1 teaspoon salt and a few grains pepper. Add 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 2 tablespoons mild vinegar. Add 1 cup of thick sour cream and beat well. Serve very cold. This is especially good with vegetable salads.

Thousand Island Dressing.

TO 1 cup of thick mayonnaise add ¼ cup chili sauce, 1 tablespoon chopped chives, 3 tablespoons catsup, 1 teaspoon tarragon vinegar, 1 tablespoon finely chopped green pepper, 3 tablespoons chopped red pepper and 1 teaspoon paprika. Serve immediately.

Vegetable Salad.

DRESS cold kidney beans, lima beans, peas and diced potatoes, separately, with French dressing seasoned with a few drops onion juice. Chill in ice box. Arrange in separate mounds on bed of crisp lettuce leaves. Garnish with sliced tomatoes or radishes.

Ginger Ale Salad.

DISSOLVE 3 packages quick lemon gelatin in 1½ cups boiling water. Add 1 large can fruit salad (cut in small pieces), 1 small can shredded pineapple, a pinch of salt, ½ cup chopped pecan meats, 2 or 3 tablespoons finely chopped preserved ginger and 2 bottles ginger ale. Turn into small molds and chill. Turn out on heart lettuce and serve with whipped cream mayonnaise.

Peanut Butter and Fruit Sandwiches.

PASS ¼ cup figs and ¼ cup raisins through food chopper. Add ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons corn syrup and ½ cup peanut butter. Beat until smooth and creamy and use as sandwich filling.

Cabbage and Egg Salad.

PICK over and thoroughly wash ½ head of hard white cabbage. Shred very fine. Press 6 hard cooked eggs through fruit press or ricer. Mix with the cabbage. Moisten with mayonnaise or cooked salad dressing. Turn into a salad dish and serve very cold with a garnish of sliced or stuffed hard cooked eggs.

Baking Powder Biscuit.

MIX and sift 2 cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Work in 3 tablespoons shortening with tips of fingers or two forks. Add ⅞ cup milk or thin cream and mix lightly. Turn out on lightly floured board, pat and roll about ½ inch thick. Shape with a biscuit cutter. Bake in a hot oven, or at about 450 degrees, for 12 or 15 minutes.

Cauliflower and Beet Salad.

POUR well seasoned cooked dressing over cold boiled cauliflower and garnish with pickled beets, cut in fancy shapes, and crisp watercress.

Beet and Potato Salad.

MIX 1½ cups diced or sliced cold potatoes with ½ cup thinly sliced cold beets. Arrange on crisp lettuce. Serve with French dressing to which is added 1 tablespoon finely chopped green pepper and 1 sliced hard cooked egg. Russian dressing may be used if a richer salad is desired.

Frozen Fruit and Cheese Salad.

DRAIN 1 can shredded pineapple, add 2 tablespoons powdered sugar, 1 dozen chopped maraschino cherries and 6 or 8 chopped marshmallows. Beat ¼ pound cream cheese until smooth and creamy and gradually add 1 cup well seasoned mayonnaise. Combine with the fruit mixture. Turn into tray of mechanical ice box and freeze or pack lightly into mold, cover closely and pack in ice and salt for several hours. Serve on heart lettuce leaves with mayonnaise, French or whipped cream dressing.

Dainty, Fresh
COLOR
Makes Lingerie
Like New Again

UNDERTHINGS, scanties, slips, dainty intimate things that have lost brightness and color, are quickly restored to delightfully fresh and dainty colors by the use of DYTINT. Dytint is amazingly easy to use and is so made that it tints in uniformly even tone and keeps its clear, fresh beauty through several washings.

DYTINT

The same expert chemist who perfected the world famous [illegible] Sunset Soap Dyes created Dytint. And it really does impart a new look to faded and washed-out garments. Dytint is guaranteed by the makers of Sunset to be the equal or superior of any tint on the market. It costs less to make a tint so we give you the benefit. The big box sells for only 10c. Dytint in the yellow box tints cotton, linen, silk and most artificial silks. Dytint in the green box tints silk and leaves cotton lace white.

"IT'S THRIFTY AND WISE—TO USE SUNSET SOAP DYES"

For your garments of [illegible] which require fast dyeing depend on Sunset Soap Dyes. Sunset is the all purpose fast dye for all fabrics. Dyes silk, wool, cotton, linen and mixed goods the same depth and shade of color in the same dye bath. Seams and button holes all dyed alike. All 22 colors come in compact, tin foil wrapped cakes, 15c each. No soiled hands or spotted utensils. Remember—use Sunset for fast dyeing, Dytint for tinting. For removing color before re-dyeing use Dytint Color Remover, 15c. If your dealer does not carry a full line of these products, do not accept a substitute because he says that "it is just as good." Write to us for full information and list of colors. And ask for your copy of "Color News," the little folder which tells you how to obtain special shades by combining standard Sunset colors.

FOR DIRTY DIRT

Where have all the old maids gone?

SHE was a familiar figure of the Nineties. And a little pathetic. By her twenty-fifth birthday, neighbors spoke of her as being "on the shelf."

How different today! Life has just begun for the modern girl of twenty-five. She is an important personage in both the business and the social worlds. She battles her ancient enemy, Old Father Time, with subtle new weapons.

Health brings clear eyes, a lovely skin, a radiant personality. The modern girl has learned that one of the first rules of health is regular elimination of body-wastes. Otherwise, constipation develops. Poisons spread through the system. Skins turn sallow. Wrinkles and pimples appear. Beauty quickly fades.

Yet, today, constipation can be overcome so easily, so pleasantly. By eating a delicious ready-to-eat cereal: Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Two tablespoonfuls daily are guaranteed to prevent and relieve both temporary and recurring constipation. In severe cases, use with each meal.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides the roughage that is needed to sweep the system clean of all clogging body-wastes. How much wiser it is to protect youth this natural way than to take pills and drugs which may cause harmful habits!

Try ALL-BRAN with milk or cream, fruits or honey added. Use it in cooking too. It is not fattening. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN also brings iron to build up the blood, and put color in cheeks and lips.

Ask for the original ALL-BRAN—in the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

VACATION CLOTHES

for BLONDE and BRUNETTE!

Salespeople in leading stores help me plan two wardrobes and add: "Keep fine things fresh and dainty with Ivory Soap... it's safest for colors and fabrics"

FROM salespeople in leading shops, I've gathered some very practical suggestions for vacation clothes. "Plan wisely, spend carefully," say salespeople—"give your clothes the proper care—and you'll have a costume for every occasion and a wardrobe that stays new-looking all summer."

Here are a few smart details: Buy an evening dress that has a jacket—you won't need a separate evening coat.

Get a white wool coat—not too tailored—for morning, afternoon and in the evening when it's cool. It's washable. "But be sure to use lukewarm Ivory suds," said the saleswoman who showed me these coats, "Ivory is pure and safer for wool."

Pastel colors will be much worn for "spectator sports"—which means for all daytime occasions except for swimming or playing golf or tennis.

"But," warn salespeople in the nicest shops, "do wash pastel colors safely. If they fade the least bit, they look washed out. Ivory Soap in one of its various forms is safer for delicate colors . . ."

Do let me urge you to wash your silks and woolens with Ivory. If you could talk to as many salespeople in leading stores all over the country as I have, I feel sure you'd never use anything but Ivory on your dainty summer clothes.

HOPE ANDREWS

As I visit the leading stores all over the country I find that Ivory is recommended by salespeople for fine things oftener than all other soaps together.

BLONDE'S WARDROBE

Basic colors—blue and white. Reds and grays can be added.

For practically all occasions: White wool coat—not too tailored.

Sports: Two tennis dresses—white, sleeveless, tailored. One pique, one crepe de chine. Beige lisle hose, white beret, navy cardigan. White flannel skirt with white polo shirt or light blue sweater.

Spectator sports: Pink linen suit. Light blue crepe de chine dress. For more formal daytime occasions, a washable white eyelet embroidery dress with turquoise necklace, purse and handkerchief. White jersey turban and white shoes.

Beach: Bathing suit—blue and white top, blue trunks. Pajamas of shantung—navy blue trousers, red, gray and blue printed coat.

Evening: White satin gown for formal wear. Tea rose flat crepe dress with short jacket. Rose-colored slippers and rhinestone jewelry to be worn with both evening dresses.

Salespeople give you many reasons why they recommend Ivory. "Safer for colors," they say. "We have discovered by tests here in the store that Ivory is gentler."

BRUNETTE'S WARDROBE

Basic colors—brown and white. Add yellow, green and orange.

For practically all occasions: White wool coat. Not too tailored for evening.

Active sports: Brown-and-white silk striped shirting sport dress (golf). White shantung sport dress (short sleeves. Sleeveless only if for tennis). Brown-and-white sport shoes, beige lisle hose, white beret, yellow flannel cardigan. White flannel skirt with green jersey sweater or white polo shirt. Panama hat.

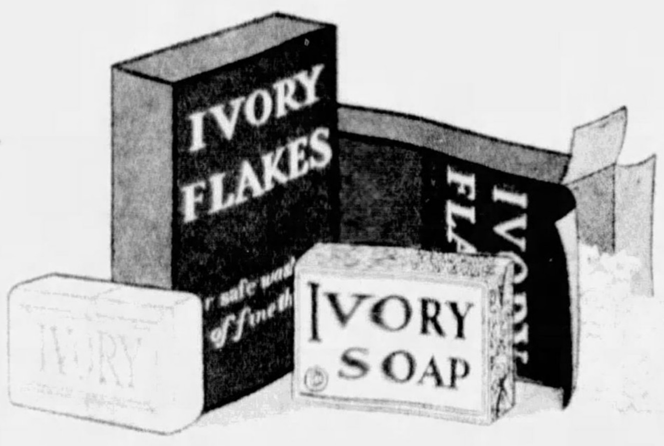
Spectator sports: Plaid chiffon dress with short sleeves. Yellow crepe de chine dress. White linen dress with bright short coat and striped or plaid scarf. Hat and shoes of white linen.

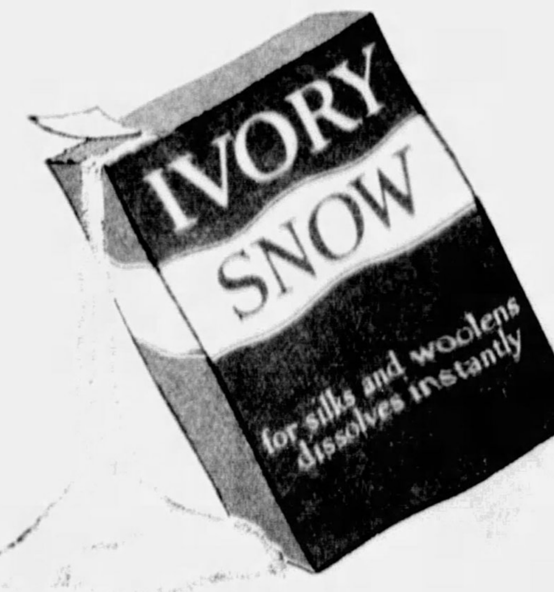
Beach: Bathing suit—yellow top, brown trunks. Beach pajamas of gay printed linen in yellows, browns, greens, oranges.

Evening: Turquoise flat crepe dress with short jacket. White lace evening dress, with turquoise slippers and turquoise jewelry.

No wardrobe is complete without beach pajamas. These should be gay and harmonize with the bathing suit. Printed linens are good, and wash perfectly in Ivory suds.

99 44/100% pure –kind to everything it touches





Surely you've tried the new

IVORY SNOW?

These tiny, fine, thin soap pearls of pure Ivory dissolve instantly in lukewarm water!

The blonde's blue flannel cardigan and the brunette's striped shirting frock should be washed in lukewarm Ivory suds, said the salesgirl who showed me these costumes.

Pastel pink linen and yellow crepe de chine. "Delicate colors are safe in gentle Ivory suds," say salespeople in the nicest shops.

Evening gowns are of flat crepe; plain, flowered or plaid chiffon; lace, and eyelet embroidery. Most evening gowns have matching jackets with them.

The Foot That Rocks The Cradle Knows the Luxury of Accurate Fitting in ENNA JETTICK Shoes

. . . Young mothers are such busy persons on their feet much of the day and night, looking after baby with tender solicitude. Even when young mothers have that "expensive" foot, they never tire and are always smartly shod in perfect fitting Enna Jettick Shoes.

The range of 177 sizes and widths in Enna Jettick Shoes enables us to fit your foot with precision and accuracy. Never a need for a "forced fitting" in Enna Jettick Shoes.

AAAAA to EEE
Sizes 1 to 12

The smart appearance of your feet depends entirely on how accurately they are fitted. Look for the name Enna Jettick. Insist on having the proper fit.

The prices of Enna Jettick Shoes are a decided economy. $5 and $6 (never more, except in Canada). The world's highest priced shoes give no better fitting.
